Thousands Cancel Flights

Times News Services

LONDON — Thousands of passengers cancelled reservations and airlines cut flights by 40 per cent today because of an air traffic control assistants strike. British airline official said they may even have "seats to spare."

The four-day strike, which had been expected to strand up to one million passengers, failed to create the chaos that had been expected over the long August bank holiday weekend.

"We expected a lot more people", a British Airways spokesman at Heathrow Airport said.

"All our flights are leaving on time.

"Provided things don't alter we shall be able to cope and there might even be seats to spare."

Civil aviation authorities said airlines had cut flights back 40 per cent until Tuesday, here using wider bodied planes, and were consolidating flights to get passengers out.

"Things seem to be pretty good," a Pan Am spokesman said. "We've done a bit toward helping the situation by consolidating two New York flights tonight. It hasn't been as bad as we feared it might be."

One airline executive had predicted the weekend strike would trigger the "most chaotic holiday weekend in the history of flight."

Officials at Heathrow and Gatwick, London's two major airports, said air traffic was more chaotic during the past 10 days while the assistants were staging a work slowdown which delayed almost every flight leaving Britain.

The 72 airlines using Heathrow airport announced cancellation of 160 departing flights out of the day's 480, including six long-haul services to the United States, Canada, the Middle and Far East.

British Airways, Heathrow's biggest carrier bore the brunt of cancellations, with 85 flights in an out of London axed.

A Heathrow spokesman said an airlines' hot line for flight information was working well. Few passengers showed up for flights that had been cancelled, and even more seemed to be avoiding the airports altogether.

"The indications are that a lot of people have stayed away and sought alternative means of travel," a British Airways spokesman said.

"People are taking it very well," an airport official said.

Another said Heathrow looked like a "ghost town."

In Toronto, spokesmen for Air Canada and CP Air said flights to Britain will operate during the strike but delays are expected.

John Cavill, public relations officer with Air Canada, said

CAR WORKERS REFUSE STRIKE

BIRMINGHAM, England (Reuter) — About 1,500 angry British car workers chanting "We want to work" today forced union chiefs to abandon a planned wage strike due to start tonight.

The men left the assembly line at British Leyland's giant Longbridge auto plant here and marched through the factory in an angry impromptu demonstration — scenes almost unheard of in Britain.

They marched to the office of Derek Robinson, the senior shop-floor union official, telling union stewards who tried to pacify them: "Get stuffed."

Robinson decided to cancel orders to start the strike of 20,000 men at the plant, but insisted there was a two-to-one majority in favor of strike action.

The strike was aimed at forcing the state-owned British Leyland to talk about a 47-per-cent wage claim.

Since the firm was saved from collapse with a $4.7-billion government cash injection in April, 1975, there have been 700 disputes and 10 major strikes.

The unexpected workers' revolt was heady news for the embattled Labor government.

MORE SPENT OVERSEAS

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canadians spent $1.246 billion more abroad than visitors spent vacationing here in the first half of 1977, preliminary estimates from Statistics Canada showed Thursday.

Canada earned $705 million from international travel compared to $668 million in the first half of 1976. Canadians spent $1.951 billion abroad, up from $1.641 billion in the same period last year. Americans vacationing in Canada spent $517 million while visitors from other countries spent $188 million.

Gas, Fuel Oil Price Rises On Tuesday

The price of gasoline will rise at least 3.5 cents a gallon and heating oil 3.1 cents effective Tuesday, major B.C. oil companies said today.

The increases result from a $1 a barrel hike in the price of crude oil two months ago.

The companies said these increases are at the wholesale level and individual retailers may decide to raise prices by more than the specified amounts.

In addition, some companies may increase their wholesale prices by more than the minimum amount but it would only be by a fraction of a cent.

Exact amounts will not be announced until the weekend for competitive reasons.

"At the wholesale level it is mainly a matter of having the increase in crude oil reflected in the price for gasoline and heating oil," a company spokesman said.

"All price increases by the various companies will be similar because of the identical cost increases."

The increases are part of a pattern established by Ottawa to increase crude oil prices every six months by $1 per barrel until the Canadian price matches the world market level.

This means the crude price will rise again Jan. 1 and the wholesale and retail price of gasoline will rise by at least another 3.5 cents on March 1.

Ottawa has said it will continue these increases at least until 1979.

By October, 1978, the price of gasoline will have risen at least 10.5 cents per gallon because of this policy.

Increases of at least 3.5 cents will come Tuesday and on March 1 and again on Sept. 1, 1978.

"At some point the oil companies may decide to increase the wholesale price by more than 3.5 cents as this is a minimum amount," an oil company spokesman sid.

"And of course retailers can charge as much as they want."

Mortgage Rip-Off 'Legal'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver RCMP have uncovered two real estate schemes through which homeowners and businessmen have been duped out of more than $500,000 in the past year. And, although the number of people involved in the schemes is increasing, most aspects of the cases appear strictly legal.

Private homeowners have seen their retirement investments wiped out, while in one case a British Columbia company lost $240,000.

Segeant Ernie Brydon of the Vancouver RCMP's commercial fraud section said Thursday that his department is investigating 14 cases in which private homeowners have lost as much as $55,000 each through what police call priority mortgage schemes.

A sergeant in the commercial fraud section of the Victoria RCMP detachment said the priority mortgage scheme has not been worked in the Victoria area as far as he knows: "We've received no complaints in that line."

In six of the cases charges of conspiracy with intent to defraud have been laid, although none have resulted in convictions yet. The B.C. Law Society, however, has suspended one lawyer and is reviewing the practices of two others in connection with alleged mortgage irregularities.

The commercial fraud section is also investigating another six cases of what it calls fraudulent mortgage finders' fees in which some prominent Vancouver businessmen and professional athletes have lost heavily.

One such case involves a firm that was duped out of $240,000, but the company refuses to press charges in the hope of recovering some of its money through civil action. It also fears loss of investor confidence on the stock market if the case became public.

Brydon said his department decided to expose the schemes publicly because the volume of the files has increased dramatically in the past few months and police "feel there is criminality there, but we haven't been able to prove intent (to defraud) yet."

LANDFILL FOR HOLE

NAKUSP (CP) — A dose of landfill should remedy this village's mystery hole problem, acting mayor Mike George said Wednesday.

George was reporting on the preliminary findings of two provincial environment department experts, dispatched to this upper Arrow Lake community after a large hole suddenly appeared just one block from the main business district.

The hole started forming last Friday, a seemingly bottomless pit of water that grew to about 80 feet long by 60 feet wide.

But acting clerk Brian Bielefeld estimated that up to $40,000 worth of fill will be needed and the village has only "two or three thousand bucks" in the bank.

"And we can't borrow anything because we've already stretched our borrowing power to the limit on other projects," he added.

CITY TO CONTROL STREET TIN RATTLERS

Tin rattlers and others soliciting for donations for various groups on Victoria's streets will be subject to controls under a "street collections" bylaw introduced by Victoria city council on Thursday.

The preamble to the bylaw says the measures are necessary because "several persons have been abusing the privilege of collecting on the city's streets, thereby creating a nuisance."

When the bylaw is given final approval in two weeks, no person will be allowed to conduct street soliciting unless he or she is a member of an organization which has been granted a permit by city hall.

Collectors will also have to display "prominently" a tag bearing the name of their organization in legible letters at least one centimetre high.

Those providing misleading information on the application form for a permit, or contravening the bylaw in some other way, are liable to a $500 fine or 30 days in jail.

Oil Exploration Sales Hit All-Time High

Sales of oil and gas exploration rights in B.C. to date this year have hit an all-time high of $92 million, Mines Minister Jim Chabot said today.

The amount is more than the total sales of the previous three years.

"This is fantastic news and is a clear indication of the return of confidence in our province on the part of the petroleum industry," said Chabot.

The province sells oil and gas exploration rights by annual lease sales. The fourth sale on 199 parcels of oil and gas rights has just been completed bringing in a total of $54.5 million.

The fifth and final sale for 1977 will be held in November.

In 1974, sales realized a total of $23 million: a 1975 total of $12.7 million and 1976 sales reached the $43.2 million mark, for a total of $78.9 million.

Chabot said proceeds from the latest sale exceed the expectations of his department.

"We thought that we would be doing very well if we broke a previous record set earlier this year."

He said proceeds of the sales go directly into the provincial treasury, along with $298,669.60 received as statutory fees and rents from the petroleum industry.

Chabot stressed the sales were only for exploration rights and that further benefits will accrue to the province from any major discoveries.

Sincere Job Effort—Bennett

Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday that if cabinet approves Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm's proposal to use welfare recipeints in anti-vandal patrols, "it will be a sincere effort to provide job opportunities."

Bennett made the statement in reply to questions by Rosemary Brown (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard), who asked for assurance the program wouldn't just be a way for the government to get cheap labor.

"I want your assurance that it will be legitimate employment . . . that this isn't going to force old age pensioners to work for their pensions," said Brown.

Bennett replied that he hadn't yet heard the details of the proposed program but that he would not approve any plans to get cheap labor for the government.

Vander Zalm announced Wednesday his plans to propose a program — Operation Vandal Stop — that would have male welfare recipients working as janitors and security guards in B.C. schools.

Vander Zalm said the program needs the support of Education Minister Pat McGeer and cabinet before it can go ahead.

Earth Thrown At Aussie PM

SYDNEY, Australia (CP) — Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser was hit in the face with clumps of earth today during a demonstration protesting against his government's decision to resume uranium exports.

Fraser was attacked when he arrived at the University of New South Wales to address a businessmen's dinner.

Several thousand demonstrators had gathered at the entrance to the building where the dinner was to be held.

The attack took place as Fraser walked through a crowd of demonstrators held back by police barricades. Several clods of earth were thrown at him, striking him in the face.

Fraser was not hurt, police said.

Opponents of the government's decision to open Australia's vast uranium reserves for export called for a campaign of protest marches, strikes and legal action.

More than 1,000 protesters demonstrated outside Parliament House in Canberra Thursday night, and demonstrations were being organized today in the major cities.

The Movement Against Uranium Mining announced it will start legal action against mining companies and will challenge provisions in the Australian Atomic Energy Act.

In the uranium-rich Northern Territory, the Trades and Labor Council said no mining will take place until labor unions are assured the work poses no danger to minners.

Dock workers' and seamen's unions called for stop-work meetings to protest the new government policy.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices showed some widespread declines again today under the influence of interest-rate worries and talk of a business slowdown. The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 4.67 at 849.45, after an 7.75-point drop Thursday to its lowest level since the end of 1975.

Life Span of Cancer Victims Not Extended

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Doctors aren't able to extend the lives of cancer patients much more, on average, than they were 25 years ago, a new federal study discloses.

This is true in spite of billions of dollars that have been spent in the interim on research and new methods of cancer treatment.

In the years 1967-73 — the latest years surveyed — just 41 per cent of all white cancer patients survived five years from the time it was discovered they had the disease, the study shows. This over-all white rate compares with 40 per cent in 1960-66 and 39 per cent in 1950-59.

These figures and a host of others, some even grimmer, some brighter, are disclosed in the National Cancer Institute's latest report on "Cancer Patient Survival," based on detailed study of cancer patients in four states.

"The over-all survival rate means almost nothing for the individual patient," Ardyce J. Asire, one of the editors of the massive study made every five years, cautioned. The latest five-year survivals range from only one per cent of all patients among whites and three per cent among blacks with cancer of the pancreas to 77 per cent among whites, though only 47 per cent among blacks, with womb cancer.

The survival rate for "all cancers" is also lower than it would be because of a huge recent increase — an epidemic, say authorities — of just one kind of cancer with a poor general outlook. This is lung cancer, the cigarette smokers' disease, for which over-all five-year survival is six per cent among blacks, nine per cent among whites.

Also, authorities said, some persons with any kind of cancer, especially those caught in an early or localized stage of the disease, may survive far longer than any "average."

The latest survival rate was called "provisional" — in effect, an estimate — by cancer institute statisticians, since a complete five-year follow-up is not yet possible for all persons whose cancers were diagnosed in 1967-73.

The statisticians pointed out, too, that their figures are based on survival in two states, California and Connecticut, with state tumor registries that keep good track of cancer treatment.

Dr. Arthur Upton, new director of the cancer institute, called the over-all trend "heartening" despite "room for improvements." He pointed to the improved results in bladder and prostate cancer among major cancers and in the leukemias (or blood cancers) and Hodgkins disease among less common cancers.

CIA Quebec Plot 'Not Serious'

QUEBEC (CP) — An investigation by Quebec provincial police has shown that reports of a plot involving United States agents against the Quebec government were "without serious foundation," Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard said today.

Bedard said the government closed its dossier on the affair March 23 after a thorough police investigation.

The daily newspaper Le Soleil, quoting informed sources, says a group including two agents of the Central Intelligence Agency met last winter to discuss plans to "destabilize" the government following the Parti Quebecois election victory.

Premier Rene Levesque said today he had tried in vain to convince Le Soleil journalists that the affair was not serious.

"I took it upon myself Thursday to tell them it didn't have a serious air about it," Levesque said.

He said he met two Le Soleil reporters for about 15 minutes to try to convince them they should not give much importance to reports of a plot.

Meanwhile, Gerard D. Levesque, leader of the Liberal opposition, angrily accused the government of "launching a balloon" with the intent of "manipulating the press."

The affair is reminiscent of the so-called Brink's Affair of 1970, he said in an interview.

On that occasion, Montreal financial institutions sent armored trucks out of the province on the eve of the provincial election, giving rise to news reports that investors were evacuating their savings in fear of a possible Parti Quebecois victory. The Liberals won the election.

In its copyright story, Le Soleil says a group established by an employee of an unnamed multinational corporation met in Ottawa in early December and again in Toronto Jan. 4 to discuss ways of discrediting government leaders, provoking economic chaos and fighting the PQ's proposed independence referendum.

Anti-Vandal Patrol Plan 'Sincere Work Effort'

McGeer, just back from a trip to Norway where he attended a scientific conference, today refused to endorse or reject Vander Zalm's scheme.

McGeer said the question of hiring welfare people as suggested by the human resources minister is one that lies with local school boards.

"It's entirely up to the school boards," McGeer said, to try and tell trustees their jobs.

"It's strictly a board responsibility."

Human Rights director Kathleen Ruff, meanwhile is upset over Vander Zalm's statements.

By singling out men as the likely candidates for his scheme to fight vandalism in B.C. schools, the minister has made comments "clearly contrary to the principles of the Human Rights Code," Ruff said Thursday.

Ruff said she will contact the minister to point out that he has contravened the provincial human rights legislation and to explain what the code's requirements are.

She said Vander Zalm's statements could have the effect of deterring women from applying for government jobs, and reinforce the bias against hiring women which already exists in private industry.

In announcing his scheme to recruit welfare recipients as school janitors and vandalism fighters, Vander Zalm had said that because of possible problems in confronting vandals "it seems most likely only men will qualify for the jobs."

He qualified that by saying, however, that "bearing in mind human rights some women will want to join the program."

Ruff said if the minister had made the comments in the context of a private conversation there would have been no conflict, but he was speaking as a potential employer.

"You can react and say it is just a joke but we are dealing all the time with women who are turned down when they apply for jobs. It doesn't seem such a funny matter to them— or to me either, for that matter.

Fighter Pilot Vets Lacking

EDMONTON (CP) — Reunion of Canadian fighter pilots scheduled here for October may be cancelled if organizers do not receive enough confirmed registrations.

The Canadian Fighter Pilots Association, which is sponsoring the reunion Oct. 6, 7 and 8, has received only 50 confirmations to date.

Don Gildner, association spokesman, said a minimum of 200 confirmations are needed by Sept. 6 to guarantee the meeting will be financially feasible.

"If we don't get that number, we'll have to cancel it," said Gildner in an interview. The reunion is open to all Canadian fighter pilots who participated in the two world wars and the Korean War.

UNION TELLS CONTROLLERS TO WORK

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec air traffic controllers have been advised by their union to end the work-to-rule campaign that has slowed air traffic since the federal government legislated an end to their three-day strike earlier this month.

In a statement released Thursday, Jean-Luc Patenaude, director of the Quebec wing of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association (CATCA), said the union would not provide representation for any member who falsified a sick leave, refused overtime, tampered with equipment or acted contrary to operating manuals. CATCA's national executive had previously approved a similar resolution.

one flight to Halifax from London has been cancelled.

Passengers on the cancelled flight will be put on a flight to Montreal from London which will stop in Halifax.

Passengers on a cancelled flight to London from Halifax will fly by way of Gander, Nfld., on a flight originating in Montreal, Cavill said.

On Thursday, a flight to London from Toronto was delayed 4½ hours and a flight to Toronto from London was almost seven hours late.

Michael Dukelow, public relations manager for CP Air, said no delays were expected in the two charter flights leaving Toronto today.

He said there are delays expected in the next four days with 11 flights coming from London and landing at either Toronto, Montreal or Vancouver.

British Airways says its three flights to Toronto from England and three flights to England from Toronto will be delayed today.

The walkout is at present having minimal effect on charter flights since charters enter Britain at the less busy Gatwick airport.

Marianne Schaubeck, an agent with Four Seasons Travel that booked 32 Victorians on a Wardair charter to Gatwick Thursday, said the flight landed as scheduled with no delays.

She said she anticipated no problem with other charters or the return flights.

Heathrow has the greater volume and is going to have the greater problems, she said.

Mortgage Rip-Off 'Legal'

Until recently, the commercial fraud section believed that the mortgage priority cases were unrelated incidences, but recent evidence has led the section to conclude that in 12 of them "there was a common catalyst involved," Brydon said.

Corporal Ron Moore said in each of the priority mortgage cases the victim was an individual who owned a commercially-zoned property in which he had a large equity or clear title and advertised the property for sale.

One typical case involved an owner who purchased a property 10 years ago for $15,000 and advertised the duplex-zoned lot for $70,000.

Through licensed real estate agents, the owner was presented with an offer from a developer who was willing to pay the asking price, but with stipulations.

The developer offered to make a down payment of $15,000, asking the owner to carry a mortgage of $55,000 at 13 per cent, well above conventional mortgage rates. The mortgage would be repaid as development funds became available.

To the owner, the offer appeared perfect.

He would immediately realize $15,000, the sum he had paid 10 years ago; the remainder would be protected by the mortgage.

If the developer defaulted, he could foreclose, taking the property back and pocketing a $15,000 profit.

Assuming the mortgage ran to a 20-year term, the owner would nearly triple his profit, having received $151,488.

However, the catch was that the "developer," in order to raise development funds for the property, required the owner to sign a priority agreement — a document that would permit the seller's mortgage to be placed in second position at the land registry office when the developer raised a new mortgage to begin construction.

This placed the seller's claim on the property in second position if something went wrong. But the vendor still believed his investment was protected because, as construction was to proceed, the property would increase in value.

After the documents were signed by the owner, everything proceeded according to plan and agreement — for two months.

The developer raised a new $55,000 first mortgage, paid the vendor the $15,000 down payment, placed the vendor's mortgage in second position and made two monthly payments on both mortgages.

When the developer missed two payments, the vendor knew he was in trouble.

No construction had begun — in fact, the property now was rented to someone who had never heard of the developer's firm, which turned out to be a "paper tiger" with no assets of its own.

Within months, the company holding the new first mortgage foreclosed.

The original owner now found that his $70,000 price was grossly inflated and that the property in fact was worth only $60,000. And because he had agreed to take second position, he was left with a worthless claim by the time the dust settled on the foreclosure action.

What the vendor discovered was that even the $15,000 down payment had come out of the developer's new mortgage. The developer hadn't paid a nickle of his own money, yet he walked away with a cool $35,000, subtracting costs of the transaction and mortgage payments, all in the space of two months.

Under normal circumstances, the vendor would have had recourse in civil court, but what he further discovered was that the developer was judgment proof — everything he owned was safely out of reach in the names of a wife, children and relatives.

To sue was simply throwing good money after bad.

"There is criminality there, we know it," Brydon said, "but proving it is something else."

B.C. Tel Service Suffering

B.C. Telephone Co. service in three Vancouver Island centres continued below par today as union and company officials hassled over arrangements for an arbitration hearing.

The company is waiting for a response from the Telecommunications Workers Union on its suggestion that 350 employees at Nanaimo, Duncan and Port Alberni go back to work before a hearing date is set.

The company rejected the union's proposal that the arbitration proceedings begin today because management personnel maintaining services at the centres will be needed as witnesses.

The employees walked off the job Tuesday when their demand to have letters of reprimand removed from the files of three Nanaimo workers was rejected.

Meanwhile, management personnel are trying to keep telephone service as normal as possible. Commercial offices in Nanaimo and Duncan are open but B.C. Tel's office in Port Alberni is closed.

Forecast for North America to midday Saturday

A ridge of high pressure is steadily building over western B.C. It will produce sunny skies over most coastal areas today. Across the interior showers will linger today with isolated thundershowers developing over the eastern sectors. The sunny skies will extend into the interior Saturday but temperatures will remain on the cool side. Some precipitation will spread onto the northern coast late Saturday in advance of an approaching Pacific disturbancec.

U.K. Racialist Party Says Leftists Out to Smash It

LONDON (Reuter) — Bloody street battles have spurred the racialist, right-wing National Front party to claim that British leftists are trying to smash it physically to deny it political power.

"We are fast becoming Britain's third party after Labor and the Conservatives—and they are all afraid of us," said organizer Martin Webster.

"At the next general election we will demonstrate that as many as two million people are now ready to vote for a racialist and nationalist ticket."

Vicious street fighting in recent weeks, touched off by National Front marches through largely immigrant areas, have set ordinary Britons wondering as never before whether the National Front might be on the road to power, based on mass support.

"The tactics of the National Front are obviously copied on Hitler's principles," said Labor MP John Mendelson, "only the role of the chief scapegoat has changed."

He wrote in The Times newspaper: "Instead of the Jews, colored people have been made the target for hatred and vilification."

Recent Front electoral successes have roused fears among Britain's 1.7-million immigrant community, which is made up mainly of Asians with a minority of West Indians.

Front candidates in local elections in May polled 10 per cent of the votes in some areas of greater London, and across the country the Front has begun to receive about six per cent in parliamentary by-elections and local elections.

Joe Haines, press aide to former prime minister Harold Wilson, dismisses the Front's claim to the allegiance of about two million voters and predicts that the Front might win 400,000 of Britain's 25 million votes in a general election.

Britain's sluggish economy, and an underlying memory of the loss of an empire, is generally seen here as a help to the Front's fortunes.

"We have got youth on our side—young people who are growing up saying 'Where's my job? Where's my house? Where's my country?' " the Birmingham Post newspaper quotes a teen-age recruiter as saying.

"This is the only party which seems prepared to do something about the state of the country, the only party offering a way out," said recruiter Christopher Newey.

With 200,000 recent high school graduates unable to get jobs, young people are said to be disillusioned by social democracy.

But Daily Express writer Christopher Hitchens says the Front "is interested in exploiting the fears and fluxes of race hatred in order to gain power which it would never relinquish."

Small extreme left parties here—mainly of Trotskyite inclination—have uncharacteristically buried their theoretical hair-splitting to come together to deny the streets to National Front marchers under the slogan "no platform for racists."

"Both sides are now seeking a collapse of law and order so that they can control the resulting chaos," wrote Malcolm Stuart of The Daily Mail newspaper.

In the inner London district of Lewisham recently, a Front march of less than 1,000 persons bearing Union Jack flags degenerated into a fight with 4,000 leftist, Asian and West Indian youths.

Hundreds were injured and arrested and the rioting was repeated a few days later at a byelection campaign in the Birmingham Asian enclave of Ladywood.

At the Front's well-guarded headquarters in a middle class suburban street here, organizer Webster exploded in anger when it was suggested opponents likened the Front to the pre-Second World War German Nazis and Sir Oswald Mosley's British Union of Fascists— which used to march in Jewish areas.

"This is plain lies," he said. "We are a democratic movement and always have been.

Webster, a plump man in his middle 30s, is second in command to Front chairman John Tyndall, who once wrote an article entitled Why I am a Nazi.

Webster gave an interviewer a synopsis of the Front's policies:

"We are a racialist party. But we are not racists—we do not make value judgments about other races. We believe in global apartheid."

Jews: "We absolutely respect and admire Zionists, Jewish nationalists, and to these we say— go to Israel. But non-Zionist Jews who are prepared to give the undivided loyalty to Britain are welcome to join the National Front."

Capitalism: "International monopoly capitalism is trying to consolidate its hold over political institutions and bend governments to its will, and this we oppose."

Social democracy: "The traditional parties have lost their will to govern and their sense of national destiny. We know where we are going and the reds know—and that's what it's all about."

MENTAL ILLNESS STIGMA DEPLORED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rosalynn Carter, wife of United States president Jimmy Carter, said Thursday that negative public attitudes and the stigma attached to mental illness are holding back progress in the field.

Mrs. Carter, speaking before the World Congress on Mental Health as a "dedicated lay person," said misconceptions about mental health must be replaced with some reassuring truths.

Mrs. Carter, honorary chairman of the President's Commission on Mental Health, said public discussion on mental illness often is overshadowed by publicity of other illnesses.

Although about 350,000 Americans died of cancer last year, she said, about 20 million U.S. citizens now are in need of mental health care.

"It is not that mental illness is less prevalent than other diseases; it is that mental illness is simply not an acceptable condition people want to talk about or deal with," she said.

Mrs. Carter arrived here several hours earlier for a 22-hour visit, highlighted by her speech to the congress.

It is her first visit to Canada as first lady of the United States.

BCR Pays Off 2 Contractors

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Railway on Thursday announced the terms of settlement with two construction companies resulting from the Crown railway terminating contracts on the Dease Lake extension in northern B.C.

Jack Fraine, B.C. Rail board chairman, said a settlement was reached with Chinook Construction and Engineering Ltd. on July 29 and the settlement with Miller Cartage and Contracting Ltd. was made Aug. 24.

Fraine said in a news release that the railway has made a cash settlement of $1,657,215 to Chinook and is providing a freight credit to the company of up to $94,000 for the movement of its own equipment on the railway.

The railway agreed to pay Miller Cartage $1.2 million and to provide the same freight credit as extended to Chinook.

Fraine said the railway had retained the firm of Swan Wooster Engineering Co. Ltd. to provide an independent assessment of the additional costs to each contractor as a result of termination of the contracts.

"The consultant, in assessing the two contracts, recognized that, while they were not identical, there was a similarity in the additional costs involved in withdrawal from the contracts," said Fraine.

These included the moving of men and equipment to and from the sites, committed equipment costs, certain staff obligations and overhead costs.

The Chinook contract was for grading and culvert installation from Mile 286 to Mile 308 on the Dease Lake extension. The original value of the contract was in excess of $10 million.

The Miller contract was for grading and culvert installation from Mile 308 to Mile 335 on the Dease Lake extension. The original value of the contract was almost $5.5 million.

Both contracts were for work originally undertaken by M.E.L. Paving of Red Deer, Alta., which obtained a $2.5-million settlement out of court last December, after it sued for fraud and misrepresentaton over the amount of work on its contract.

Premier Bill Bennett ordered a halt to construction of the extension in April.

Following the decision of the board of directors to suspend work on the extension, Mac Norris, vice-president of the railway, began negotiations with each of the contractors privately to reach financial settlements.

In order not to jeopardize the position of any of the parties it was agreed that any public statements would be made only after the satisfactory conclusion of all negotiations.

Pesticide Stock Recalled by Dow

WASHINGTON (SP) — Dow Chemical Co. Thursday recalled all outstanding stocks of a controversial pesticide linked to sterility in chemical workers and cancer in animals.

In a highly unusual move, Dow said it was "playing it safe" by asking all of its distributors around the world to return stocks of the liquid pesticide dibromochloropropane, known as DBCP.

"Until the source of the problem is better defined, we urge that all Fumazone (the trade name for DBCP) be returned to Dow and further that you urge the return of any stock in the inventory of dealers or farmers," said a letter sent out from company headquarters in Midland, Mich.

At least 60 male chemical workers have been found to be sterile at a Dow plant in Magnolia, Ark., and at an Occidental Chemical plant in Lathrop, Calif., which uses Dow products. Scores of additional workers are now being tested in Midland, and at a Shell Chemical plant in Denver.

Although scientific studies by Shell and Dow reported in 1961 that excessive exposure to DBCP caused sterility in animals, there have never been any federal controls on its use.

The labor department, however, Thursday announced it is preparing emergency temporary standards for the pesticide. The department's occupational safety and health administration also issues voluntary production guidelines, urging that the amount of DBCP in the air around workers be limited to "the lowest possible concentration."

The possibility that vegetables grown in soil treated with DBCP might endanger health was also raised this year by a Canadian government study, which discovered DBCP residue on carrots and radishes tested.

It is not known if the amount of DBCP residue on the vegetables was large enough to create a hazard for humans.

Stop wondering what you'd do if you won $100,000.

And start cutting.

Municipal Status

After two previous attempts to bring municipal status to the western communities of Langford, Colwood, View Royal and Metchosin were defeated by the voters, advocates of "home rule" for the area are understandably reticent about getting too closely identified with amalgamation and municipal status.

The realistic will perceive that a decision is going to have to be made — or be made for them — sometime in the near future on the question. Either residents will freely choose municipal government for themselves, or municipal government is going to be imposed by the provincial government a few years from now.

The four capital regional board directors, who over the last two years have prepared a financial analysis of what would happen if the inevitable occurred and the western community became the municipality of "Langcolme," bent over backwards to stress the preliminary nature of their work.

The report was given to the CRB in April. Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis is studying it and residents now are discussing the findings in preparation for a probable November referendum — third time lucky, perhaps? — on local government status for the western community.

The report of the "western sector local government restructure advisory committee," to give the task force its full name, has come up with a carefully-researched paper that is colored by none of the arguments for or against municipal status. It presents facts and figures so carefully and impartially that the report is a bit on the dry side.

But western community residents would be well-advised to persevere and study the entire 47 pages.

The report is essentially an examination of comparisons — how much it costs residents for services they now receive, how much it might cost them if the whole area became one municipality, if View Royal hived off into a town of its own, if Colwood, Langford, Millstream and Metchosin amalgamated.

Estimates of the cost of municipal status were arrived at by examining three municipalities of similar size — Matsqui, Maple Ridge and Chilliwhack (the district, distinct from the town of Chilliwack).

The comparative studies show that municipal status would not be as traumatic as most residents fear. All three municipalities have populations close to the western sector's (about 27,000) and they are all semi-rural areas in the Fraser Valley, probably more dependent on farming than the western community, but close in size and other respects.

One key difference is in the size of their tax base. Total assessed value of the western sector now is $66.8 million, but Matsqui and Maple Ridge are each $100 million and Chilliwhack has $87 million. It's important that a municipality have a diversified, broad tax base big enough to support it.

It's true that taxes would go up in the western sector with municipal status — from the average of 74.73 mills now to nearly 84 mills — or approximately 12 per cent — but residents would also have control over services provided for their tax dollars, instead of having to bow to various absentee landlords. The mill rate is, incidentally, considerably lower than that prevailing in many other municipalities. For example (1975 figures), Esquimalt — 92.47, Oak Bay — 99.27, Saanich — 97.5.

And western community residents should note the report's statement, perhaps self-evident but one which needs underlining, that municipal status brings with it important new sources of revenue as well as expenditures. The area would be eligible for the provincial revenue-sharing scheme and per capita grants, and grants in lieu of taxes from the senior governments.

It's not all a bed of roses, nor is it one made of nails either. The four regional directors — Howard Drummond, Earl Pallister, Pat Massy and Mac Tipton — have included material which may convince people it is one or the other, but they have done an excellent job in preparing a factual base upon which the arguments pro and con can build.

Snakey System

Stephen Leacock definitely would be confused and bewildered by today's banks. All smiles and bright colors, carpets and color-coordinated. Banks used to be austere, forbidding places. The marble floors and iron grilles and stone columns inspired feelings of awe and fear in the humble depositor, as Leacock captured it in his story My Financial Career.

Almost all of the financial institutions now have velvet ropes snaking up and down the floor, forcing customers to join one great long lineup that doubles back and forth on itself like a theatre queue.

The Bank of B.C. is the latest to capitulate — "no more waiting in a slow-moving line," it says. Of course the "fast teller system" isn't any faster; it's just neater and tidier. No more ragged lines stretching back from each wicket. Instead there is one long, long line.

The new system ensures privacy for each customer, say the banks, but if after standing cheek by jowl with a couple dozen other depositors for 15 minutes a person doesn't overhear or glean the details of his neighbor's transaction then he is probably deaf and blind.

Professor Leacock would not be amused. Can there be any more telling argument against the lengthy lineup than the fact that to buy postage stamps or a money order at the central post office one must join the lengthy lineup? In complete privacy, no one will know whether you bought a dozen eights or eight twelves except the clerk. Now that's security.

PETER HADEKEL

A Barter with No Buyers

MONTREAL — The night before presenting his language proposals to Canada's premiers at St. Andrews last week, Rene Levesque stayed up late beating his press secretary at poker.

The Quebec premier has a reputation as a good poker player but gambling with minority language rights is a tougher kind of game, as Levesque found next day when he dealt with the other provincial premiers.

In unanimously rejecting his offer of reciprocal language agreements, the nine premiers called Levesque's bluff.

His top constitutional adviser, Claude Morin, had been boasting all week that Quebec couldn't lose at the conference. The cause of independence would be further whether the provinces accepted or rejected Quebec's offer to trade wider English school rights in Quebec for more French-language schools in other provinces.

If the provinces had accepted the deal, the Parti Quebecois government could have proclaimed itself as the champion of francophone minorities across Canada, while dealing a blow to the federal government's plan of taking over responsibility for minority language education.

Oversimplifying

And a rejection of the offer could be presented to Quebec voters as "proof" that English-Canadians just don't care about the survival of the francophone minorities in their provinces. Despite Morin's theory, it would be oversimplifying things to say that Levesque emerged as the winner from the premiers' conference.

First of all, the other premiers did themselves no harm by signing a joint declaration promising their "best efforts" to provide education in both official languages. They agreed to a comprehensive six-month study of minority language education in their own provinces which could lead to improved programs for their own French-speaking populations.

Levesque sarcastically called the declaration "a great leap forward in good intentions." But there is no reason why it could not accomplish as much or more for francophone minorities as a reciprocal agreement with the PQ government would have done.

Quebec's proposal would have allowed English school rights to certain Canadians migrating to Quebec, in return for guarantees that Quebecers moving to other provinces would have access to French schools.

But as the Federation of Francophones Outside Quebec has already observed, it doesn't make sense to talk about guaranteeing rights to French-speaking Quebecers moving to other provinces when francophones already there do not have adequate education services.

The kind of deal proposed by Quebec was clearly impossible for the premiers to accept. The reciprocal agreements Quebec wanted would use the same criteria for admission to English schools as contained in Bill 101, the government's language legislation.

The major criterion would be whether one parent of a family moving to Quebec was educated in English at the elementary level in Canada. There would be some transitional criteria as well, but when you add them all up, it means basically that not all Canadian citizens coming to Quebec would have freedom of choice in language of education.

RENE LEVESQUE
. . . misjudged premiers?

Asking the other provinces to improve their French-language school systems is one thing, but expecting them to endorse Bill 101 is quite another. Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney was the first to denounce this sort of approach and the others soon rallied behind him.

If there was a clear defeat in all of this for the PQ, it lay in the fact that the government had hoped to use the precedent of reciprocal language agreements to prove to voters in a referendum campaign that an independent Quebec would be able to negotiate economic ties with the rest of Canada.

Public opinion polls in recent months have shown that independence is an acceptable option only when coupled with some form of economic association with Canada. And so the PQ is doing its utmost to prove that "association" can and will work.

Morin left the distinct impression at St. Andrews that all Quebec was interested in was obtaining a precedent agreement. When asked by a reporter whether Quebec would be content with legislation guaranteeing French-language school rights in other provinces, Morin hedged his answer and indicated Quebec might still seek bilateral pacts.

But at the premiers' conference table, there were no takers. Alberta's Peter Lougheed recognized the risks inherent in negotiating with an independence-minded government and told reporters later that if Quebec had succeeded in getting other provinces to sign language agreements, it would have given the independence cause a shot in the arm. As if to confirm Lougheed's fears, it was later revealed that Quebec wants to put its proposals for sovereignty-association on the agenda of the premiers' next meeting.

Lougheed said it would be a "tragic mistake" for Quebec to separate because there would be no chance that the rest of Canada would go along with economic association.

Measured Reaction

Now that the premiers have taken this weapon out of Levesque's hands, it remains to be seen how he will exploit the failure of language reciprocity in the planned referendum on independence expected late next year or early in 1979.

His first reactions have been measured. At the close of the conference, he told reporters that the "failure" of the conference would likely leave Quebecers with the impression that they have a long way to go to find security in the present system.

But the French-language media have been reacting with only mild disappointment to English Canada's failure to buy reciprocity. There have been no howls of injustice in the newspaper headlines.

Nor has the English-speaking community here appeared overly disappointed that the other premiers weren't able to do something for the future growth of their community, threatened by Bill 101.

The aspect of bartering language rights is just too distasteful for most people to accept.

". . . come on, Bill, think . . . I torpedoed the Community Action Group, so now it's your turn again . . ."

Library Plan

The provincial government is going to be stuck with thousands of square feet of rental space in the uncompleted provincial government building on Blanshard Street. What better way to get rid of a few floors than to con the four core municipal governments into space rental for a new central library?

A 10-year rental would obviously be more than the quoted almost $5 million considering the government wastage of today, plus unspecified shock cost goodies during the interim. One alderman remarked: "It would give the municipalities 10 years in which to decide whether to build a new library or not."

That remark is the epitome of expensive, slow thinking and many of the present municipal officeholders voting yes to the provincial government rental rip-off, will not be in office 10 years from now, so they are quite willing to play footsie and burden taxpayers with highly expensive, non-owned library space.

Also, Victoria offered to sell the Crystal Gardens property to the provincial government for one dollar. I would suggest the Crystal Gardens property be sold to the Esquimalt, Oak Bay and Saanich municipal governments at two bits each. Victoria already has its two bits worth in the property. For those council members that can't add two and two, four bits is one dollar.

Thrown in with that property would be the old steam laundry site, next to the Crystal Gardens, for which Victoria paid the CPR over half a million pieces of change last February. So we have a pool in which we cannot swim; no steam laundry to wash our dirty linen, and a building ready to collapse from the heavy winds blowing from the parliament buildings.

If it is structurally impossible to retain the building's exterior, then raze the property and rebuild an updated exterior-interior Crystal Gardens suitable for a modern public library and future expansion, with a heat resistant glass roof. The top floor could then house a botanical garden, reading area and combination tea room-public meeting room.

Most municipal planners are incapable of foresight planning. Or if they are capable, they are immediately shot down by hindsight councils. Therefore, it would be necessary to pay for outside architectural planning. But we could have a beautiful central library on municipally-owned property at less cost than the provincial government offer, and still retain most of the Crystal Gardens exterior design.

An added bonus on this site is that there would be ample parking space for the public who are paying the bill. Not just the usual parking for government employees only. Where would one park on Blanshard Street?

This is an opportune time to undertake such a project as the federal Liberal government is handing out millions and millions of dollars across Canada for vote buying. An example is the $10 million gift to the Canadian Labor Congress for labor relations research or whatever. The free spending Liberals would consider $5 million for a Greater Victoria public library hardly worth mentioning. And where, but in a library, is more search and research done?

So get off your apathetic butts, citizens, and get involved as a change of pace. Whether for or against this whole exercise in political machinations, express your opinion to your municipal council. Don't accept information doled out to the media, but demand all of the facts. It's your city and your money. Or don't you care?—Maggi Lynn, 548 Niagara Street.

Peaceful Puffers

So there were over 33,000 convictions for cannabis in 1976 and only 438 for heroin (Victoria Times, August 15). How nice for the smack users who are out there busting heads and ripping off corner groceries to know that the cops are busy elsewhere arresting the thousands of peaceful puffers sharing love and friendship in the privacy of their homes as they pass the sweet herb around!—Doric Pickelein, 452 Moss Street.

Klondike gold rush of '98. Any Yukon war vets out there?

Yukon Veterans

Iris Warner, Whitehorse author-researcher, is working on a Remembrance Day 1977 feature story about Yukon Second World War veterans.

She has a list of 100 Yukon men and women who served in the three branches of the Canadian armed forces. Many of them are now living in the far flung parts of British Columbia.

She asks them to send her the following information: Number, name, rank, picture in uniform, service details, medals and awards, highlights of war experience, and a touch of personal background.

The Pacific Coast Militia Rangers had a Yukon unit.

The late Klondike Pete Huley, Hollywood comedian and Gold Rush pioneer, was a member of the Yukon unit located at Bear Creek who proved himself a sharpshooter. She would appreciate hearing from ex-members so that their history may be recorded.

Technocracy Inc.

May I be permitted to reply to Mr. Cass's letter Auto Industry in the Times Aug. 16. It is ironic in a period when the level of mass education is at its highest, information through the communications media is so abundant, statistics on consumption of energy, depletion of resources — finite and non-finite — and critical pollution of our atmosphere, waterways, oceans and land that these danger signals are ignored by the masses.

The reason is twofold. The free enterprise price system requires a continuous annual growth rate (GNP) of six to eight per cent to sustain itself, to meet the ever-increasing debt service charges and in its futile effort to maintain a suitable level of employment to provide the necessary profits and tax revenue. To maintain this continuous growth rate, an effort that is contrary to all physical laws, the consumers are encouraged though exotic advertising, and appealing packaging to buy on credit everything that is dumped on the market, whether or not it is useful, is required or is harmful, so they can enjoy the good life.

To find a solution to this demise we try to treat the sick pre-industrial price system designed for the distribution of a scarcity rather than diagnose its inability to function effectively in an industrial area of abundance.

In 1932 after 14 years of research by a group of highly qualified individuals to determine, the effects the industrial revolution would have on the North American economic social system, Technocracy Inc. was formed as a membership organization to inform North Americans of the most probably consequences if the price system was allowed to continue. They also acquainted the public with Technocracy's blueprint for survival.

In 1934 Technocracy was the fastest growing organization in North America. In 1939 the gearing-up for the Second World War diverted the public's interest and the hungry thirties miraculously ended. Today, 45 years later, Technocracy's probability forecast has proven only too true. Today Technocracy continues to inform the public by public meetings and is listed in the phone book for those truly seeking a solution to our demise. You owe it to future generations — the right to survival. — J. J. Gibson, 920 Easter Road.

Tally-Ho

Driving north on Government Street during the recent heatwave, I was brought to a halt at the Superior Street intersection when the light turned red. A tally-ho, facing east on Superior Street, drew slowly into the intersection. The driver, a young man, shouted "Get a move on" and, reaching over, gave the offside horse a sharp cut with the whip on its flank. As it passed me, I counted five or six whip marks in its coat. The animal, lighter in build than the other horse, had its head hanging a bare foot from the ground. It looked sick.

These horses stand in the sun on the hottest days of the year. I do not think that they are ever washed because they stink. Their harness might be adequate on the farm, but it certainly wouldn't grace the state coach. It is obvious that some animals are nervous in traffic. The poor beasts' body wastes make certain street corners stink like cavalry lines. Last but not least, the tally-hos themselves are traffic hazards of the first magnitude.

If the tourist dollar means so much to Victoria and if we are so little concerned with the welfare of animals, why aren't we honest with ourselves and build a bullring out along Douglas Street where the tourists could see six bulls (and no doubt, the odd horse or two) killed every Sunday afternoon. Why not cockpits in Burnside? Or an arena for bear-baiting and other such "sports" in Gorge Park? After all, if all that it took to keep the mob happy in Caesar's day was bread and bloody spectacles, have we any proof that the same formula would not work today? These attractions would draw the blood-hungry from near and far. The tourist dollars would flood in.

But if you think like me, that bullfights, cockfights and bear-baiting are an anachronism in the twentieth century, perhaps you would also agree that horse-drawn tally-hos are equally out of place in twentieth century traffic. — Peter Gage, 308-250 Douglas Street.

The Right To Strike?

By HELEN DEWAR
Washington Post

Angry citizens doused fires with garden hoses as striking firemen picketed for higher pay and less work earlier this month in Dayton, Ohio — rekindling a debate that Calvin Coolidge thought he had ended 58 years ago.

"There is no right to strike against the public safety by anybody, anywhere, anytime," said the dour New Englander in breaking the Boston police strike in 1919, putting himself on the road that ultimately led from the Massachusetts state house to the White House.

But the issue didn't die with Coolidge or with his era.

Militancy has been rising over the past decade among the nation's 12 million state and local government employees, who have found themselves on the losing end of municipal belt-tightening and have begun demanding the same collective-bargaining rights as private industry employees.

Hodge-podge

One result has been a push for national bargaining legislation to replace the hodge-podge of existing state bargaining laws — a push backed up by periodic waves of strikes and accompanying publicity about piles of smelly garbage, drawbridges without staffs and now firemen picketing as houses burn.

The issue is more complicated than a debate over Coolidge's maxim, however.

Many public employee unions, including the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) and the International Association of Fire Fighters, (IAFF), which represents the Dayton strikers, say they would give up the right to strike in return for binding arbitration of bargaining disputes by an impartial third party.

Government officials, however, are increasingly reluctant to lose control of a power for which voters hold them responsible — the power to raise and spend money — according to Sam Zagoria, labor-management specialist for the International City Management Association.

Moreover, union leaders such as IAFF president Howard McClennan say the strikes are occurring only because machinery such as arbitration does not exist to resolve disputes without worker walkouts.

But others, such as Congressman Frank Thompson (D-N.J.), the sponsor of legislation to extend collective-bargaining rights to public employees, say Dayton-type strikes hurt the cause.

"The members (of Congress) get terribly upset when something like this happens," he says. "It seems every time legislation of this kind comes up, the sanitation men will go out or someone will refuse to pull up a bridge somewhere."

Available statistics indicate an increase in the number of public employee strikes this year, although officials warn that the figures may be inconclusive. The U.S. bureau of labor statistics reports 113 governmental strikes through May of this year, compared with 85 for the same period last year.

The number of public employee strikes rose during the late 1960s, tapered off during the wage-price control period of the early 1970s, peaked in 1975 and fell off in 1976 — generally reflecting trends in private employment, a bureau official said.

The prospect of national public employee bargaining legislation, one of the AFL-CIO's priority items, is doubtful, according to several labor and congressional sources.

Court Ruling

A recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling against enforcement of federal minimum wage rules for state and local government workers casts doubt on the constitutionality of a federal law mandating collective bargaining for these same employees, and unions are divided over how to proceed.

"There's no question that the (Supreme Court) reversal took much of the steam out of the push for a federal collective bargaining law," said William Hamilton, an AFSCME spokesman.

But Congressman Thompson said he may push for hearings on his bill later this year. His bill includes a right to strike but is considered likely to be amended to provide for impasse procedures such as arbitration.

Mount Blanc . . . traffic congestion in the huts

Stumbling in the Alps

By PAUL WEBSTER
The Observer

Every morning around dawn during the holiday season, Mont Blanc suddenly comes alive with long columns of mountain climbers pushing impatiently past each other to reach the top of the 4,807-metre peak.

On busy days, as many as 600 climbers are painfully making their way up the slope, roped behind a guide or ambling up alone with the air of being on a Sunday afternoon walk.

By evening, about 200 of those who started out will have trampled through churned up snow at the peak of a mountain first conquered in 1786.

Traffic congestion is complicated in the evening with the rush to Alpine refuges. Overnight, 500 people have been reported in refuges designed to take 80.

Alpine guides have become increasingly impatient over the last few years at the off-handed approach to Europe's highest mountain. While they display the airs of men whose personal property is being invaded — they recently picketed the mountain to prevent a publicity stunt summit dinner — their objections are based on the danger of uncontrolled mountain climbing.

"It's not just insensitive to treat a mountain with over-familiarity," said guide Guy Michel. "It's an absolute tragedy."

The afternoon walk impression given to climbing by some of the easier Mont Blanc slopes has tempted increasing foolhardiness which may produce the highest number of Alpine deaths in one year unless there is a sudden recognition of the danger.

By the end of the second week in August, 45 people had been killed in accidents in the French Alps compared to 26 all last year and an average for each of the previous three years of 50.

French Alpine guide Gilbert Chappaz said, "I'm afraid 1977 looks like being an exceptional year."

Similar frightening statistics are being reported in the Swiss Alps where the number of deaths is running at about a third higher than in France. There have also been another 10 in the Italian Alps.

July and August are always the worst time for Alpine accidents but this year it is not only the congestion and recklessness which is contributing to the fatality rate.

"The mountain has become a trap because of climatic conditions, and there is no way of controlling climbers or of giving them proper warning of rapidly changing conditions," said a spokesman for the gendarmes' high mountain rescue squad at Chamonix in France.

The squad has lost their best climber and one of the most famous Alpinists, Robert Chere, who led the rescue team.

"When a man of his calibre is killed by the treacherous conditions, then this is no place for amateurs," the police spokesman said.

Robert Chere died when a rock broke away during a climb while he was roped ahead of a trainee.

"This has been a common cause of accidents," one of his colleagues said. "What are usually easy climbs in the summer have become the reserve of experts this year. The exceptional cold has meant that rocks are sealed in during the early morning but become a fatal hazard when the sun gets hotter and thaws them out."

The other recurring hazard is heavy snowfalls which took a particularly heavy toll in late July.

"These were really wintry blizzards," the police spokesman said. "There was up to 50 centimetres of snow in 24 hours which caught out mountaineers who had started late and were forced to camp out. There have been deaths from exposure and of climbers who have lost their way."

At the moment there is no sign that the authorities are ready to take measures to licence climbs, but guides believe that it would be easy to control at least one section of the public which is in a hurry to get to the top.

"More and more people are using cable cars to get as high up the Alps as possible for a rapid assault at a summit," the police spokesman said. "This is highly dangerous as it is particularly tempting for people who are in no condition to climb.

"These are the sort of people who would have been eliminated by fatigue before they reached the more dangerous slopes. Now they are tackling the really difficult stuff without any training. No amount of warning will stop this sort of recklessness so there'll have to be some urgent measures taken."

Zero Growth For the Fat

By DENNIS BRAITHWAITE
Toronto Star

In the course of a stimulating article on the United States energy debacle in the current Harper's, Lewis H. Lapham, the magazine's editor, has some pertinent things to say about the technocratic class "who talk about builing a New Jerusalem in the slum of capitalism."

These Messianic bureaucrats, Lapham writes, "seldom point out that a policy of 'zero growth', whether computed in terms of energy or anything else, rewards people who explain, categorize and interpret things at the expense of people who make things. In a stagnant society, the bureaucrat holds sway. His taxes, regulations and moralisms replace the market mechanism and, like the grocery clerk in command of a limited inventory, he finds himself invested with the wisdom of Solomon.

"Knowing this to be so, the bureaucrat resents the messiness of abundance. In a robust or creative society, too many people go around making things without permission, inventing new sources of wealth and political theory. Obviously, people cannot be trusted. They must be managed."

Mandarins

Lapham sees the technocratic class aligning itself "with the academic and bureaucratic interest, with government regulation in all markets, with the host of ambitious mandarins (city planners, professors of social science, journalists, foundation officials and university presidents)." Inclusion of journalists in the group is justified, I think, certainly if we apply Lapham's strictures to what's happening in Canada. Our media have clearly lined up on the side of the environmentalists, the hand-wringers, the small-is-beautiful crowd, and against the entrepreneurs, the economic expansionists, the doers, the creators of wealth.

Media coverage of the recent Berger Report is a case in point. This documentment, more an ideological argument than a balanced study, was greeted by the press, and even more particularly by the CBC as a revelation second only to the sermon on the mount. Justice Berger's demand that an Arctic pipeline be shelved for at least 10 years was accepted as received truth, the man himself praised beyond the decent limits of flattery for his wisdom and courage.

But even this rising chorus of approbation didn't satisfy the media trade magazine Content, which in its latest issue prints an exhaustive and generally tedious analysis of press coverage of the Berger Report, concluding that all but one or two papers failed to give it sufficient space and due weight.

The other side of the pipeline story, and there is another side, has simply been passed over by the media. The moralisms of the bureaucrats and their allies have replaced economic reality.

Instil Fear

The Trudeau administration is the perfect exemplar of Lapham's new ruling class. "Most people object to being managed, even for their own good," the editor notes, "and so first they must be frightened." Trudeau frightened us some time ago with the warning that the market economy has failed and must be replaced by even more massive and direct government control of economic affairs. Big brother will take care of things.

The Trudeaulte goal of having every Canadian in one way or another dependent on the government is within sight. In the arts, federal subsidies make the difference between starvation and a comfortable life. In return, artists deliver what is expected of them. Youth is made dependent through the application of the PM's philosophy that work is no longer relevant, handouts being so generous and easily available. Farmers, business, pensioners and now even organized labor have been made the beneficiaries of a never-ceasing flow of federal funds. We are all becoming wards of the state.

In a stagnant society, Lewis Lapham has noted, the bureaucrat holds sway. In Canada's stagnant society his work is made the easier by the existence of an amiable and shallow population that is untempered by hard times and increasingly addicted to fantasy.

For the Ottawa mandarins, the management of such a people becomes child's play.

Les Anglais as Villains

By WILLIAM JOHNSON
The Globe and Mail

QUEBEC — Imagine a play for children in which "les Anglais" shoot in cold blood the horse of a nice and inoffensive young farmer whose name is Baptiste.

Les Anglais in the play are terrifying conquerors of les Canadiens. They are rapacious thieves. They speak French with a gross accent. They wear masks, while the fun-loving Canadiens are played with normal faces. Les Anglais have ruined les Canadiens, taking all the wealth and all the commerce from them. In their stilted speech, les Anglais add contemptuous insult to injury.

Listen to the ugly Anglais, Brown, speaking to the ugly Anglais, Carter: "They will learn that we are the masters here. Pray, dear Canadiens, pray, that's your last recourse."

The poor Canadiens, buffeted by one enormity after another, can only repeat with deep anger: "Les maudits Anglais!"

"I don't like the Anglais," said one small boy of 5 or 6 in French as he emerged from one recent performance. ("Les Anglais" is used commonly in Quebec to refer to Canadians who are English-speaking.)

The play is titled De Conquete en Conquete (From Conquest to Conquest) and it is performed six times a week this summer, thanks to a $50,000 grant from the federal government. Its message seems to be that the Quebecois will be oppressed by les Anglais until they form a nation of their own.

The hall in which it is performed is historic and splendid: it is the stone barracks built before the Conquest to quarter the troops garrisoning New France. It is part of Artillery Park, operated by Parks Canada as a historic site, and open to visits by tourists.

A $50,000 grant

This spring an official of Parks Canada invited a local children's theatre company, Les Productions pour Enfants de Quebec Inc., to put on a play in the barracks during July and August. The $50,000 needed was to come from the Canada Manpower summer employment program. The company put together a team of 17 people, including nine actors. An outstanding play was written for the occasion.

The play is described as follows in the publicity release put out by the company: "De Conquete en Conquete . . . tableaux illustrating the formation of a new people: the Canadiens. Having come from France and soon falling under English dependency, De Conquete en Conquete retraces the emotional and social life, the hopes and the limits of these Canadiens who today form the Quebecois people."

The hour-long performance is full of visual displays that appeal to a child, and most children, even young ones, were attentive throughout. About 60 people were in attendance at one recent performance, in a hall that can contain about 100.

Though the play is supposed to be based on history, it picks and chooses to develop a particular interpretation, and it exaggerates what really happened in order to make les Anglais more villainous.

The central incident of the play is supposed to take place in the period immediately after the Conquest of 1760. The Canadiens are no longer allowed to cross a bridge as they could during the French Regime. The English conquerors want the bridge for themselves. When Baptiste tries to cross the bridge with his horse, the horse is shot dead. Louis, an older man who actually built the bridge, rebels at the English refusal to allow the Canadiens to use it. In a lighthearted act of defiance, he goes out on the bridge and dances. The English seize him at gunpoint and clap him in jail. His wife, Anne, fearing she will never see her husband again, sings a lament.

The incident is loosely based on history, according to Charles Bolster, who wrote the first draft of the play. Bolster, a former teacher of English in French-language secondary schools in Quebec, discussed his script with a member of Les Productions pour Enfants de Quebec, who was a former student of his. The script was chosen to be performed at the barracks, after being rewritten by two members of the group.

The real-life incident was that an Englishman refused permission to let the Canadiens build a new bridge that would touch on his land, according to Bolster. There already was a bridge that could be used but it was inconvenient. The Englishman went to court rather than allow the new bridge to be built.

The play develops a simple theme. The Indians were here, the French came and treated them with contempt. Slowly a distinct people, the Canadiens, emerge, who are not French — in fact, the Canadiens mock the French and regard them as foreigners, according to the script, while the French find the Canadiens impertinent. The new people arises from the geography and climate in Canada, and from a supposed taking up of the ways of the Indian. Symbolically, Baptiste marries an Indian girl. (Baptiste is often used in Quebec to designate a French Canadian in general.)

While the Canadiens are constantly presented as human, full of life and song, as real people, the French and English are presented as caricatures.

The arrival of the British is announced by screams, flashes of light, off-stage tumult. The English are as frightening as the bogeyman. When the first English character appears he is large, stupid, encased in a metal-colored shell vaguely reminiscent of a tank. He tries to speak to the Canadiens but no one can understand him.

'Still Quarrelling'

"What is that gibberish?" says Bla-bla, a fairy-like character who is narrator and mocks the English warrior's speech.

There is one sympathetic English character: Governor Murray, who was the British military governor in the first years after the Conquest and who liked the French.

But James Murray is presented as a rather ineffectual and not really human character—he wears a mask. When Bla-bla tries to speak to him, he hears nothing. Eventually the bad English have him recalled because he is too favorable to "that vanquished people," and Gen. Murray leaves, warning the Canadians that they are in for hard times.

After Murray is recalled there is a kind of epilogue that evokes the future, two centuries later. The Canadiens have not been absorbed by the English, as everyone feared, but now they are the Quebecois. And nothing has really changed between the English and the Quebecois: "they are still quarrelling."

The Canadiens decide to resist the English instead of relying on the kindly governor. They decide that they will build their own house, which all of them, including now even the bishop (but none of the English) set about to do.

In the last scene, Louis appears. He is out of jail. "Symbolic liberation," the script point out.

Louis-Philippe Cormier, director of Artillery Park, said he was not unduly disturbed by the play's portrayal of the English.

"I have seen worse," he said in an interview. "The fundamental message is that the Canadiens settled here and develop, along with the Indians who were conquered by the French. He says, I am going to build my house. He doesn't give a damn about the French or the English. The French also come out very badly" Cormier said.

Committee to Oversee Gov't Firms Opposed

The NDP voted Thursday against approval in principle for a bill which would set up a special committee of the legislature to oversee Crown corporations.

NDP MLAs said they could not support the bill, the Crown Corporations Reporting Act, because Premier Bill Bennett refused to give assurances during second reading debate of the bill that an opposition MLA would chair the committee.

Conservative leader Scott Wallace and Liberal leader Gordon Gibson voted with the Social Credit majority in support of the bill.

The NDP was also unsuccessful in attempting to amend a motion accompanying the bill which defines the terms of the committee.

Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre) introduced an amendment which would have required that the committee have a chairman from the official opposition.

Wallace and Gibson voted with the NDP on this issue, but the amendment was defeated by the Social Credit majority, and the motion later passed.

Bennett earlier told the legislature that the committee is of a different nature than the public accounts committee, which has traditionally had an opposition chairman.

The premier said that because Crown corporations are moving away from political interference, scrutiny of their operations need not be on a partisan basis, and therefore an opposition chairman is not needed.

Bennett said the chairman would be picked by a majority of the MLAs on the committee, on which there would be a majority of government MLAs.

He said the very fact that the NDP wanted a government member excluded from the chairmanship was in itself a partisan move, something which ran counter to what he hoped would be the tenor of the committee.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett said that if it wasn't guaranteed that an opposition MLA would be chairman, it could be seen as an attempt to evade the public accounts committee.

Gibson said the bill was "tremendously important legislation," and said he hoped it would be a non-partisan committee.

"If it, after time, became apparent, that an opposition chairman were needed, then the committee would have fundamentally failed," he said.

Wallace said the committee had great potential, but that if partisanship reigned, "then this committee might as well not get started."

He said an opposition chairman would be a good gesture, but if the government didn't agree, it wasn't worth voting against the bill as a whole, as the NDP did.

Trustees To Be Elected

The procedure for selecting general trustees of the Islands Trust will be altered under legislative amendments introduced by Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis Thursday.

Curtis said criticism by residents of the islands had convinced him to change Bill 25, the Islands Trust Amendment Act, so that general trustees will be elected rather than appointed.

A chairman, vice-chairman and a third general trustee will all be elected by the duly elected local trustees from each island. Under the current system those positions are filled by appointment.

Curtis said that as a result of the change no decision will be made by the Islands Trust except by elected individuals from within the Trust area.

27,000 ASK TO SAVE VRB

A 27,000 signature petition calling on the government to withdraw legislation that will do away with the Vancouver Resources Board was presented in the legislature Thursday by Liberal leader Gordon Gibson.

Gibson told the house the petition had been given to him earlier in the day by a non-partisan group calling itself the Save the Vancouver Resources Board Joint Committee.

Earlier, during question period, Gibson asked Premier Bill Bennett if he would be making room on his schedule for a meeting with representatives of the group.

Bennett said that he'd expected to meet with a delegation at 6:50 Tueaday morning, but the group hadn't appeared.

"I have already met the members of the board," added the premier, ". . . I feel they have been given a very fair hearing."

Bennett also said he'd be willing to meet with representatives of the group at some future date.

French Prelate Again Defiant

VICHY, France (Reuter) — Rebel French Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre ordained Benedictine monk Ilivier de Bligniere on Thursday in further defiance of papal authority. Lefebvre's breakaway conservative movement inside the Roman Catholic Church has brought him close to excommunication.

Canning Standards Sought

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said Thursday he will press the federal government to bring in rigid standards for canning lids.

Mair made his statement in the house after a member of the opposition had questioned the government on some Taiwanese-made Metro-brand lids that are now being marketed in B.C.

The lids have been criticised by a number of groups because they do not always seal properly. Faulty seals on preserves can result in the formation of botulism in the food stuffs.

Norm Levi (NDP-Vancouver Burrard) said the lids are "toxic time bombs" that pose a threat of death by botulism.

Mair said his department has contacted the federal government a number of times regarding canning lids, but "I will make another representation, as strong as I know how, to get adequate standards."

Chairman Reins In Debaters

The NDP renewed its attack Thursday on a controversial section of the Municipal Amendment Act, but found that chairman Elwood Veitch (S C — B urnaby-Willingdon) would not let the debate stray.

In bringing Emery Barnes (N D P — Vancouver-Centre) back to order, Veitch said that he had prepared a list of items which had been "thoroughly canvassed" by previous speakers.

It is against the rules of the legislature to indulge in "tedious and repetitious debate."

The controversial Section 28 would insert a new section into the Municipal Act giving the minister power to rewrite part or all of any municipal bylaw which he feels is "contrary to the public interest."

Veitch noted that the NDP had referred 24 times to the "absolute power" the section would confer on the minister.

He said that accusations that the public interest would be harmed had been made 16 times.

Charges that the bill would permit the government to ram the Alaska Highway pipeline through the province were made at least three times while reference to Squamish, the B.C. Railway and coal was made seven times each.

Veitch added that references were made to Richard Nixon, Vancouver mayor Jack Volrich, Duncan mayor Ken Pakin, Prince George mayor Harry Moffat, Phil Gaglardi, George Haddad, George Mussallem, Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf and Mines Minister Jim Chabot.

Water Pipe Size Has Region Guessing

The Capital Region Board Wednesday rejected engineering claims that a 30-inch diameter pipe will be big enough to supply domestic water to the upper Saanich Peninsula, then reconsidered and approved it.

In the process, directors learned that educated guesswork and a sophisticated computor analysis were being used to design the supply line which in the next year or two will bring an assured water supply to Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney.

The board had earlier asked its senior engineer, Norm Howard, to justify plans to make the water trunk line 30 inches between Martindale and Mount Newton Crossroad and just 24 inches from there north to McTavish.

In a report Wednesday he listed 12 reasons for that size of pipe, including suppositions it will serve about 32,000 people by 1996 and not be used for irrigation or by industry.

The offical regional plan calls for a maximum population of 28,000 on the upper peninsula two decades from now while individual community plans suggest a maximum of 43,000. The census last year puts the current population at 18,842.

The $50,000 computer analysis being done for the Saanich Peninsula Water Commission won't indicate whether the trunk size is the right one, the board was told. It will show what pumps and reservoirs will be needed with that size trunk to make the whole system work.

Mike Williams of the engineering staff explained in Howard's absence that the 30- and 24-inch trunk sizes were arbitrary choices based on manual calculations and experience.

The matter came from the water commission to the board because it involves a major purchase of pipe. The commission wants to order the pipe now, in the face of a possible shortage should a major oil pipeline project be approved soon.

Variations in future population estimates on the peninsula and the questionable nature of the trunk size estimates led a majority of the board to reject the proposed sizes at first.

But the debate continued after director Dave Hill, who is also a member of the water commission, suggested that even though the question had been researched, "big brother in Victoria doesn't like our pipe sizes."

The board moved first to reconsider its decision and then approved the engineering recommendation.

Calif. Women Safe in Alaska

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Two 22-year-old women from Pasadena, Calif., who left their car on the Alaska Highway earlier this month and then disappeared have been in touch with a relative, RCMP here said Thursday.

Joyce Liska and Laura Barry left their 1977 car at Mile 116 of the Alaska Highway on Aug. 4. RCMP took the car to the Fort St. John detachment and started a massive search fearing the girls had come to harm.

Constable Rick Yaskiw said the girls apparently heard on an Alaska radio station that they were being sought and sent a postcard to Miss Liska's sister in Sierra Madre, Calif., which arrived Thursday. Yaskiw said the sister confirmed the postcard is in Miss Liska's handwriting so police have called off the search.

He said the card was sent Monday from Talkeetna, 75 miles north of Anchorage.

The card said the girls left the car because they were having trouble with it and hitched a ride with other travellers. They felt the car would be safe "because it was in Canada," said Yaskiw.

Cpl. Fred Angleton of the Alaska State Troopers in Talkeetna said he had heard nothing of the girls but said they are probably staying in "an area 15 miles north of the village where there is no phone or electricity."

Simpsons Ltd.

Simpsons Ltd. says results in the second quarter were more disappointing than anticipated and the department store chain lost 1.84 million in the six months ended July 6 compared with a profit of $2.39 million or 5.1 cents a share a year earlier. G. A. Burton, chairman, said today the current economic recession eroded consumers' disposable income while unpredictable weather in May and June combined to produce "country-wide the most unsatisfactory results for these months in recent years." Sales rose seven per cent over-all to $273.87 million, with Ontario and Halifax showing more strength than other areas, he said.

TD Bank

Toronto Dominion Bank reports balance of revenue after income tax for the third quarter ended July 31 was $25.1 million, an increase of 13 per cent over the corresponding period a year earlier. For the first nine months of fiscal 1977, balance of revenue after tax was 73.9 million, an eight-per-cent increase over the same period last year. Total assets at the end of the quarter were 18 billion, up 13.4 per cent. Richard Thomson, president and chief executive officer, said a major factor in the third-quarter earnings growth was the 19-per-cent increase in net interest revenue. "This reflected good growth in both Canadian and foreign currency business volumes," Thomson said.

Grosvenor

Grosvenor International Holdings Ltd. reports net earnings of $257,000 or 19 cents a share for the six months ended June 30, compared with $196,000 or 15 cents a share for the corresponding period in 1976. Revenue was $12,225,000 compared with $5,938,000. The company said that sale of the Chancellor Court apartment buildings in Vancouver was mainly responsible for increased earnings. "Group earnings continue to be adversely affected by the weak market for condominiums in Vancouver, and office administration in Sydney, Australia," said president Neville Gibson.

Bell Canada

Bell Canada has announced plans to offer its common shareholders a revised dividend re-investment and stock purchase plan starting Jan. 1, 1978. The company has applied to the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission for approval to amend a plan introduced in July, 1975. Shares purchased under the amended plan would be newly-issued common shares rather than existing shares purchased on the open market. The new plan would also permit a five-per-cent discount from average market price for shares purchased through re-investment of common share cash dividends. If approved, the plan would take effect in time to allow re-investment of the common dividend payable in January. Bell has 209,000 common shareholders, 6.5 per cent of whom participate in the current plan.

Gen. Elec.

General Electric Co. is marketing a new fluorescent lamp which it says uses substantially less energy but provides almost as much light as standard office fluorescent lamps. Company officials said the 35-watt lamp can produce 97 per cent as much light as standard 40-watt fluorescent lights. By substituting the new lamp for the standard 40-watt lamp, companies could reduce the amount of electricity used for lighting by as much as 14 per cent, the company said.

Gulf Canada

Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. plans to increase gasoline production at its Edmonton refinery if it can get the required feedstock. The company has applied to the Energy Resources Conservation Board for a 10-year permit to use 10,000 barrels of condensate on pentanes plus daily as refinery feedstock. Gulf would spend $2.6 billion on increasing storage, pumping and pipeline facilities if it can get the authorization for increased condensate use. Condensate is a light oil produced as a byproduct of natural gas processing. It is highly desirable for gasoline and petrochemical production.

Wardair

Wardair Canada International Ltd.'s net earnings for the first six months of 1977 were $2,092,318, up sharply from $622,144 in the first half of '76.

Earnings per common share, after provision for dividends on preferred shares, increased to 59 cents from 14 cents per share in the first half of 1976.

A company spokesman said operating revenue was up by 4.2 per cent to $43,138,922 over the comparable period during 1976, while the charter airline held the increase in operating costs to only 1.7 per cent.

The improved earnings is due primarily to higher load factors, increased aircraft use and tight adherence to cost control measures, said Maxwell W. Ward, Wardair chairman.

The airline has negotiated labor agreements with international flight crews and the Canadian Air Lines Flight Attendants Association, he said.

Home

Home Oil Company Ltd. has reported net earnings for the first half of 1977 of $17,328,000 compared with $13,716,000 for the comparable period in 1976.

The company said in a news release that net earnings for the first quarter of 1977 amounted to $9,738,000.

Gross revenues increased by 12 per cent to $66,237,000 during the first half of 1977 mainly as a result of crude oil and natural gas price increases.

Net flow of funds from operations for the first half of 1977 was $43,250,000, an increase of 46 per cent over the $29,250,000

Net flow of funds from operations for the first half of 1977 was $43,250,000, an increase of 46 per cent over the $29,675,000 reported in the same period last year.

RCA Corp.

RCA Corp. is introducing a home videotape recorder cheaper than those now on the market and with double the taping capability. RCA announced it will price its model at $1,000 (U.S.), offering competition to the $1,300 Betamax cassette machine produced by Sony Corp. The RCA model will offer cassettes at $17.95 that can tape up to two hours of television programming, and four-hour tapes at $24.95, the firm said. Sony prices its two-hour tape at $17.

Kenting

Kenting Ltd. of Calgary reports a net income for the six months ended June 30, of $1,623,000, $2.01 per share, up from the $1,267,000, 1.57 per share reported for the same 1976 period. Cash flow from operations before taxes increases to $4,601,000 from $3,458,000 reported one year ago. Revenue is up to $29,048,000 from the $22,520,000 at June 30, 1976. Trimac Ltd. also of Calgary now owns in excess of 99 per cent of the outstanding common shares of Kenting.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 22-year-old man facing charges of gross indecency and indecent assault on a female elected trial by judge and jury in Victoria provincial court Thursday.

Judge Harold Alder set Nov. 29 as the date for the preliminary inquiry for Richard J. Mitchell of 603 Treanor, facing the two charges stemming from an Aug. 14 investigation by police.

Mitchell also pleaded guilty Thursday to a charge of possession of marijuana arising from an Aug. 14 police search of his residence.

Mitchell is free on $2,000 bail.

* * *

A prison guard charged with assault causing bodily harm pleaded not guilty.

Alder set Nov. 29 as the trial date for Robert James Saxon, 39, who was charged in connection with a July 9 injury to a Wilkinson Road inmate.

* * *

Alder ordered a presentence report for a 19-year-old man who pleaded guilty to a charge of theft under $200.

The court was told that Luke Claude Dube, of 335 East Burnside, took a tape deck and speakers from a parked car early Thursday morning and was apprehended while installing it later in the morning.

Dube was remanded until Sept. 15 for sentencing.

Dube was also fined $35 after he pleaded guilty to a traffic offence.

* * *

A William Head prisoner received a six-month concurrent sentence after he pleaded guilty to a charge of fraud.

The court was told that Julius Wuelfrath, 29, deposited three cheques with a Calgary credit union drawn on a B.C. account with insufficient funds and later withdrew $640 cash from the account.

Counsel for the accused man told the court that Wuelfrath was currently serving a 3½-year sentence on similar charges and aated to clear up all outstanding charges.

The court was told he still had another charge for a similar offence outstanding in Montreal and attempts were being made to wave it to Victoria.

Wuelfrath will be eligible for parole once all the outstanding charges have been dealt with, the court was told.

* * *

"It's not a very good record to start with," Alder told a 18-year-old woman with a learner's driving permit who pleaded guilty to charges of driving while impaired, driving without care and attention and driving while under suspension.

Nancy Mary Bonneau, of 6677 Central Saanich, was fined $35 on each of the two traffic offences plus $50 for the impaired charge and was given one year's probation which includes taking the impaired driver's course and doing 150 hours of community service work.

* * *

Fined $500 after he pleaded guilty to an impaired driving charge laid after a July 30 police check was Harvey Andrews, 60, of 1378 Lyall.

* * *

Waldemar Florczak, 22, of 1430 Pembroke was fined $500, given six months' probation and ordered to take the impaired driver's course after he pleaded guilty to an impaired driving charge laid in connection with an Aug. 14 police check.

* * *

The same sentence was received by Mark Daniels, of 3363 Glasgow, after pleading guilty to impaired driving charge laid in connection with a July 31 police check in Sidney.

Youth Gets Another Chance

A 19-year-old youth was told Thursday in Victoria county court he was being given a last chance for probation because of his age and because the prosecution didn't raise strenuous objections.

Ian Ralston Dunsmuir, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty to breaking and entering a doctor's office June 21 at 918 Esquimalt Road with intent to commit an indictable offence.

Judge Leslie Cashman suspended passing of sentence and put him on probation for two years, with the warning that if he committed any offence in this period, including violation of probation, it probably would result in a jail sentence.

He said conditions of probation include reporting to a probation officer monthly attempting to gain employment, not to drink alcohol to a blood level greater than .08 per cent and submitting to a breath analysis test at any time when required to by police or a probation officer.

"You'd better comply with this order or you probably will be in jail," the judge said.

Sex Acts Filmed In Prison

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — The head nurse at the provincial correctional centre here testified Thursday some prisoners performed sexual acts with female visitors in the jail and recorded the activities on film.

Ron Monk told an inquiry investigating a June 21-22 riot at the centre that the women were at a meeting of the New Native Perspective Society (NNPS) when the acts allegedly occurred.

The NNPS is a native self-help group at the centre.

Monk said photographs taken while the women were there were seized from a prisoner and given to Jim Welch, the centre's custodial supervisor.

He said Welch gave the photographs back to a prisoner and did nothing about the situation.

Monk said he was not personally involved as a staff member but that women were taken to the NNPS office and left there on several occasions.

Outside the inquiry, Terry Thompson, director of Saskatchewan's correctional centres, denied Monk's allegations.

Thompson said he is satisfied no sexual acts occurred at the meeting and the pictures of the prisoners and women were not sexual.

'Squadron' of MiGs in U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. air force has a secret "squadron" of stolen or captured Soviet-built MiG fighter and interceptor aircraft which are flown regularly by American pilots to perfect air-to-air combat tactics, Armed Forces Journal said today.

The unofficial service monthly reported in a copyright article that "some of the planes are very recent models; others date back to the Korean War."

"By one informed estimate, close to 20 MiGs are now in USAF service," it said. "Another source says the United States has managed to obtain more than 25 planes, but has been able to keep only about five in flying condition on a regular basis."

There was no immediate official comment on the story. However, well-informed sources told UPI in independent comments that the United States indeed has some MiGs, but suggested "four or five" as a more accurate figure than 20. They would give no details.

The Journal said the MiGs "are flown regularly from at least one base in the continental United States to perfect air-to-air tactics."

UMW FACTIONS SHOOT IT OUT

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (WP) — An effort to stage a dramatic end to the wildcat strikes that have plagued the Appalachian coalfields for two months collapsed as gunfire was traded in an isolated mountain hollow about 30 miles from here.

No one was injured in the exchange of about 10 rifle shots between rival groups of United Mine Workers members, although police were investigating reports that a work-bound miner was hauled from his pickup truck and beaten early Thursday morning in the same area.

But the shooting was enough to cool any back-to-work ardor that was growing in this core of the West Virginia strike belt.

"I ain't fighting my brother," said one of the more than 100 UMY members who turned out near the entrances to their mines on Cabin Creek to stage a showdown with roving pickets who were keeping the area's mines closed in defiance of a return-to-work order from the UMW's top leaders on Monday.

Malpractice Suits Face Teachers

CHICAGO (AP) — Teachers in the United States face a growing possibility of being sued for malpractice by parents unhappy with their children's schooling, some educationists predict.

"Parents are saying it's the obligation of the school to make sure that their kids are learning," says Dr. Robert Spillane, superintendent of schools in New Rochelle, N.Y.

He raised the issue in an article published in the September issue of Teacher Magazine.

A suit brought by a Long Island, N.Y., couple who say their son was graduated from high school but reads at an elementary school level, is pending in a Suffolk County court.

But an official of the Illinois Education Association said he foresees no serious threat of malpactice suits against teachers.

"For every suit filed against a teacher for malpractice, the teacher could file a countersuit against the parent for mal-parenting," he said.

Spillane disagrees. "The fact that there are poor parents doesn't excuse poor teachers," he said. "Kids are the victims of poor parents, but they don't have to be stuck with poor teachers."

Roger Newell, an education-law specialist for the American Federation of Teachers, says although the number of education malpractice suits is small, "upset parents are increasingly seeing lawsuits as a way of redressing their grievances—and of making money."

Newell said that parents' lawsuits have been unsuccessful so far in courts.

"One judge in his finding in a Connecticut case cautioned his colleagues on the bench not to rule on education-oriented issues because there are so many variables involved," Newell said.

"Since it's an inexact science, there are no specific standards on what's good or bad education," Newell said.

ITU VOTES TO MERGE

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Delegates to the International Typographical Union's annual convention Thursday voted unanimously to proceed with formal negotiations aimed at merging the printing industry union with The Newspaper Guild.

The formal vote was no surprise since leaders of both unions had given strong indications the merger would be approved.

The ITU gathering Wednesday heard an address by Charles A. Perlik Jr., president of the guild, whose union voted earlier this summer to approve the merger.

"We can create a union better equipped in every way to cope with the problems created by a breathtaking technological change," Perlik said, "to maintain itself against employer attacks and to make sure that its members share increasingly in the fruits of an ever more prosperous industry."

The ITU has 100,000 members, the guild has 33,000.

Taiwan Still a Thorn, But Peking Talks Help

PEKING (WP) — U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said after meeting Chairman Hua Kuo-Feng Thursday that his four-day visit to China had helped improve communication between Chinese and U.S. leaders but he indicated no breakthrough on the crucial issue of Taiwan.

Vance declined several opportunities offered by reporters at a press conference today to say his trip had produced progress toward full diplomatic relations between the United States and China. But he and his aides signalled their pleasure at the high-level reception from the Chinese, particularly the one-and-a-half hour meeting today with Hua which was his first with a U.S. official since he succeeded the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung in October.

"I believe that our discussions were important in establishing effective communication between senior officials of our two governments which will continue in the future," Vance said at the press conference in the Minzu Hotel where news reporters are staying. "Our talks enhanced our mutual understanding of our respective positions on a wide range of issues . . . I look forward to continuing our discussions."

The four days of secret talks, good eating, sight-seeing and shopping left the firm impression Peking would let the Carter administration work out a way to persuade the U.S. Congress that Taiwan would not be vulnerable to invasion if Washington removed its troops from the Nationalist Chinese island and transferred the U.S. ambassador to Peking.

As Hua's meeting with Vance began Thursday in the Great Hall of the People, the Communist party leader and premier personally endorsed Vance's cautious statements that the China trip was only an "exploratory" mission, with no major agreements expected.

"We also think it is good for the new Carter administration to send someone here to explore China and get to know the leaders of China and to explore the development of the situation in China."

S. Africa Tightens Screw

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — The lives of South Africa's official non-persons—those under banning orders—may be even further restricted from now on.

The independent South African Institute of Race Relations says 138 people, black and white, now live in varying degrees of isolation under restriction orders served on them under the 1930 Internal Security Act.

The orders differ from person to person. But there are general guidelines that apply to anyone banned. They may not be quoted in the press, they are restricted to their home areas and are forbidden from meeting more than one person at a time.

In what is seen as a legal precedent by some South African lawyers, a Johannesburg magistrate ruled in June that a banned person had contravened her order when she had lunch with one other person.

Although an appeal has been lodged, it is unlikely that it will be heard for several months.

"If this is the law, it is a grave hardship, to prevent two people passing the time of day," said a leading South African lawyer.

The judgment involved Sheila Weinberg, 31, who was banned and placed under house arrest last November after being active in the organization of black trade unions. In common with all banning orders, the letter she received from Justice Minister James Kruger did not give a reason.

Miss Weinberg was charged with communicating with another banned person, Jeanette Curtis, who has since fled South Africa.

But when the case came to court, the magistrate accepted evidence that although Miss Weinberg had been to lunch with a friend in the house where Miss Curtis lived, the two banned people did not meet.

The magistrate dismissed the charge against Miss Weinberg but he ruled that the lunch for two constituted a social gathering and was in breach of her banning order. He sentenced her to nine months' imprisonment, suspended for three years.

In the past, South African police have not prosecuted banned people for meeting with one other person.

"The ruling means that no banned person can have any encounter with another person that is not entirely casual or fortuitous," one lawyer said.

"Any meeting—for lunch, shopping, tea or just a personal chat—that is arranged beforehand will constitute an offence for which the banned person may very likely go to jail."

Lawyers also fear the implications of the judgment on the family life of banned people.

The whole question of meetings between husband and wife, parent and child or brother and sister was brought into issue by the Weinberg ruling, lawyers said.

Miss Weinberg has a three-year-old son, but it is doubtful whether she could be banned from sitting down at table with him, one lawyer said.

A spokesman for Justice Minister Kruger's office said the Johannesburg magistrate's ruling did not represent a change in government policy.

But there are 138 people in South Africa waiting to see whether the ruling presages a change in their already-limited lifestyle.

SEARCH FOR HIGH LEADS TO POISON

VANCOUVER (CP)—A botany professor at University of British Columbia says almost two-thirds of the reported cases of persons being poisoned by mushrooms in B.C. are the result of their search for a euphoric high.

Dr. Robert Bandoni, co-author of the book, Guide to Common Mushrooms of B.C., said the number of poisonings has increased dramatically in recent years and the age of those consuming mushrooms is dropping.

Recently six teen-agers from Victoria became ill after eating amanita pantherina, a species of mushroom which grows abundantly on Vancouver Island.

The mushroom contains several poisons, one of them mycoatropine, a toxin which quickly brings on symptoms of behavior suggesting alcoholic intoxication, including muscle spasms, excitement and hallucination.

A second poison, muscarine, causes profuse sweating, reduction in the pulse rate and constriction of the pupils.

What the youths probably thought they were eating were psilocybin mushrooms, which have temporary side-effects but result in hallucinatory experiences, with no long-lasting or fatal consequences.

Bandoni said other poisonings result from amateur mushroom hunters who think they are eating an edible variety and small children who eat them out of curiosity.

Most mushrooms are not poisonous and many are highly prized for their flavor, Bandoni said, but there is always the chance a person without considerable experience with mushrooms will make a mistake in identification.

In addition, different people might have different reactions to the same mushroom.

The risk of illness and possible death isn't worth the gamble of eating something you're not absolutely sure of, Bandoni said.

Experts Conflict Over Effects of Pornography

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Conflicting views on the public good of pornography were presented Thursday in provincial court at the trial of a storekeeper charged with possessing obscene literature for purpose of sale.

The trial reconvened Thursday after a three-month adjournment to give Crown counsel Winton Derby time to prepare rebuttal to defence testimony May 25 which suggested that pornography may have social benefit.

Dr. John Duffy, a forensic psychiatrist with the attorney-general's ministry, told Judge E. J. Cronin that it is part of his job to evaluate sex offenders for sentencing, parole and treatment, and that as a result, he obtains all relevant police reports on the individuals.

"Although I haven't specifically addressed myself to pornography, it is my clinical experience that many sex offenders, when arrested, are found to possess pornographic material, either in their pockets, cars or homes," he said.

Six city merchants were charged in mid-March after a series of raids by city RCMP following citizen complaints. The present trial deals only with charges against Eddie's News Stand, owned by John and Joyce Micholuk, and is a test for the other charges.

Books seized are novelettes, selling for about $2.95 each.

Defence lawyer Don Silversides of Prince Rupert has based his case on a subsection of the Criminal Cide which states that there cannot be a conviction of publishing, possessing or selling obscene material if it is established that the public good was served.

Earlier Thursday, defence witness Dr. Ehor Boyanowski, criminology professor at Simon Fraser University, testified that liberalization of Danish pornography laws in the mid-1960s coincided with a decrease of child molesting.

He said that a study from 1962 to 1969 indicated that while the amount of erotic available increased dramatically, there was a 69 per cent decrease in child molesting and a significant decrease in reported incidents of peeping toms and indecent exposure.

He said he believes that the Danish experience could be extrapolated to North America and that "there is a strong trend indicating that with increased dissemination of erotica, there is a decrease in sexual crimes other than rape."

He said pornography is not a factor in rape cases because it is a violent crime and other variables are involved.

Boyanowski said erotica is useful in improving relations between husbands and wives and to release sexual frustrations of people without a regular sex partner.

He said the seized literature was "mild to innocuous compared to the variety and intensity of material sold openly in stores."

Duffy said the Danish study time period was too short and that crime statistics and availability of erotica could not be correlated to show any benefits of pornography. In addition, he said, the results could not be extrapolated to North America.

He said that, as a psychiatrist, he believes that people who seek erotica to aid sexual relations are seeking relief from the real world, and that it does not help the person correct the problem in the long run.

The trial continues.

Whale Hunters Sighted

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace Foundation reported Thursday that its anti-whale hunt protest vessel James Bay sighted Soviet whaling vessels Wednesday evening about 900 miles due west of San Francisco.

Greenpeace president Patrick Moore said the sighting of the ships, only five days after James Bay left San Francisco, "means that we can stay with them longer than before because our fuel reserves are very good."

This is the second time this summer the Canadian protest vessel has followed the Soviet fleet in an effort to end the whale hunt.

Kennedy Judgment Reserved

VANCOUVER (CP) — An immigration appeal board reserved judgment Thursday night following a hearing into a request by suspected IRA activist James Kennedy that he be set free while continuing his fight against deportation to Ireland.

Board chairman Janet Scott said the decision would come at the "earliest possible moment."

Kennedy, believed by immigration authorities to be James McCann, a man accused of terrorist-type activities in Ireland, Britain and Europe, has been in prison since his arrest on May 27.

Kennedy, who denies he is McCann, with ordered deported on July 14. He is appealing that order to the courts and wants to be free in the interim.

Crown counsel William Scarth presented two witnesses who testified the Kennedy made threatening comments to them.

John Betteridge, a special inquiry officer who delivered the deportation order to Kennedy, testified that Kennedy called him a "fascist pig" who would one day find himself before an Irish tribunal.

Philip Hasset, an immigration officer, who along with another immigration officer and four RCMP officers, arrested Kennedy, said Kennedy initially offered to leave the country voluntarily.

While this was rejected, Hasset said that Kennedy told him that Kennedy's arrest would have a "ripple" effect — a reference presumably to Kennedy's associates in Ireland — and that Hasset could one day find himself "peeled like an apple."

Defence counsel Dan Chilcott extracted admissions from both men that they have suffered verbal abuse from other persons against whom they have taken action.

Kennedy told the board that he belonged to the Sinn Fein provisionals, a political organization dedicated to the reunification of Ireland, but never to the IRA.

In his summation, Chilcott labelled as "shaky" the government's evidence that Kennedy is McCann, and said the presecutor had failed to shake the testimony of character witnesses.

Scarth said in his summation that Kennedy could disappear should he be set free pending a court fight over deprotation, and that he could be a public danger.

The hearing opened at 10 a.m. and adjourned about 9:30 p.m. with breaks for meals.

Does Grace Approve of Philippe?

MONTE CARLO (AP) — Princess Caroline of Monaco and her French fiance, Philippe Junot, will marry here next June, palace sources said Thursday. But some questioned whether her parents, Prince Rainier and Princess Grace, favor the match.

The parents announced the engagement of their 20-year-old daughter to a man 17 years her senior in a statement Thursday. Princess Grace is the former American movie actress Grace Kelly.

Before noon, Caroline was whispering in the ear of Junot, described as a financial adviser, and holding his hand for the benefit of photographers at her parents' palace overlooking the Mediterranean.

An engagement ring, a large sapphire surrounded by diamonds, was on her left hand.

Reporters were not allowed to ask questions of the couple or of Princess Grace and Prince Rainier, who posed briefly with them and Junot's parents.

The enforced discretion about the engagement and an unusually tense atmosphere at the photo session buttressed reports that Caroline's parents are not enthusiastic about Junot.

Caroline, tall, slender and dark-haired, inherited her mother's beauty and was considered among Europe's most eligible young ladies. Gossip columns had once linked her with Britain's Prince Charles.

Junot, 37, is the son of Michel Junot, a former French national assembly deputy who now is a Paris city councilman, assistant to the mayor and ombudsman. His mother is of Danish origin.

Junot is said to like riding and skiing, but he has been better known in Paris as a habitue of fashionable discotheques.

Newspaper stories about the couple said they met two years ago at the opening of Regine's, a fashionable discothequue in New York City. But the oficial Monaco government statement announcing the engagement said the princess and Junot met "at the home of mutual friends in December, 1975."

Wrong Body Was Sent Home

BASEL, Switzerland — the Basel State Hospital said Thursday they told the wrong parents their daughter had died because a family member identified the wrong body.

The mix-up involved two girls — Henriette Blokland, 16, of Holland and a 20-year-old Swiss, Ruth Haberthur. They were both seriously injured in the same car crash near Basel July 31.

"Immediately after the accident, we asked Ruth's brother to identify his sister," a hospital spokeswoman said.

Bernhard Habethur, 27, took Henriette for his sister, she said. "Both girls were covered with blood and they looked alike," she added.

In the meantime, Ruth died and her body was sent to Holland, where it was cremated Aug. 5.

Last Sunday nurses at the hospital noticed the mix-up when Henriette came out of a coma and began speaking Dutch.

A HIDDEN STING IN GROUCHO WILL

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — The bulk of Groucho Marx's estate—tentatively valued at from $2.8 million to $6 million—will be divided evenly among his three children with $150,000 going to his longtime companion Erin Fleming who also was given supervision of the late comedian's business affairs.

Marx's last will and testament, dated Sept. 24, 1974, was filed Wednesday in superior court. The master of the zany adlib died last Friday night of pneumonia at age 86.

The will contained a provision designed to prevent a challenge to the estate. It stipulated that if any heir named in the will challenged it in court, that heir would receive only $1 with the remainder of his bequest given to the Jewish Federation Council of Greater Los Angeles.

Marx's will directed that the bulk of his estate be divided among his three children — Arthur J. Marx, 56, a movie and television writer, and daughters Miriam Ruth Allen of Culver City, Calif., and Melinda Berti of Mendocino, Calif.

Marx's entire collection of memorabilia, including photographs, scripts, films, his Academy Award Oscar and other items were left to the Smithsonian Institution along with "such other items as Erin Fleming determines."

The comedian also bequeathed $50,000 to his sole surviving brother, Zeppo Marx, 76, of Cathedral City, Calif.

Even as Schizophrenic, Berkowitz Faces Trial

NEW YORK — David Berkowitz, the man accused in New York's six .44-calibre killings, probably will be diagnosed a paranoid schizophrenic, according to the Daily News. That would not necessarily mean that Berkowitz, who allegedly left notes signed "Son of Sam," might avoid a trial. Even with a diagnosis of schizophrenia, he can be ruled competent to stand trial if he understands the nature of the charges against him and can participate in his own defence. The newspaper quotes sources close to the psychiatric team examing Berkowitz as saying he fits many of the classic patterns of abnormality. They said some experts believed Berkowitz suffered from a breakdown of sanity during late adolescence. An opinion on whether Berkowitz is fit to stand trial is expected Tuesday.

MORRISVILLE, N.C. — Actor Dan Dailey will undergo surgery for a fractured hip suffered when he fell during a performance of the "Odd Couple" Thursday afternoon at the Village Dinner Theatre. Dailey, 63, was taken to Rex Hospital in Raleigh but surgery was postponed because of other medical problems discovered during the examination, said Dr. George Edwards, who refused to explain the additional problems. Susanna Bridge, general manager of the theatre, said Dailey tripped over a coffee table during a third act scuffle. The rest of the matinee performance was cancelled.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Gov. George Wallace's wife, Cornelia, missed the birthday party his cabinet and staff threw for him Thursday. When asked about Mrs. Wallace's absence from the capitol party, Wallace said she was at the Governor's Mansion arranging a small birthday party for the family. Wallace was 58 Thursday. The Wallaces have not been seen in public since it was learned a few weeks ago that Wallace had hired a lawyer to seek a divorce. He has refused comment on their apparent domestic problems.

SAN FRANCISCO — Wind stopped an attempt by Jack Ford, son of the former U.S. president, to fly in an 80-foot, hot-air balloon across San Francisco Bay to promote the new magazine Outside. The balloon was inflated at Fisherman's Wharf Thursday, but 20-mile-an-hour gusts made it impossible to raise it above the wicker basket which was to have carried Ford and David Levin, a professional balloonist. Ford, assistant to the publisher of Outside, Rolling Stone's new sister publication, said the flight was planned "to do something special" on the day the magazine's first edition appeared.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Actress Britt Eklund will receive $2,500 a month from singer Rod Stewart until a court hearing next month determines whether she is entitled to a property settlement for the 2½ years sre lived with the rock music star. In a judgment in Superior Court, Stewart also agreed to pay the mortgage, taxes, utilities, maintenance and all domestic salaries for the fashionable 2½-acre Holmby Hills estate that the couple shared. The 34-year-old actress sued Stewart earlier this week for $15 million, citing a state Supreme Court case that says unmarried couples who live together may have implicit contractual community-property arrangements.

Camp Buses Crash

MONTICELLO, N.Y. (AP) — Twenty-six children aged nine to 12 were taken to Community General Hospital Wednesday for treatment of minor injuries sustained in the collision of two camp buses. The Sullivan County sheriff's office ordered Arnold Johnson, 30, driver of the bus, booked for driving while intoxicated.

THIS OPERA STAR PACKED A PISTOL

VANCOUVER — New York Metropolitan opera singer James Morris, scheduled for two major roles with the Vancouver Opera Association's 1977 fall productions, has pleaded guilty in provincial court to possessing a restricted firearm.

Morris, 30, was charged after city police found him with a 9-mm Walther pistol. Oe told Judge Arthur Beirnes he had shown the gun to a prostitute in his car and that she had pointed him out to police.

Immigration officials are also investigating Morris' actions in driving into Canada with the unregistered handgun, which he said was needed to protect his wife and daughter during the drive across the United States from New York.

Morris testified that he had picked up the prostitute and was driving her to her home when they began discussing guns. He said he told the woman he felt it necessary to keep one in his car, and that she asked to have a look at it.

She asked to get out of the car when he showed her the pistol, Morris said, and then walked to a nearby police vehicle and reported him.

Morris has sung in two previous VOA productions, one in 1976 and one earlier this year.

Free Baby Whale For Movie—Paper

A Nanaimo newspaper is promoting a drive to have the sick killer whale Miracle released and a movie made of her in the wild.

While Sealand staff continued to nurse Miracle in the salt water pool of the Oak Bay Beach Hotel today, Stanley Burke, of the Nanaimo Times is calling for the calf's release when well so an expedition headed by Bruce Bott can try to communicate with Miracle in the wild.

They hope to make a movie of the experiments.

Burke, whose paper is sponsoring a fund for the expedition, says "this can be a lot of fun and a real breakthrough."

Bott and three companions received a federal grant of $14,000 in 1973 and bought the 32-foot yawl Four Winds to experiment with whale communication in the wild.

Fisheries and Environment Minister Romeo LaBlanc will be asked to become involved in the future of the whale, Burke said today.

Burke, said a letter will be sent to LeBlanc asking him to appoint a representative on an advisory committee that is to be formed.

The Nanaimo Times has contributed $500 toward the save Miracle fund and is trying to enlist the support of Nanaimo residents.

The newspaper says Bott, a former Sealand employee, does not want any money for himself or the use of his boat. He does, however, ask for $25,000 for "communications and film-making equipment".

Sealand manager Angus Matthews said today, "They're trying to raise money on a sick killer whale while I'm down here trying to save her."

Sealand president Bob Wright likened the Nanaimo campaign to the sale of Elvis Presley T-shirts outside the Presley mansion after the singer's death.

Dr. Michael Bigg, of the fisheries research department in Nanaimo, considered a leading expert on killer whales in B.C. says he doesn't feel it is safe to return Miracle to the sea.

But one of Burke's supporters, Dr. Bill Evans, director of a seaworld research centre in California, believes Miracle can be returned to the wild through a program of careful planning.

Meanwhile, the 24-hour watch over Miracle has now been boosted from two to three people at all times.

Her daily intake of antibiotics has also been increased after blood tests revealed that the white cell count had jumped from 7,000 to 9,400, the second highest since the treatments began.

Sidney Pilot Winner

Sidney pilot John W. Kaiser was the highest placing Canadian competitor in the World Light Aeroplane Championships, held in Wels, Austria, this month.

Former manager of the Victoria Flying Club, Kaiser, of 2032 Ardwell, placed 29th in the championships which were contested by pilots from 16 countries.

Also on the Canadian team were Angus Gordon, chief flying instructor of the St. Catherine Flying Club, and Yves Boudreau, chief flying instructor of the Longueille club in Montreal. Gordon was 31st and Boudreau, 42nd.

Kaiser, who was manager of the Canadian team, is a retired lieutenant-colonel from the Royal Canadian Air Force.

This is the first time Canada has entered the championships, which were won by the Swedish team. Next came teams from Poland and Austria.

MRS. GANDHI'S SON JEERED BY CROWDS

NEW DELHI (AP) — Sanjay Gandhi, son of the former Indian prime minister, was jostled and jeered by a crowd of several hundred persons today when he made a brief court appearance.

Spectators crowded the courtroom and some shouted, "Death to Sanjay Gandhi", as the hearing ended. A small group of the former politician's supporters countered with cries of "Long live Sanjay Gandhi."

Gandhi, 30, was allowed to post $1,150 bail to avoid arrest in connection with allegations that he improperly influenced the sale of defective purification chemicals to the Delhi waterworks. Another hearing was set for Sept. 29.

Youths Tell Camp Probe They Would Gladly Return

SASKATOON (CP) — Seven youths testifying at a northern wilderness camps inquiry Thursday said they would like to return to the camps if they are reopened.

They told district court judge J. H. Maher that they do not like living in group homes where they have been billeted since the camps were closed last February.

The camps were closed by the Department of Northern Saskatchewan (DNS).

The witnesses, all testifying under anonymity imposed by the judge, also told the inquiry they did not consider punishment meted out to be too harsh and that they would change little, if anything, in the camps' operating structure.

All youths who have testified so far at the inquiry are still under the jurisdiction of the Ranch Ehrlo Society which operated the camps, designed to assist in rehabilitating youths who had been in trouble with the law.

Many of the allegations which led to the closing of the camps were contained in reports prepared by RCMP officers and DNS social workers who questioned the youths about their treatment in the camps.

Judge Maher has told each of the youths who have testified that he wishes to receive information about the camps directly from them because other information presented at the inquiry has been third and second-hand.

Some of the youths have testified that they have seen youths slapped or hit by camp staff but that such discipline was not excessive.

The inquiry continues today.

Satellite Launched

CAPE CANAVERAL (Reuter) — A Delta rocket roared off its launch pad Thursday to carry Sirio, Italy's first experimental communications satellite, into space. The satellite was headed towards a highly elliptical transfer orbit ranging from 145 miles to more than 23,000 miles in space.

JOURNEY PROVES UNITY'S STRONG

Canadians are in love with their country, says Gordon Head resident Nicole Ford after a 6,000-mile trip through Canada.

She says she is convinced 35 per cent of the people want Canada to stay together.

Mrs. Ford, son Donald, 6, and two others left Victoria July 4 in a battered station wagon and pulling a trailer-load of clothes and other articles for the fire-ravaged Ontario town of Cobalt where more than 400 people were left homeless after a May 23 fire.

Along the way she collected other goods and a feeling about Canada and the question of unity.

The 33-year-old bilingual native of Trois Rivieres, Que., said she was fired by the emotions of those with whom she discussed Canada's future.

And she is seeking an audience with Prime Minister Trudeau to tell him of the support she has found for Canadian unity.

Mrs. Ford began a diary and collected mementoes and now has 13 large scrapbooks and several boxes full of notes, poems and songs praising Canada.

"Each of them has a story," she said. "Each of them says something about how beautiful our country is and how much the people care about it."

Mrs. Ford and her family have lived in Victoria for five years. Her husband and two other children did not accompany her on her personal summer project.

BCFP's Victoria's Mill Back at Work

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

B.C. Forest Products' sawmill and plywood divisions in Victoria are back in operation after striking welders and automotive mechanics removed their picket line today.

The employees walked off the job Wednesday over a wage issue which, at one point earlier this week, idled over 4,000 Vancouver Island sawmill and plywood mill workers.

The Victoria members of the International Woodworkers of America removed their pickets at 6 p.m. Thursday and mill operations resumed at 8 a.m. this morning.

Murray Drew, vice-president of the IWA's Victoria local, said today the workers' went back because they feel they have made their point.

"But the problem hasn't gone away," he said, adding that if it isn't resolved, "it will continue to fester."

The welders and mechanics are protesting a change two years ago which dropped them to 10 cents an hour below tradesmen, such as electricians and millwrights.

The issue was part of the IWA's demands in current negotiations with the forest industry but the union dropped it from its list of proposals.

MacMillan Bloedel employees at Port Alberni, who went on strike Wednesday decided Thursday to remain on the job and operations are normal there today.

However, about 1,000 workers continue to be affected in the Duncan-Lake Cowichan areas as strong support for the welders and mechanics continues.

Bob Rogers, second vice-president of the Duncan local, said today the picket lines are being reinforced as more tradesmen turn out in support of the cause.

He said the area is the "nerve centre" of the tradesmen's problem.

Still shut down as a result of the strike are BCFP's Youbou sawmill, Western Forest Industry's Honeymoon Bay operation, Doman's sawmill at Cowichan Bay and Doman's Transport at Mesachie Lake.

Some logging operations are also affected as employees honor picket lines on the roads along Lake Cowichan.

In Vancouver, some progress is reported in the contract negotiations for coast IWA workers.

The union agreed to a proposal for a two-year agreement. The main stumbling block remaining is wages.

IWA negotiators have branded as unacceptable an industry offer of a $1-an-hour increase over the two-year period.

That is the same offer rejected by pulp and paper workers and Syd Thompson, IWA Vancouver local president, said if it is not good enough for them "it's not good enough for us."

However, Thompson said he has been of the opinion from the start that "we'll get a settlement without an all-out war, and I'm still of that opinion."

Fort Zoning Views Studied

Victoria city council will meet in committee next week to weigh a proposed new zoning category for Fort Street, which was aired at a lengthy public hearing Thursday.

The draft amendments to the zoning bylaw are aimed at ensuring that only small-scale redevelopment occur along Fort between the middle of the 800-block and Cook Street, and that street frontage space is occupied by stores rather than business offices or financial institutions.

The intention is to preserve the area's village-like atmosphere of busy retail activity.

Business owners and tenants who appeared at Thursday's hearing fell into two camps.

In favor of the zoning strategy were small store proprietors, particularly antique dealers, who expressed concern that without such controls the street's character would steadily decline as smaller businesses were squeezed out by banks, credit unions and the like.

But strongly opposed were the owners of buildings housing business and professional offices. They complained that the move would make their premises non-conforming, so that in the event of fire damage or the buildings being left vacant for more than 30 days, the basic use of the property would have to change.

Barrister Halet Hallat, partner in a law firm with offices on Fort, warned that if council approved the bylaw it would not be assuring improved design in redevelopment.

He said a good standard of design and development is determined by the ability of commercial tenants to afford the rents which make the original investment feasible, and tenants such as financial institutions insist on ground-floor accommodation.

In the city's approach, however, "you are not legislating good taste . . . you will still get the junk," Hallat said.

Several antique dealers told council that Fort Street's collection of antique stores is unique in North America and should be preserved from the encroachment of business and professional offices.

The stores are a valuable source of tourist dollars to the city but they are "in danger of being killed if nothing is done," warned one delaer.

TOWN TALK

"Is there still a ban on burning?" the caller asked the Saanich fire department.

Yes, the fire official said, but it would probably be lifted next morning following this week's rain.

The lady caller thanked him and hung up.

A few minutes later, the phone at the firehall rang again.

"Could you please help me?" the same woman pleaded. "My living room is full of smoke and cinders."

What happened? Well, it seems when the caller was told the burning ban was still in effect, she poured water on the fire she had lit in her living room fireplace.

The Queen may soon be dining on such delicacies as Old Fashioned Figged Duff, Efo Iro (Nigerian spinach) or Cream of Fiddlehead Soup.

They're among the recipes contained in a Jubilee cookbook entitled Special Commonwealth Recipes, compiled by the Vancouver Island branch of the Royal Commonwealth Society. A copy was sent to the Queen.

The silver-covered cookbook contains recipes from each province and 35 branches of the Commonwealth Society as well as excerpts from remarks made by Commonwealth leaders.

A letter from Buckingham Palace to Lilian Chambers, president of the Vancouver Island branch, states that Her Majesty "is delighted with her copy."

A crime prevention presentation produced for the Saanich police department may soon be used throughout Canada.

The eight-minute presentation, prepared for the department's Neighborhood Watch program, features slide pictures of actual burglaries, a narration and a musical theme.

Saanich police Chief Bob Peterson said a number of chiefs attending the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police convention at the Empress say it's the best crime-prevention presentation they've seen and indications are it will be used in cities across the country.

The program, entitled The Accomplice, was funded by the Saanich Rotary Club and prepared by some of the bright lights who work for C-FAX radio station in Victoria.

When Mary Ann Anderson went on a fishing-cum-sailing trip to Campbell River recently with her uncle, David Anderson, it wasn't too surprising that she wore a T-shirt bearing the slogan "True Grit".

Anderson, after all, is a former leader of the Liberal party in B.C.

The T-shirt, however, led to an encounter and a conversation that Mary Ann, 15, won't soon forget.

Turns out John (Duke) Wayne, star of True Grit and a hundred other movies, was up in Campbell River on one of his frequent fishing trips.

Wayne saw the slogan and after a long and fairly complicated explanation by Anderson that True Grit related to the Liberal party and not the movie, Wayne autographed the shirt.

Mary Ann's father, Malcolm, says he understands that his brother's attempts to explain the Liberal party to Wayne (who tends to be rather rightish in political outlook) had to be heard to be believed.

Youthful Gusto Brings Improvement To Parks

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Provincial marine parks off the Saanich peninsula were upgraded this summer, thanks to 12 members of a youth crew who tackled their jobs with such gusto that park officials hope to have them back next year.

The boys, age 15 and 16, all from the interior and employed by the parks branch, returned to their homes Thursday.

They were responsible for park maintenance, building trails and carrying out a number of improvements to Sidney Spit Park, Princess Margaret Park on Portland Island, Ruckle Park on Salt Spring Island and Bamberton Park.

"It has been an active season for marine parks," said Don Carruthers, superintendent of the Malahat District office at Goldstream Park. "We accomplished things. Next summer we hope to continue expanding our marine park facilities."

He said the youth crew was largely responsible for this year's successes.

The 724-acre Sidney Island park received the most attention because of the heavy use it gets from boaters and campers. It was not uncommon to see more than 200 boats anchored off the spit at one time.

Twenty-five mooring rings were installed, but these were taxed to the limit by rafting — boats tying up to one another and relying on a single ring for anchorage.

"I have never seen the park and the achorage so heavily used," said Carruthers. "The campsites were continually occupied. The park at times was overrun with boaters."

Two extra toilets were installed and the park generally cleaned up.

Next year, the park branch plans to install an extra 100 feet of wharfage, complete with two dingy floats, at its Sidney Island Park.

Trails were also brushed out at Ruckle and Princess Margaret Park and next summer new ones will be established, Carruthers said.

The boys who looked after the marine parks were only part of a 357-youth work force employed this summer in provincial parks. They were camped on Princess Margaret Park.

It was the first time a youth crew had been employed for the marine parks off the south end of the Island. In previous years, a youth camp was maintained on Newcastle Island off Nanaimo.

The main objects of youth crews is to give young people meaningful work and to provide them with outdoor experiences. For the majority, it is the first time they have been away from home, working and living among their peers.

Garry Schwabe, senior foreman, said it was a unique experience for the 12 youths from the interior.

"For many it was the first time they had seen the sea," he said.

Dave Grieve of Fruitvale agreed.

"The first thing I did when I got here was to taste the sea — to find out if it was really salty, he said.

Scott Austin of Summerland said it was his first time he had been on the islands.

"I found living on an Island, isolated from towns and cities, quite an experience," he said.

The youths were all fascinated with the sea life.

JOB SCHEME SET FOR 40 DROPOUTS

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

A new job program for school dropouts will be launched in September, it was announced today.

A budget of $25,000 will find work for 40 Victoria students and more funds will be made available as the need grows.

The announcement was made jointly this morning by Canada Manpower and Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

"This program will assist young people who need help the most," chamber manager Brian Small said.

"These (dropouts) are the last to be hired and the first to get into trouble. Many of them quit and just hang around the school creating trouble. Often they persuade other kids to quit. This program will help to solve many different social problems."

The program evolved out of a summer work project for dropouts.

"We soon saw the need for something on a year-round basis because students drop out of school during the school year," Small said.

Canada Manpower arranged a pilot project in Victoria with five dropouts in February under the direction of job education director Susan Ballor.

The project was successful; three students have decided to return to school in September and the other two have found permanent employment.

The new program will be called JET, for Job Education and Training, and will be co-ordinated through the Canada Manpower office.

Students who want assistance through JET, apply to their school counsellor, who will refer them to the program.

The federal government pays 50 per cent of the salary to a maximum of $600 for nine weeks of employment. When they complete their term of work they may decide to return to school, take permanent work or enter another Canada Manpower job assistance program.

"This will get them through the very difficult period when they first leave school," Small said.

"Many of these students have heavy problems. There may be a broken home or personality conflicts. If they drop out of school with no place to go, they are likely to get into trouble."

Small said he is recommending to the schools that students who decide to return after working for nine weeks get classroom credit for their job experience rather than being penalized for missing school.

The ideal situation, he said, is for the employer to give the student a part-time job at the conclusion of the program so he or she can return to school and still have an income.

"Often a lack of money is a major factor in students dropping out of school."

Small and Ballor co-ordinated the summer work program for dropouts, which will be repeated next summer in addition to the new work project. There were 85 employed this summer.

Small said he will recommend to Ottawa and to the provincial government that all job-finding programs for young people be co-ordinated through Canada Manpower to avoid confusion.

"There should be a central clearing office for these programs and Manpower is the local place."

Second Escaper Caught

The second of three inmates who vanished from Willliam Head federal prison overnight July 14 has been nabbed by police.

Ronald Joseph Tupholme, 28, was picked up in Ontario earlier this week.

He appeared in provincial court Thursday charged with escape and was remanded to next Wednesday for plea.

Tupholme's arrest leaves only Alain Joseph Lalumiere, 22, still at large.

The body of the third inmate, Michael Lloyd Armstrong, was found in the sea off the prison Aug. 13.

An inquest into Armstrong's death begins next Tuesday.

Meanwhile, a warrant has been issued for the arrest of William Head inmate Jamie William Ramsey, 22, who failed to return to the prison Thursday night after being issued a day pass.

Ramsey was on day parole.

He was serving three years for a Vancouver robbery and was due for release on July 15, 1978.

He is described as 5 feet, 11 inches tall, 160 pounds with hazel eyes, black hair and has a tatoo of a star on his right shoulder.

$87,790.26 Going Down The Drain?

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The Capital Regional Board will pay its engineering consultants $87,790.26 for designing a sewage pumping station at McMicking Point which will probably never be built.

That's part of an agreement hammered out by regional directors behind closed doors in recent weeks to cover their working arrangement with Ker, Priestman and Associates Ltd. on a $10 million sewage project centred on Clover Point.

The contract comes 3½ years after Ker, Priestman began work on the job, the board having earlier rejected a number of draft agreements.

Under terms of the contract, made available Thursday, the consultants will be paid $670,564.86 for work they and subconsultants have done to the end of April this year.

The regional board will pay another $174,941 for the consulting work needed to finish the job about the end of next year, for a total of $845,505.86.

The regional board is acting for Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich and it is taxpayers in these municipalities who will foot the bill. Victoria's share is about half, Oak Bay's 38.5 per cent and Saanich's almost 11 per cent.

At present almost 9 million gallons of raw sewage are discharged daily near shore from outfalls at Clover and McMicking Points.

As first planned, the project would have seen it all pumped out a 6,400-foot outfall off Clover Point. But the big McMicking Point pump station that would have required was vigorously opposed by neighbors and later by Oak Bay council.

An alternate plan will see the McMicking outfall extended to about 600 feet, if the Pollution Control Branch approves, and tested for a year. Meanwhile, the giant pumping station at Clover Point is near completion and the outfall under construction.

The change came after Ker, Priestman had produced a detailed design for the McMicking pump station.

Earlier this year, some regional board members had questioned whether the consultants had ever been given authority to proceed with the McMicking design.

The board had its lawyer review the situation and directors were told Ker, Priestman had been given such authority. The lawyer and consultants also worked out the agreement finally ratified by the board.

McKenzie Draws Mayor's Rebuke

Victoria Mayor Mike Young rebuked Ald. Ron McKenzie at Thursday's city council meeting for making public statements about the central library relocation proposal at variance with council's own stand on the issue — which McKenzie himself earlier supported.

"If members of council have supported a motion, I don't expect them to turn around later and make public statements which are not in support of that action," said Young.

"We can't conduct business that way."

Young said it is not "courteous" for the alderman to have made comments in the press about the matter without first raising it before council.

He was referring to McKenzie's recent suggestion that the four core municipalities consider purchasing the Monteal Trust Building at 1061 Fort Street as a new home for the central library. The alderman had earlier supported a council motion that the municipalities lease space from the provincial government in the new provincial building at Blanshard and Broughton.

When McKenzie acted on the mayor's suggestion that he call for city council reconsideration of the matter, he was unable to get a seconder for the motion.

Young commented: "Now I know where you stand and I know where council stands on this matter."

BREAK-IN BREAKOUT

Victoria police are investigating a rash of break-ins in the Vic West area Thursday.

A spokesman said seven homes on Alderman, Northcott, Selkirk and Connaught were broken into between 4 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Only small amounts of cash were reported missing.

Guilty Plea to Bank Holdup

A Saanich teen-ager pleaded guilty in county court today to armed robbery of $21,062 from the Royal Bank of Canada, 2373 Tillicum, on Jan. 11.

Harold Einar Hemstad, 19, of 649 Baxter, also pleaded guilty to unlawful confinement of George Carroll, 26, on the same day.

Circumstances were not given in court.

The prosecution entered a stay of proceedings on four other counts of the indictment, including kidnapping Carroll, auto theft, theft of a revolver and possession of stolen property.

Hemstad will be sentenced Sept. 22 after receipt of a presentence report.

A second person who had been jointly accused with Hemstad had his case put over to Oct. 21 to fix a trial date.

24-Hour Contact Lenses Safe: Specialist

An improved water-content contact lens which can be worn 24 hours a day is safe if prescribed and properly fitted by a physician, Dr. A. N. North, Victoria eye specialist, said Thursday.

He was commenting on a statement by Dr. Irving Baker, chief registrar of the Toronto College of Optometrists, that there hasn't been enough research on the effects of wearing lenses 24-hours a day.

"As far as the industry is concerned, we have addressed our members not to prescribe or fit these kinds of soft lenses," Irving said.

The lenses are made of 80 to 85 per cent water.

Irving's views followed similar warning by the United States Food and Drug Administration that not enough research has been done.

The federal health protection branch has reservations about the contacts, but has allowed them on the market as there has been no complaints.

North said there is nothing wrong with the lenses. They have been tested and used in Britain and Europe. He said he has been supplying them to patients.

"The United States lags far behind Europe in the use of these lenses," he said. "That's mainly because FDA regulations require elaborate and rigid testing of new products."

He said the problems arising from wearing water-contact lenses, which originated in Czechoslovakia, stem from promotion and marketing.

"When they are sold to anyone without prescription or proper fittings, there is bound to be trouble," he said. "They are expensive, between $300 and $400."

He said some people can wear them for long periods without taking them out and having them cleaned. Others can't, however, because of lack of moisture in their eyes or for other reasons. They have to be removed and cleaned periodically.

North said water-content lenses are useful for the aged, who may lack the manual dexterity to remove conventional lenses.

"They are an improvement, but should only be worn if they have been prescribed and properly fitted," he said.

Sounders In Final

SEATTLE (AP) — Jockey Scott scored on a short header off an assist by Jimmy Robbertson in the first half to lead Seattle Sounders to a 1-0 playoff victory over Los Angeles Aztecs Thursday night and into the North American Soccer League championship finals.

The victory, before a Kingdome crowd of 56,256, gave the Sounders a two-game series sweep of the Aztecs and the Pacific Conference title. Seattle won the first game 3-1 at Los Angeles last Sunday.

Sounders will meet New York Cosmos in Soccer Bowl '77 Sunday at Portland's Civic Stadium.

Cosmos won the Atlantic Conference crown with a victory over Rochester Wednesday night.

Seattle's defenders, particularly Adrian Webster, did a good job throughout the game of keeping the ball away from the Aztecs' star forward George Best.

Not Much Time For Point Leader

Maybe it isn't too late for Jim Caudwell after all.

Until last weekend it was beginning to look as if Bob Collins had the Vancouver Island superstock championship all but won. But Caudwell, who was falling farther behind his fellow-Victoria opponent, pulled a mild upset Saturday at Oyster River Speedway near Campbell River by beating Collins in the feature.

That leaves Caudwell only 159 points back of Collins going into Saturday night's superstock program at Western Speedway. But time in on Collins' side because there are only three race dates left after Saturday.

Time is running out on third-place Jerry Ferrie, however, who has had a couple of disappointing finishes and has dropped back to third place, 222 points behind Caudwell.

The hobby stock class has this weekend off.

Rocks Leave 'em Limp

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

The Shamrocks did it differently Thursday night, but still with a flare for the dramatic, and few if any of the 3,805 fans present — the largest crowd in some years — will soon forget it. Vancouver Burrards, perhaps never.

The Shamrocks won their third game of the best-of-seven Western Lacrosse Association final series from Burrards 11-9, in yet another of the cliffhangers that has marked the playoff.

But how they did it is what left everyone limp.

They won by coming from behind in the last three minutes of the game after never having been ahead until then. In their other wins they had nearly always been on top.

And they won it by scoring three goals in a span of 35 seconds to literally snatch victory away from a Burrard team that really didn't deserve that kind of a fate.

Burrards had never trailed through the first two periods and late into the third, but the Shamrocks had never fallen more than one goal behind either until Pat Ryan of Burrards scored at 4:43 of the third period. That's the kind of a game it was.

Ryan's goal gave Burrards an 8-6 edge. A short while later, it was Burrards 9, Victoria 7, and that's when the turnabout started.

Big Dave Thomson picked his way through the Burrard defence to beat goalie Dave Evans cleanly to set the pattern.

Ivan Thompson, the leading scorer of the playoffs, took the hint and raced in alone to score the tying goal unassisted. It was his third of the game.

Just 16 seconds later, rookie Doug Angrove, up from McDonald's juniors, got what was his most important goal ever — for the Shamrocks.

Angrove outhustled Burrards to a loose ball in the corner, cut in front of Evans, was knocked about for his trouble, lost the ball, recovered it and scored the winning goal while sprawling in front of the net.

Nineteen seconds later Ron MacNeil applied the clincher and put Burrards in a desperate situation.

They now trail the series 3-1 and must win in Vancouver Saturday to force a sixth game here Monday.

Vancouver Coach Ross McDonald said simply. "I thought we had it. But they took it away from us. There was not turning point. There never is in a game like that. But we'll be back."

Coach Nirmal Dillon of the Shamrocks wasn't as pleased as he might have been. He had seen Shamrock faults earlier that needed correcting and hopefully would be at tonight's practice.

And oh, yes. Burrards' Ward Sanderson made his return from a five-game suspension. It wasn't as celebrated as it might have been; and the reason possibly was goalkeeper Larry Smeltzer of the Rocks.

On Sanderson's first attempt at being a factor in the game, he bumped Smeltzer in the Shamrock goal crease harder than necessary.

"He caught me across the back of my neck with his elbow," said Smeltzer. "That's why I went after him. It may have seemed stupid at the time to take a penalty, but somebody had to do something right then and not let him get away with anything."

As it was, Smeltzer and Sanderson drew penalties as did Terry Sanderson of the Rocks and Rico Bellusci of Burrards.

Two goals were scored, one by Shamrocks' Norm Baker and the other by Doug Hayes of Burrards while they were off.

Smeltzer took some of the blame on himself for the fact Burrards were in command as long as they were although he undoubtedly was playing hurt. "I wasn't sharp," he said. His neck? It was still bothering him after the game. "It was like a whiplash," he said.

Hayes was the big man for Burrards in the first period scoring three goals as Vancouver took a 5-4 edge. It was Burrards 7-6, after two.

Then came the third period and, as the Rocks pulled it out, it wasn't before they had to survive a crucial situation in the final two minutes.

It happened this way.

With Evans out of the nets in favor of a sixth attacker for Burrards, Thompson broke away to seemingly score for the Rocks. Joy reigned supreme.

But wait. Back at the other end of the floor the referee was signalling Shamrock Lary Bell for a penalty.

Result: No goal, and the Rocks shorthanded and holding on for the final one minute and 37 seconds.

Thompson had two assists to go with his three goals but the high point many for the Irish was Baker with two goals and five assists. MacNeil had two goals, Larry Bell, Angrove, Thomson and Terry Sanderson getting the others.

Rutledge Leading But Team Misses

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Pressure started claiming its victims Thursday as the Canadian junior and juvenile golf championship moved into the final 36 holes.

The main victims were first round leader Peter Hayes of Winnipeg and Scott Shoniken of Peterborough who was one-shot behind Hayes.

Both fell apart on the back nine of the par-70 Cooke Municipal Golf Course and finished with 76s.

Hayes, the 17-year-old Manitoba junior champion, confesses it was pressure that cost him five shots on the final seven holes. He took a triple-bogey seven on the 12th hole after rolling his tee shot about 20 yards.

Despite losing seven strokes from his opening round, Hayes likes being behind second-round leader Jim Rutledge of Victoria who would prefer not to be leading at this stage.

"I'd rather be a shot or two behind going into the third and fourth rounds," Rutledge said.

But Rutledge's par-70 gave him a two-round total of 143 and sole possession of top spot going into the final 36 holes of the 72-hole tournament to determine the national junior and juvenile champion.

Despite Rutledge's score, British Columbia lost in its bid to grab the junior team title. Tied with Ontario after the first 18 holes, British Columbia had to settle for second place, five shots behind winning Ontario.

The Ontario foursome of Ted Bishop of Fort Erie, Danny Maue of Kitchener, Dan Kodatsky of Fonthill and Robert Ackford of Peterborough finished with a 446 total, 26 over par.

British Columbia finished at 451 followed by Alberta at 454, Manitoba and defending champion Quebec at 455, Nova Scotia at 478, New Brunswick at 480, Prince Edward Island at 485 and Newfoundland and Saskatchewan at 486.

The top juvenile after two rounds is Rob Hoski of Wawa, Ont., with rounds of 74-73—147. That puts him one shot ahead of Danny Mijovic of Concord, Ont., who had a 75 Thursday.

The field was cut to the low 70 scorers and ties and 74 golfers, including 17 juveniles, go into the final 36 holes.

BRAMPTON EXCELSIORS IN MANN CUP FINAL

OWEN SOUND (CP) — Brampton Excelsiors earned the right to represent the Ontario Lacrosse Association's major series in the Mann Cup playoffs in British Columbia next month, defeating Owen Sound North Stars, 12-4, Thursday.

Brampton won the best-of-seven game series 4-1.

Pat Differ scored three times for Brampton. Tom Patrick added two and Gord Lyons, Gaylord Powless, Art Webster, Barry Richardson, Brian Robinson, Ken Webster and Bob Burke fired the other goals. Ted Greives scored twice for the losers. Garry Morrison and Dan Gismondi had one each.

Snead Wondering If Slump Is Over

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Positive thinking, said J. C. Snead, is important in pro golf.

But, he added, positive thinking only works when you're getting results.

Snead fired a sparkling, eight-under-par 63 for the firstround lead Thursday in the $250,000 Hall of Fame golf tournament.

But the winner of six tour titles and an Australian Open and a key figure on two U.S. Ryder Cup teams was not ready to pronounce an end his season-long slump — a slump so severe he had considered quitting the game in which he has won $750,000 in the last six years.

"I've played one good round," he said. "I don't know if I'm over the hump or not. This stupid game, you never know what's going to happen. Nobody ever really beats it. I'll just have to go out and see what happens."

Snead one-putted 10 times, including eight in a row, as he came within one stroke of the record on the No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club, a revered, 7,007-yard layout in the Carolina sandhill country that yielded some of the lowest scores in its history.

Leonard Thompson, who grew up about 20 miles away and has played here for almost two decades, was one stroke back after a 64, by three strokes the best he ever has scored here.

Defending champion Ray Floyd was five shots back after a 68. Masters and British Open winner Tom Watson had a 70. Bobby Locke, a 60-year-old South African inducted into the Hall of Fame on Tuesday night, shot 83 in his first round in the United States since 1956.

Morgan Ties For Fourth

FORT MCMURRAY, Alta. — John Morgan of Victoria finished in a three-way tie for fourth place in the annual Tar Sands Invitational Pro-am Golf Tournament Thursday with a 36-hole score of 68-63—131.

Michel Boyer of Laval, Que., took first place with 62-65—127; Gar Hamilton of Toronto was second with 65-64—129 and Bob Panasiuk of Windsor third at 66-64—130.

Tied with Morgan were Dave Barr, Kelowna; 66-65—131, and Dan Halldorson, Brandon, 68-63—131. Bill Wakeham of Cowichan had 71-64—135.

NHL Plans Intra-League Draft

TORONTO (CP) — The National Hockey League, hoping to strengthen its weak sisters, plan to reintroduce a form of the old intra-league draft before the 1977-78 season gets under way.

"The idea is for the best 360 players to be playing in the NHL," said John Ziegler, president-elect of the NHL. "Any club would be able to claim as many players as it wants to. No club can lose more than three players."

A meeting here of the National Hockey League Players Association is set for next Wednesday to see if agreement can be reached on the proposal.

Under the terms of the proposed arrangement, the 18 teams in the NHL would be able to protect 18 skaters plus two goalies for this year's proceedings, which the league hopes will be held the weekend of Sept. 9.

"Each club would be able to protect three additional players but they must not have played more than two professional seasons," Ziegler said. "And they must be retained on the major league roster until Dec. 1.

"Next year, those additions would be reduced to two and in 1978-80 there would be no additions."

In 1980-81, there would be no additions allowed and in 1981-82, the protected lists would have 17 players and two goalkeepers.

The NHL also hopes to have as many as 18 games between its member teams and top teams from the Soviet Union next season.

While the initial approach would be made to the Soviet Union, there could be alternate arrangements with the Czechoslovakians.

Like the waiver draft, the international games would be subject to an arrangement with the players association.

The NHL also met with representatives of Canada's three major junior amateur hockey leagues who were seeking a better deal for drafted junior players.

The NHL, which decided not to alter its existing payment structure, earlier agreed to pay $1,000 for each player drafted plus $4,000 more when a player signed. For each 40 games a player plays during three years after he signs, NHL clubs pay an additional $5,000 for a possible total of $20,000.

Meanwhile, Harold Ballard, owner of Toronto Maple Leafs and one of the chief opponents to a proposed merger between the NHL and World Hockey Association this summer, was one of five people inducted into the hockey hall of fame Thursday night.

Ballard was chosen in the builders category along with John F. (Bunny) Ahearne, the man who ran the International Ice Hockey Federation for 18 seasons, and Joseph Cattarinich, a former part-owner of Montreal Canadiens.

Alex Delvecchio, a former coach and player with Detroit Red Wings, and the late Tim Horton, who was a defenceman with Toronto, New York Rangers, Pittsburgh Penguins and Buffalo Sabres were also inducted.

Red-Hot Fishing Noted In Sooke-Pedder Waters

"Fantastic" was the word most often used to describe fishing in waters from Sooke to Pedder Bay this past week.

It seems everybody — from greenest novice to ardent expert — can pick up a limit catch of salmon using just about any type of gear from the surface down to 60 feet in depth.

Pink hootchies, minnows and strip are working best off Sooke.

Stewart Fyfe boated the top chinook of the week with a 36-pounder taken Sunday off Secretary Island but most of the catch is made up of pinks to 11 pounds. Coho to 11 pounds are also coming in well offshore from Otter Point.

The top fish at Becher Bay was a 45½-pounder taken by Joe Benge on Thursday morning while trolling an anchovy off Beechey Head.

Pinks to 10 pounds and coho to 13 round out the excellent return with an average of 300 fish per day being weighed in at Cheanuh Marina.

Leo Coulcher was trolling a minnow off the kelp in Pedder Bay when he landed a 39¾-pounder on Monday but the "fish of the week" award undoubtedly should go to teen-ager Dave Freer, who landed a 23-pounder without a net while fishing with a minnow from a canoe in Race Passage the same day.

Morning is the best time to be out at Pedder and some other choice spots have been near the Cam Buoy right in the bay, in the Race and off Church Rock.

Oak Bay fishermen are landing limits of chinooks, coho and pinks to 12 pounds using green hootchies or strip on the Flats and around Trial Island.

A fair number of pinks to nine pounds mixed with a few smaller coho are showing off Fairfax Point and Tilly Point on South Pender Island with any type of gear appearing to work equally well.

★ ★ ★

A few chinooks to 11 pounds are turning up close to the shoreline of Coal Island for those fishermen using strip, 1½ pounds of lead and about "40 pulls" of line.

Best spots to fish in Saanich Inlet have been Wain Rock, Coal Point, McKenzie Bay, Tosier Rock off Mill Bay, Bamberton and Coles Bay using fairly deep lines and strip.

Further up-Island, success has improved off Bold Bluff with fishermen landing chinooks to 15 pounds by mooching on an ebb tide. Cowichan Bay apparently contains a fair number of fish — but they're not biting.

Off Nanaimo, strip-casters are landing coho between Entrance and Snake islands and chinooks off Harmac.

The tyee have started to show at Port Alberni and fishermen are picking up fish to 50 pounds off China Creek, Bonetree Point and Franklin River using strip, about six ounces of weight and 100 feet of line. If these fish follow the usual pattern, they'll bite well for a few days and then become a little harder to catch.

Winds this week have kept many fishermen off the water from Courtenay to Campbell River but some good coho catches were landed off Bates Beach and action should start to pick up shortly between Denman and Hornby Islands.

A few tyee to 36 pounds have been boated from the Campbell River mouth and down to Big Rock using strip, Stingsildas and plugs. Grey Ghost bucktails with spinners are landing northern coho to 11 pounds in the same areas.

NIBBLES: Gremlins got into the type Wednesday and a little piece on the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association Junior Derby came out as open "to all young fishermen aged 61 or under" . . . Even with the number of retirees in this area, that's a little much . . . It should have read "16" . . . Derby hours are from dawn to 12 noon Sunday and first prize is a bicycle donated by the Victoria Times . . . The Sweetheart Derby, open to all fisherwomen, will be held in conjunction with the Junior fishfest for the first time and features cash prizes . . . Entries for both derbies are available at most Saanich Inlet boathouses.

Now there's even less time to get in on a good thing . . . Charlie White's salmon-fishing course, which includes actual videotapes of how salmon approach and strike at a lure, is due to start Sept. 8 instead of Oct. 6 at Parkland High School . . . The course consists of five Thursday sessions and costs $16 . . . Further information may be obtained by telephoning Frank Baxter at the Saanich School Board office (656-1111).

Brock Steals 890 and 891 To Close In on Cobb Mark

By The Associated Press

Gary Alexander almost went into the trivia book with Al Downing, Ralph Branca and Tracy Stallard.

Alexander, the San Francisco catcher, was behind the plate Thursday night when Lou Brock stole his 25th and 26th bases of the National League baseball season to increase his career mark to 891 and pull within one of the major league record set by Ty Cobb.

For non-trivia buffs, Downing, Branca and Stallard are all pitchers. Downing gave up Hank Aaron's 715th home run, which broke Babe Ruth's career mark. Branca served up Bobby Thompson's celebrated home run in the final game of the 1951 playoffs to give New York Giants the National League pennant.

Stallard was on the mound when Roger Maris hit his 61st home run in 1961 to break Ruth's single-season mark.

In the first inning, the 38-year-old Brock singled. Two pitches later stole second. He attempted to add third base to his theft total and was two-thirds of the way when Garry Templeton fouled off a 2-2 pitch.

A double by Keith Hernandez scored Brock with the game's first run.

In the third, Brock beat out an infield hit and stole second again. This time he scored on Templeton's single and the Cards were in front 2-0.

It didn't stay that way long as San Francisco starter John Montefusco, who scattered eight hits through six innings, drove in the winning run with a seventh-inning single as the Giants downed the Cardinals 4-2.

In other National League games Thursday, Pittsburgh Pirates edged Los Angeles Dodgers 2-1, Atlanta Braves defeated Chicago Cubs 8-6, Cincinnati Reds nipped New York Mets 3-2 and Houston Astros squeezed by Philadelphia Phillies 6-5.

In the American League, Wayne Nordhagen belted his first two major league home runs, driving in four runs as Chicago White Sox defeated Baltimore Orioles 6-4.

The victory moved Chicago back into second place in the West Division, two percentage points ahead of Texas and Minnesota and three games behind first-place Kansas City.

Islanders Second

EDMONTON — Arnie Boldt, 19, lived up to expectations Thursday by beating his own Canadian and world high jump records for Class D amputees at the Canadian Games for the Physically Disabled.

Boldt, who lives in Saskatoon, cleared 1.90 metres to erase his old mark of 1.86 metres set last year.

Boldt also won a gold medal in the Class D long jump.

Island athletes won two silver medals earlier.

Peter Steele of Victoria finished second in the men's shotput while Gary Birch of Mill Bay got his silver medal in the 60-metre wheelchair dash.

Vancouver's Ivy Grandstrom set world and Canadian records in winning the 100 metres and the long jump, both in the blind category.

AROUND OUR SHORES
pat dufour

He's Sir Robin Gillett, the Lord Mayor of London.

In addition to being a confirmed rag-hauler, he's the first master mariner to ever become the Lord Mayor of London. In addition to his other duties, he also serves as a commander in Britain's naval reserve.

Those who met Rear-Admiral Otto Steiner, commodore of Britain's Royal Naval Sailing Association, when he was here to start the single-handed and west coast races of the Vancouver branch, will be interested to hear he's not only starting the around-the-world race, which gets under way this month at Plymouth, but intends to go along to savor some of the action.

One of the boats in the race is the Australian 73-foot sloop Ballyhoo. She's an impressive sight when she flies her huge orange spinnaker, emblazoned with the Union Jack and Australian stars.

As a warm-up, Ballyhoo took part in the recently-completed Admiral's Cup series at Cowes, finishing first over the line in the 605-mile Fastnet, the longest and toughest of the six-race series. The first three boats on corrected time, however, were the United States' Imp and the British boats Moonshine and Yeoman XX.

The coveted Admiral's Cup was won by the British team with a total of 1,130 points. They beat out the Americans by 46 points. The Hong Kong team placed third with 921 points.

A Royal Victoria Yacht Club boat won top honors in last weekend's five-race series for six-metres built before 1960, held in Seattle. Paul Longridge is justly proud of his Saga's performance and that of his crew, Paul Baylis, Peter McMartin, Doug Taylor-Lee, Jim Ross and Keith Homer.

After her came the Seattle boats Yiliam VIII, Maybe VII and Risken. The only other Victoria boat in the series, John Graeme's Llanoris placed fifth.

Paul reports the next big event will be six-metre racing at the Maple Bay Yacht Club's annual Labor Day weekend regatta.

Among the competition Saga will be facing will be Bussy III of MBYC, now owned by Kirk Palmer and Don Gillingham. Six-metre fans will remember her when she was being raced by Kirk's father, Vic.

Also taking part will be Jim Ross's Toogooloowoo, whose other names have included Eros and St. Francis IV. She's a newcomer to the local scene. Jim, who was recently elected executive-secretary of the International Six-Metre Association, bought her in the spring.

Between now and 1979, local six-metre crews will be working up for the next World Cup racing, to be held in Seattle for the first time since 1973. In 1975 and 1977 the racing was in Sweden.

Irene Haines of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, has won the Jim Saull Trophy for the second year in a row. She skippered the family boat Lotte to first place in last weekend's race for women skippers. Crewing with her were her sons, Ed and Bob, and Susan Comber.

Next came Anne Douglas in Vertu with her husband Fred taking the orders for a change. June Rogers placed third with husband Jim and son John as crew in Sara.

RVYC wound up its Wednesday night series racing this weekend with Charles Simpson, Dave Richardson and Chris Anstey taking the top spots in Laser competition. In Cal 20s it was Ed Life's Semiramis, followed by Frank Cushing's Por Gusto and Cec. Miles' La Galstea. Larry Shorter's Keela-Keela was the winner in the Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet race. She edged out George Cesario's Galeb and George Parks' Fairlight.

Swimmers Capture Gold for Canada

SOFIA (CP) — Swimmers Graham Smith of Edmonton and Anne Gagnon of Beauport, Que., won Canada's first gold medals of the World Student Games on Thursday and Smith promised more would follow.

Smith, 19, predicted the tough competitive spirit of the Canadian team would provide more silverware in the three remaining days.

Canada now has two gold, five silver and one bronze medal. More finishes in the top three are virtually guaranteed in swimming and the men's basketball team, still undefeated, should earn a medal.

In addition, three freestyle wrestlers—Egon Beiler of Kitchener, Ont., Richard Deschatelets of Sturgeon Falls, Ont., and Mike Barry of Saint John, N.B. posted two successive victories on their first day of competition; leading to speculation Canada could win a medal in that event.

Anne Merklinger of Kanata, Ont., an Ottawa suburb, and Liz McKinnon of Thunder Bay won silver medals Thursday. So did a women's 400-metre relay team.

Smith won the men's 100-metre backstroke moments after Gagnon and Merklinger finished one-two in the women's 200. McKinnon finished second to Bonnie Glasgow of the United States in the women's 400-metre freestyle.

Temperatures of about 10 celcius created slow times—and made conditions almost impossible for female platform divers—but Smith said the weather hurts Canada less than other countries.

Danielle Balla of Montreal finished fourth in the women's 400-metre freestyle while Tom Alexander nipped fifth-place Mac Teskey for fourth spot in the 1,500-metre freestyle in a struggle between Toronto athletes who swim for American universities.

Beiler needed a stirring last-minute rally for a first-round win at 136 pounds over Miichi Taga of Japan, while Deschatelets, a 180-pounder recorded an easy first-round pin over Niko Pahtas of Greece. The third winner was Barry, who outhustled Andreas Jargaishain of Mongolia.

In the second round, Beiler won over East Germany's Hans Pocher while Deschatelets defeated Mahmi Yakup of Turkey and Barry won a decision over Kim Sup of South Korea.

Janet Nutter of Winnipeg, who attends Queen's University in Kingston, Ont., finished fourth in the tower diving while Linda Cuthbert of Point Claire, Que., a student at George Brown College in Toronto, was seventh.

The basketball team, which meets the Soviet Union in the last game of today's schedule, got good news when it was learned guard Martin Riley's charleyhorse injury had healed enough to allow him to play.

NEW PILOT CAN'T HELP ENTERPRISE

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — In one of the most exciting days of trials to determine a defender for the America's Cup, Courageous came from behind Thursday to edge Enterprise in a pair of races.

In the foreign trials to determine a challenger for yachting's most prestigious prize, Australia, the yacht backed by Perth financier Alan Bond, took advantage of some tactical errors to beat Sweden's Sverige.

Ted Turner, owner of the Atlanta Braves and one of yachting's most flamboyant personalities, manoeuvered Courageous across the finish line of the 24.3-mile America's Cup course in the day's first race almost a minute ahead of Enterprise, skippered for the first time by Malin Burnham of San Diego.

Both contenders hoisted protest flags immediately after the start of the first race.

Courageous' record now stands at 7-1 in this final selection series. The double loss Thursday left Enterprise with a 2-7 slate, a big disappointment for Burnham, who Tuesday replaced sailmaker Lowell North as Enterprise's skipper.

Burnham, who has assumed North's job of calling starts, has lost five straight against Turner, three of them in practice exercises.

Sweden's Sverige, with Pelle Petterson at the helm, began its race with Australia by crossing the starting line three seconds ahead. Halfway through the course, she had stretched her lead to almost four minutes.

However, the Swedes lost their huge advantage on the next leg as they failed to cover some Australian tacking manouevres. The Aussies sliced across the finish line a full minute ahead of the frustrated Swedes.

Canadian Rowers Perform Well

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Canadian rowers placed second or third in five semi-finals Thursday to earn berths in Saturday's finals of the world rowing championships.

The Canadian women's coxed four of Gail Cort, Andrea Schreiner and Kathy Lichty of St. Catharines, Monica Draeger of Niagara Falls, and Cox Leslie Anderson of St. Catharines advanced by placing second behind an East German boat. The Germans were timed in three minutes 26.32 seconds for the 1,000 metres while the Canadian boat clocked 3:31.28.

Cheryl Howard of Vancouver and Bev Cameron of Ottawa advanced in double sculls, placing third in their semi-final behind boats from East Germany and Bulgaria. The Canadian girls were almost four seconds behind the winning boat.

The Canadian women's eight also placed second in a semi-final behind an East German crew. The Germans were clocked in 3:03.16 and the Canadian eight in 3:04.90. The Canadian crew consisted of Joy Fera and Trish Smith of Vancouver; Dolores Poung, Brockville, Ont.; Chris Neuland and Carol Eastmure of Toronto; Kelly Jacklin and Ina deLure of Victoria; Nancy Higgins of Oshawa, and Barb Much of Maxville, Ont.

Brian Thorne of St. Catharines advanced in the men's lightweight single sculls, placing third behind Morton Espersen of Denmark, 7:13.59, and Lawrence Klecatsky of the U.S., 7:22.19. Thorne was timed in 7:24.73.

In the men's lightweight eights, the Canadians qualified for the final by placing second to a Dutch boat. The Dutch were timed in 5:59.99 and the Canadians in 6:01.58.

Brian Dick and Andy VanRuyven of St. Catharines, Phil Monckton of London, Ont., and Ian Gordon of Ottawa failed to get by the coxless fours semi-finals, finishing fourth in their race.

Area Squads Win Openers

RICHMOND — Two teams from Greater Victoria collected victories in their respective divisions as play opened Thursday in the four-day Canadian intermediate lacrosse championships.

Saanich tripped South Edmonton 15-10 in the "A" division while Juan de Fuca topped Edmonton 11-8 in the "B" division.

Champions will emerge in each of the divisions on Sunday.

Buffalo Hunts Stir Up a Storm

By BRYAN WILLIAMS

PATONGA LODGE, Australia (Reuter) — Alan Beckingsale is a 55-year-old former buffalo shooter who does not believe the animals should be slaughtered. Greg Miles, 38, once worked at a zoo and he wants to shoot them.

Australia's least-touched areas are about 135 miles east of Darwin. People there are debating how much damage water buffalo cause in their locality.

But the discussion is part of a wider question about the future shape of a land that until now has been left mainly to nature.

Uranium, about 20 per cent of the Western world's reserves, is the reason for a new awareness of some of Australia's most fascinating country, where there are buffalo, wild pigs, crocodiles and a variety of other animals unknown in other parts of Australia.

If the government allows mining companies to dig for the nuclear fuel then an influx of tourists is expected to follow into country that 99 per cent of Australians have not seen.

There are fears that the visitors may destroy the land's unique attraction.

BUFFALO...DANGEROUS

Beckingsale said one risk the tourists will run is an encounter with a maddened buffalo wounded in an official campaign to reduce the herds, now estimated to number 50,000 animals.

"This indiscriminate and sometimes amateur hunting is dangerous," Beckingsale said. "One day a family is going to be having a picnic and some badly shot animal is going to cause a tragedy."

The culling campaign was started because some naturalists felt the Asian buffalo, introduced to Australia by the first settlers in the early 19th century, were eroding and destroying the brittle soil with their feeding habits and hooves.

Great floods sweep across the plains country for about half the year and buffalo herds add to the erosion and undermining of the thin soil cover.

"The buffalo can make a patch of country barren in one year," Miles contended.

He supports the campaign that often leaves carcasses rotting where they are shot.

Beckingsale opposes shooting the animals because he believes they can provide valuable food in a world where many people starve.

However, his concern does not extend to wild pigs and crocodiles, which have multiplied in recent years.

He regards the pigs, which are so riddled with disease they are shunned by hunters, as the most dangerous animals in his area.

About a year ago a pilot, who crashed a light aircraft and lay partially paralysed until rescue parties reached him, was badly mauled by pigs trying to eat him.

The crocodiles, once threatened with extinction by professional hunters, have flourished under a protective shooting ban.

About the only professional hunters left in the area are the buffalo men who scour the country to supply restaurants in West Germany and Sweden where the meat is prized.

Among them is Ian Rixon, 24, who left his family's cattle ranch to earn money for its upkeep during a time of falling beef prices.

Born in the area, he chases the buffalo barefoot with two friends. They herd about 50 animals at a time into camouflaged pens and then transport them to a nearby slaughter house.

They have mixed feelings about whether tourists should be allowed into the area.

They point to 1,000-year-old aboriginal rock paintings that carry the scars of some of the few Europeans who have seen them. On one painting is scrawled the name Nat.

But the three men recognize that the country's scenic attractions should be open to the public.

In the land of changing colors, crocodiles bask on the side of muddy rivers while in nearby escarpment country 22 species of fish can be found in one small rock pool.

Some fishermen worry that uranium mining may pollute rivers that overflow for miles during the wet season.

But mining companies insist that their fears are unground-ed because of precautions they intend to take in processing the ore.

LET 'ER FLY, and Mary Helen Barnes of Pendleton, Ind. let loose with a 10-footer at the 1977 Indiana State Fair tobacco spitting contest. But Mrs. Barnes, the only woman to compete among the 26 contestants, was 14 feet behind the winner.

Ancient Law Revived By Moslem Countries

By IBRAHIM NOORI

TEHRAN (Reuter) — A trend is growing in the Islamic world toward tightening morality and discouraging crime by the reinforcement of the Sharia religious law formulated 1,400 years ago.

Pakistan and the United Arab Emirates are the latest countries to widen application of the law which is based on the Koran, Islam's holy book.

Among the Sharia's sanctions is the severing of hands for theft.

The amputation of thieves' hands is among measures decreed by Pakistan's military ruler Gen. Zia-ul-haq after he overthrew civilian Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto in a coup in early July.

Gen. Zia also decreed that public whipping be introduced under Sharia law for a wide range of crimes. A maximum number of 30 strokes is permitted. All males under 28 and all women are excluded.

Pakistan is the first non-Arab Asian country to introduce hand amputation and public floggings as punishments for criminals.

Sharia law, dispensed by religious leaders in special courts, is mainly for Moslems. But in some Arab countries non-Moslem foreigners have been punished under it.

In the United Arab Emirates, a foreigner, whose nationality was not disclosed, was sentenced in July to 10 lashes and his woman friend fined because they were seen kissing on a beach.

Sharia law, which minutely regulates a Moslem's life from birth to death, is regarded by the world's 600 million-strong Moslem community as its consitution.

As well as the Koran, the law derives inspiration from the Prophet Mohammed's practices (Sunna) and verbal instructions (Hadith).

Bribery, spying, stealing, drinking, gambling, lying and adultery are forbidden under the law, though some are regarded as major and others as minor sins for which punishment varies accordingly.

Adultery, for example, is a major sin.

For stealing, the Koran orders the severing of hands, and women are not spared.

Those who accuse women of sexual infidelity without producing four witnesses deserve 80 lashes of the whip, says the holy book. The slanderer is threatened with "awful doom."

These punishments were perhaps necessary to tame warring tribes and to compel them to accept the new life, Islam.

Security Files on MPs Questioned by Clark

EDMONTON (CP) — Opposition leader Joe Clark said Thursday he will seek guarantees from Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau that security dossiers are not being kept on members of Parliament or their employees.

He said in an interview that this kind of matter should not have to be investigated by the Prime Minister's Office. If he forms a government, he will create a parliamentary committee to oversee security policing.

There have been reports that the RCMP keeps files on cabinet ministers, members of Parliament and has a personal file on New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent.

"I've no reason to believe there is a file on me," said Clark. "But there should not be that kind of dossier and I want a guarantee there isn't."

Clark said the country's security forces have to be made accountable to the legislators who have the responsibility to control them.

"There is security policy set that the people who hold responsibility know nothing about."

He predicted that the Trudeau government would not create a parliamentary security committee because it has no interest in stopping "undesirable activity."

Clark said the committee he would create would oversee future security operations rather than delve into past activities.

The government has failed to do even that, he said, preferring instead to close its eyes to secret service activities in a policy of "deliberate ignorance by choice."

Clark appeared on an open-line radio show here Thursday and said a Conservative government would abolish Petrocan, the federally owned Petroleum Development Corporation. He was to make an airplane tour of his new Yellowknife riding today.

ROYALISTS BACK INDEPENDENCE TOO

The one thing the Monarchist League of Canada and Quebecers agree on is that Canada should remain independent, Monarchist president John Aimers said Thursday.

"We are opposed to union with the United States," he said. "That's definite."

Aimers, visiting Victoria, spoke to the league's Victoria branch at the University of Victoria faculty club Thursday.

He said some people want Canada to abolish the monarchy in order to appease a supposed French-Canadian sentiment which regards the Crown as a vestige of British colonialism.

"These persons are, of course, out of touch with the realities of history and of the present day," he said.

"The monarch is not an issue in Quebec. Indeed, a widespread affection for the Sovereign exists."

He noted that the Quebec fathers of Confederation wanted Canada called Kingdom (Royaume) of Canada, but Queen Victoria thought it would offend the republican sensibilities of Americans.

"There are also people who suggest that we wash our hands of the whole Quebec problem and let the province go her way," he said. "As monarchists, we reject such a course."

Aimers said the monarchy is the basic unifying force in Canada.

Aimers blamed petty politicians and bureaucrats for some anti-monarchist sentiments in Canada.

Some politicians, he said, oppose the sovereign's presence in Canada because their own glory pales beside the crown.

Aimers said thousands of Canadians resent the federal government's action in cutting down the Queen's state visit in October from 16 to 4½ days — all to be spent in Ottawa.

GRITS BACKED IN TORY POLL

CALGARY (CP) — Peter Bawden, Progressive Conservative MP for Calgary South, has learned that although most of his constituents do not like the Trudeau government's bilingual policy, more would vote Liberal if an election were held now.

A questionnaire, which drew 4,000 responses, showed 63 per cent of the respondents thought that the Trudeau government has helped to divide Canada with its bilingual policy. But 41 per cent of them said they would vote Liberal, while 38 per cent said they would vote against the Liberals in an election. The rest was undecided.

Most of the questions dealt with the Quebec issue. The results showed that about 75 per cent were either strongly against or not in favor of Quebec separation. However, 19 per cent called for Quebec separation and six per cent either did not care or were undecided.

Bawden said in the statement that the results supported his contention that Prime Minister Trudeau "is the principal architect of our present unity problems."

Ford Expands Rust Warranty

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd.'s 1978-model cars will be covered by a no-charge, three-year corrosion warranty, the company announced Thursday.

William Hawkins, vice-president and general manager, said the warranty, introduced on Ford's 1977-model cars, provides for repair or replacement of any part, except the exhaust system components, which develop perforation from corrosion within the three years of use regardless of mileage.

Hawkins said the "duraguard" warranty, transferable to any subsequent owners within the three-year period, will apply to 1978-model cars in addition to the normal warranty.

"The use of a vinyl underlay to prevent stone chipping, which Ford of Canada introduced on its 1977 model, will be expanded to cover the complete lower bodyside of all 1978 North American-built cars other than those already protected with rocker panel moldings," Hawkins said.

CIL Plant Closing?

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian Industries Ltd. (CIL) says it may close its explosives plant at nearby Valleyfield in November if it does not manage to sell it by then.

The announement came as negotiations for a new contract with the 250 workers at the plant were to have begun, but company spokesman William Craig said Thursday talks will not begin until the plant's future is clear.

CIL will have to decide whether to continue operations if no buyer is found by Nov. 16, Craig said, since the Valleyfield plant "is no longer commercially viable."

Craig said one Montreal company, Space Research Corp., has expressed interest in buying the plant.

He said the company would try to find new jobs for the Valleyfield workers—some of whom have been working there for 20 years—if the plant is closed, but "we're not in a position to guarantee that everybody will find a job."

The existing labor contract at the plant expires Oct. 24.

Police Demand the Right to Act on Juvenile Crime

Social agencies have failed to combat the juvenile delinquency problem so policemen should be given the job.

That's the view of Winnipeg police chief J. J. Tronrud and the juvenile deliquency committee of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police, which Tronrud chairs.

In a report tabled at Thursday's meeting of the association at the Empress, Tronrud urged the federal government to provide special subsidies to police departments so that officers can deal with the juvenile delinquency problem.

"Millions of dollars poured into social agencies up to this point have not proved effective in combatting this problem," Tronrud told more than 400 delegates attending the conference.

"I say that police departments across Canada can do the job and should be given the opportunity."

He said his committee will recommend that special funding be supplied by the federal solicitor-general's department directly to governments and boards controlling police budgets. The money would be earmarked for both short-term and long-term programs that deal solely with juveniles.

Tronrud indicated the gravity of the juvenile delinquency problem in Canada by producing statistics from a survey carried out last December involving 302 police departments and detachments across the country.

The statistics showed that 80 per cent of all juvenile offences reported during the month were breaches of the criminal code. Only 10 per cent were breaches of provincial statutes, predominately government liquor acts, while three per cent were offences under federal statutes, less than seven per cent traffic violations and less than one per cent breaches of municipal bylaws.

The survey showed that 11 per cent of all offences reported were committed by children age 7 to 11 and 26 per cent of offences were committed by 12-and 13-year-olds.

Four per cent of the offences were against persons, 6 per cent against property and 35 per cent were other offences, such as drug involvement.

Only one-third of the juveniles apprehended were charged. Police departments without juvenile units charged 41 per cent while those with juvenile units charged 28.2 per cent. Police tended to have a greater reluctance charging girls than boys, even in cases of repeaters.

Half of the juveniles never had prior contact with police.

Tronrud concealed that the seriousness of offences is proportionate to age, as is the proportion of young people involved.

Top Mountie Scoffs At Risk of Inquiry

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The RCMP is in less peril from an inquiry into its activities than it is from the imaginative speculation of some in the media, Canada's top Mountie said Thursday.

In a keynote address to the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police convention at the Empress, Commissioner Maurice Nadon said he looks forward to a commission of inquiry announced by Solicitor-General Francis Fox last month, but not to the media's coverage.

"The media has not always been as responsible or accurate as we would like," he said.

Nadon said he is troubled by increasing criticism of the police.

"I'm not talking about the instances for which critical comment is deserved. I mean, rather, the wild speculations all far too often subjected."

He said he feels much of it results not from malice as much as "misguided zeal and deadlines."

"Politicians and special interest groups or other well meaning citizens who make statements that lead you to believe the police have a bug in every home and a tap on every phone perhaps don't realize the damage they are doing to the public trust in the police," Nadon said.

"We haven't the personnel, time or equipment to look after the major criminals we are particularly interested in, let alone chase John Q. Public."

Nadon urged the media to "report facts, even — perhaps in particular — if they are unfavorable to us; but facts without magnification or distortion."

He stressed to the chiefs the need to refrain from publicly criticizing one another.

"We must guard against letting the frustrations that is part of the job lead us into making ill-advised comments about each other in public.

"We have sufficienct critics outside police circles to need any within."

Talking to reporters later, Nadon said cases of distorted reporting and unfair criticism are "too numerous to mention."

Pressed for an example, he referred to a recent report that RCMP were bugging the bedrooms of cabinet ministers.

He strongly denied the allegation and said the last time the RCMP bugged a member of Parliament was in 1947. He said there has been no instance of bugging since involving either cabinet ministers or major figures in any of the political parties.

In his speech, Nadon, who retires at the end of the month after more than 36 years service, implied the judiciary system must share some of the blame for escalating crime.

"I wonder if the time has not come to take a long, hard look at making the consequences of crime a lot less attractive — for the criminal, that is."

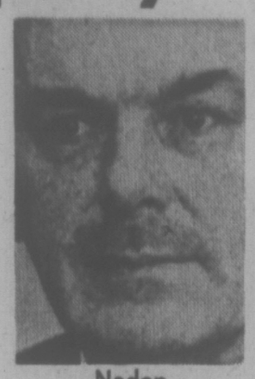
Nadon noted the staggering increases in costs of policing over the past 10 years and urged, "we must not become too greedy in our demands because the public purse is not bottomless."

Nadon appeared pessimistic about the future.

In his opening comment to delegates Nadon quipped that an Eastern writer had called him a nice guy, but not too smart.

"Of course, I'm a lot smarter than he gave me credit for," Nadon retorted. "Take for instance my choice of a time to retire. I can't think of a smarter time to get out — Can you?"

His audience of more than 450 police chiefs from across Canada agreed. They applauded.



Nadon

Problems Cropping Up With Emergency Calls

The "911" emergency telephone system is fine for some communities but not all.

The telecommunications committee of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police has come to that conclusion despite voting in favor last year of setting up the system in Canada.

Now the committee feels the system should not be implemented nation-wide.

The reason, the committee members said in a report tabled Thursday, is that it would be too costly and too difficult to manage.

Since the system involves participation and co-operation by a number of agenices such as police, fire, and ambulance as well as utilities like hydro and telephone, the matter of implementing it should be purely a local decision, the committee says.

The committee also felt tracing of telephone calls should be left as a matter for local decision.

Although telephone companies report an increase in the number of anonymous and malicious calls in most parts of Canada, the vast majority —95 per cent are "just anonymous calls," the committee notes.

Of the 2,160,000 complaints received between 1965 and 1969, only 86 were prosecuted for a rate of .004 per cent.

"Not a very impressive record," said staff superintendent George Long of the Metro Toronto police, a committee member.

Clamps Set On Snoops

The RCMP are developing a new device that will make unauthorized eavesdropping on police radios all but impossible.

The device, called a privacy module, has been extensively tested the past year on mobile and fixed radio equipment, RCMP chief superintendent Llody Young told delegates of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police at The Empress.

Yound said further tests are planned this fall using portable radio equipment.

If no major problems are encountered, production of 1,000 of the units is forecast to begin late in 1978.

The module, which measures 4 inches by 2½ inches and a quarter-inch thick, is small enough to be mounted as an integral part of existing radio equipment, Young said.

The objective of the module is to withstand "concerted electronic attack" and be capable of both private and plain language use with little loss in range or listening quality.

Young said 10 prototypeunits were extensively tested last year, but could not be utilized with portable equipment.

Contracts are now being let to produce modified modules for refit on 30 miniature portable radios, 30 mobile radios and eight base stations. Comprehensive field tests will be carried out this fall and early next year.

Young said if the pilot system works successfully, the modules will be used by security forces at the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton next summer.

The device will be subject to strict controls.

"To properly perform its function, widespread use cannot be allowed," he said.

Young said no decision has been made whether the modules will be sold, leased or loaned. That will hinge on the success of the next round of tests. The earliest date the units could be made available for operational use will be late 1979.

He said there is a need for two types of privacy devices — one for use against criminals and the other to prevent nuisance monitoring by the public in general.

The problem of unauthorized public monitoring of police radios is getting so large the telecommunications committee of the CACP has asked the federal government to consider legislation prohibiting the practice.

Possible legislation might include classifying radio listening equipment as a "burglar's tools" type of offence, allowing police to seize such equipment on sight and hold as evidence, and giving the courts the right to confiscate such equipment on conviction.

The committee, in its annual report tabled Thursday, said it will press the federal department of communications to assign police exclusive radio frequencies, required especially for tactical situations such as hostage and gun-crew calls.

The report said that in past, the department hasn't "fully appreciated the unique position of the police relative to frequency allocation."

Too often police have had to share the frequencies with other users.

Young has been asked by the committee to prepare a proposal during the next year that would reserve space for future police requirements in the 410-470 and 800 Mhz regions.

CB Links Termed 'Nuisance at Time'

Citizen Band radio clubs should be discouraged from forming too close a link with police, a report tabled at the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police annual convention at the Empress says.

The report, prepared by the telecommunications committee, says CB radio owners can "become a nuisance at times," and the best position police should take is one of neutrality.

It acknowledges CB radio's usefulness in helping police in inland waters activity, northern isolated areas and urban and more heavily travelled regions where operators report incidents requiring police attention.

But, the report says, "CB clubs wanting to affiliate with the police are generally to be discouraged because of a large turnover in membership, incompatibility of radio systems and the tendency of such groups wanting eventually to impose their conditions on such affiliation, even to the point of requesting financial support from the police."

CBers are particularly active and aggressive, the report adds wryly. "They do not require any encouragement."

Vandal Attacks Rubens Painting

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (Reuter) — An unknown vandal threw acid over a valuable Rubens painting in the City Art Gallery on Wednesday, police said. The portrait of Archduke Albrecht of Austria painted by the Flemish master Peter-Paul Rubens in 1610 was very badly damaged, the museum director said.

Soon to be built.

your health

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

What is selenium? Why is it being touted in pulp magazines as being important to health? The food faddists at my college are constantly talking about selenium.—Mr. N.J.

Dear Mr. J.:

Selenium is a chemical element that resembles sulfur. The National Research Council's Committee on Nutritional Misinformation" definitely states, "No evidence of selenium deficiency has been found in Americans and there is NO justification at this time for use of selenium supplements by the general population."

Selenium is found chiefly in meats, seafood, mushrooms, garlic and asparagus. A well-balanced diet will supply the daily selenium requirements for an average adult. The council very specifically warns that brittleness of the fingernails, fatigue, irritability and a garlic odor on the breath can be caused by too much selenium.

It is always wise to check on the scientific validity of new food fads. Sometimes they can do more harm than good.

Are vibrating machines of any value for reducing? I'm tempted to buy one.—Mrs. G. B.

Dear MRs. B.:

These machines have little or no value for losing weight. The gullible public is tempted, as you are, to purchase such a machine because they won't confront their inability to stick to a diet.

Vibrating machines are excellent for giving added tone and support to body muscles. They may make them firm and perhaps even take inches off the waist and hips.

It's Easy to Be a Sucker in Buying Art

caveat emptor

There is a mystique surrounding art that often clouds people's vision when making a purchase. The art people tend to whisper in galleries, look well-dressed or distinctly anti-socially ragged and appear very well informed. It puts the uninitiated at a distinct disadvantage. But that attitude of insecurity is one that can easily be overcome if you put your mind to it.

As gallery dealers will agree almost unanimously, you should never buy art without help if you have no knowledge of it. But are they (the dealers) the ones to assist you? How do you choose a dealer?

Buyers seem prepared to compare price and product when they are buying television or a car, to take the advice of a stock-broker if they're buying stocks or even to seek several doctors' diagnoses when they have been warned of a serious illness. But Canadians buy several million dollars of art on a whim yearly and this sum is increasing.

Many purchasers are badly burned on their first encounter. You can't compare art to a can of pears, a new television or a serious illness but it has certain attributes of all three.

Good art brings pleasure, is a sound investment and changes with time. Bad art is a rip-off.

EVERYWHERE Norisa Clark, 8, of Cowley, Alta., goes, her geese are sure to follow. During a visit to Lethbridge, Norisa serenaded her goslings on a nearby lawn. Both named Bee Bee, the geese are just part of the family.

The public fall prey to these rip-offs in the art market because of their own ignorance. First, there are the hard-sell, high-hype television and magazine ads promoting "the greatest art sale of the century"; "Original old masters at unbelievable prices"; or "work that will appreciate the minute you put it on your wall".

These sales are often held across Canada at convention centres, hotels and occasionally in department stores that should know better. They are never held at reputable galleries which should give any sensible buyer the first stench of warning.

Most of this art is mass-produced by factories or teams of workers in eastern Asia, Mexico, Italy, Austria and the U.S. It is frequently of landscapes, seascapes, bouquets — particularly of roses — or hunting scenes. The assembly line works this way: The image is traced or stencilled on, then one worker paints the sea, one the sky and so on until they are completed. Occasionally an "expert" will add a few individual touches. Finally, an anonymous worker will sign them. Often you'll see common names like Burns or Hodges mis-spelled because the people signing them haven't sufficient knowledge of the English language to know better.

These paintings cost as little as $5 each to produce but often sell for several hundred dollars. They are not original. Standard designs are changed in color periodically or the scene slightly re-arranged but thousands of copies of each are made.

Buy them if you fall in love with them but realize that you aren't buying original "fine art." For this type of work, you would be better off to purchase from your local amateur art club. The prices are cheaper and you'll know what you're getting.

Black velvet paintings are similarly-produced as a type of "cottage industry" in Mexico. Thousands of like designs are created yearly. If you like them, buy them, but do recognize that these products will never increase in value. The color may fade or the velvet disintegrate but they won't improve with age.

The promise of "old masters" is similarly false. In Paris, London, New York and other fine arts centres the real old masters' works occasionally go on sale. If bought from a well-established auctioneer such as Sotheby's, Christie's or Parke-Bernet, you may be lucky enough to pick one up for a few thousand pounds or dollars. Documentation re date, owners, etc., will be extensive. But they won't come up for sale often; you may have to wait months, even years for this type of purchase. Even so, fakes have been successfully sold.

It is not uncommon for former printers of Picasso and other artists to pull a print from an old stone made by Picasso and sell the re-strike as an "original fine art print". But they won't be signed since they are done without the artist's permission. And they won't be numbered.

Be leary of all unsigned fine art prints since this is a worldwide convention in printing . . . signing and numbering the print. This way you are assured that the artist worked on the print and approved of his final products. With the fraction the bottom number indicates total number of prints pulled and the top number the number in which that particular print was pulled.

With the increasing competence of reproduction techniques, buyers must be warier than ever. reproductions are a valid form of obtaining a copy of a favorite old master, a young Canadian or one of the better known American moderns. They are superbly accurate in color and often recapture all that the purchaser wants. They range in price from $2 to $50. When buying them, the buyer should be informed how they were made and when. Asking questions is still a good way to avoid the rip-off of misinformation or false advertising.

AFTERNOON AND EVENING CLASSES IN INTERIOR DECORATING

Joseph Egoyan

Once again the fascinating study of interior decorating will be introduced to you by theoretical and practical analysis. These lectures will be held in the store and also supplemented by on-location studies in selected homes including a visit to the residence of Mr. Egoyan to discuss the problems arising in furniture arrangement, color schemes, lighting, styles, theme, drapery and carpet selection, and proper use of pictures and accessories.

Mr. Joseph Egoyan, B.A. ED., your instructor, is well qualified with extensive theoretical and practical knowledge. He is a graduate from the Art Institute of Chicago and the California College of arts and Crafts; has taught at Oakland Tech. High Calif., the American College in Cairo and the Evening Adult Education program in Victoria. In addition, he has a wealth of practical experience in retail field as proprietor of Ego Arts Gallery in Cairo for five years, and Ego Interiors in Victoria for sixteen years. Mr. Egoyan is a qualified artist and has exhibited his art works in a number of one-man shows in the U.A.R. and U.S.A. He won first prize in Vancouver Island Jury Show at the Art Gallery of Victoria, also a one-man show theme "BIRDS" was displayed at The Victoria Provincial Museum; The Burnaby Art Gallery and is now at Ego Interiors.

For the past thirteen years this course in interior decorating has been given by Mr. Egoyan twice yearly in three separate classes each week. At an average of twenty students in each class, more than a thousand students have taken the course to date.

THE CLASSES WILL BE HELD TUESDAY AFTERNOONS FROM 1 TO 2:30 P.M. AND ALSO EVENINGS ON MONDAY OR WEDNESDAY, 7:30 TO 9 P.M.

CLASSES START SEPT. 26th, 27th and 29th AT EGO INTERIORS. TOTAL COST OF SIX LECTURES ONCE A WEEK, $25.00.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS'

Making Pea-Pod Wine

According to Mother Earth reader Eugene Engeldinger of Strum, Wis., growing edible plants is just half the story of successful gardening. To make your garden really pay off, Engeldinger says, is to use what it produces more than once.

My family loves home-grown peas, but it had always seemed that the amount of produce we set on the table was hardly worth all the work required for growing the crop. Now, though, we've discovered that a tasty treat awaits anyone willing to try something a little different: Pea pod wine.

That's right — wine made from pea pods. In fact, the following recipe produces a fine-flavored drink that should please the palate of almost any connoisseur of homemade wine.

Wash 2½ pounds of empty pea pods and place them in a large cooking pot. Then, cut up one grapefruit and two oranges — rinds and all — and add them to the container.

At the same time, boil five quarts of water in a separate vessel and pour it over the pods and chunks of citrus fruit. Allow the mixture to stand overnight.

Bring the contents of your cooking pot to a boil the next day and strain the solution through a piece of cloth into a large fermentation vessel.

While the mixture is still hot, add four pounds of sugar and stir the solution until the sweetening is completely dissolved. After the mixture has cooled to room temperature, sprinkle one ounce of dry wine yeast across its surface.

Cover the container with a clean cloth and let it sit at room temperature for two weeks. Then, with a short length of sterilized plastic hose, siphon the liquid (but not the bottom inch or so of dregs) into a sterilized gallon jug.

The mouth of the jug is then covered with a piece of wax paper or plastic wrap, which is held in place with a rubber band. The band is attached tightly enough to keep stray bacteria and yeast out, but not so tightly that fermenting gas in the container can't escape.

Store the jug in a warm (but not hot), out-of-the-way place until its contents have quit working and all fermentation has ceased.

This fermentation may take several months, so be patient. Only when the wine is perfectly clear and contains no more bubbles should it be siphoned off into old whiskey or wine bottles and sealed with sterialized corks.

Label your bottles and store them in a dark cellar. Their corks, if properly set, will not dry out and little or no seepage will take place.

Like many other good things, pea pod wine improves with age, so try not to be too hasty in your consumption.

Fast Service and a Smile Maketh the Salesclerk

DEAR ABBY: I work at a store with a girl I'll call "Sue." She's a nice girl and very efficient, but she never smiles. When she says, "Thank you," she sounds like a recording. No sincerity, no cheerfulness, just a long face and about as much personality as a robot.

I always smile when I wait on customers. I think that's the way to get them to come back. Sue says the customers don't care whether you smile or not. They come in to buy, she says, and if they're satisfied, they'll come back, regardless.

What's your opinion? — BETTENDORF.

DEAR BETT: What customers want more than anything else are efficiency and courtesy — not smiles. The salesperson who is too busy chatting with another salesperson to notice when a customer is waiting, or the clerk who can't make change or write up a sales slip efficiently will never compensate with a smile.

But the salesperson who is courteous, efficient, ready to serve and smiles, too — ah, her price is above rubies, her paycheck shall runneth over, and her boss will rise up and call her "buyer."

DEAR ABBY: I'm a guy, age 18. Last night I dated a 17-year-old girl because I liked her looks and wanted to get to know her better.

Like most guys, I tried to see how far I could get with her. After one wrong move, she hauled off and slapped my face really hard.

Abby, I never knew a slap could feel that good. I wanted to thank her for slapping me!

I wish you'd advise more girls to use that technique. I sure have a lot of respect for that girl now. Just because a guy puts up a little fight doesn't mean he wants to win. — ST. JOE SHMO.

DEAR SHMO: Thanks for your honesty. Too many girls think if they don't let a guy go as far as he wants, they'll never see him again.

DEAR ABBY: I recently saw a documentary on television that made me sick. I couldn't get it out of my mind for days.

It was about 13-and 14-year-old girls — just kids themselves — who are expecting babies! They were being interviewed, and one 14-year-old said she got pregnant because she wanted someone to love!

What happens when she discovers that this bundle of love needs more than just the love she can give it?

Who takes care of it? — SICK.

DEAR SICK: Either the girl's parents or the taxpayers. One of the reasons I am such a true believer in Planned Parenthood is their stand on sex education, and their motto: "Every child a wanted child."

UNIVERSITIES FOCUS THEIR ATTENTION ON AGING

By ROBERT LINDSEY
New York Times

LOS ANGELES — On the top floor of a building at the University of Southern California here, researchers are trying to discover what chemical processes occur in the brain as people age. They hope to find the chemical mechanism, if there is one, that orchestrates the way people grow old and perhaps alter its effects.

Beneath these researchers, on the second floor, about 100 college students are taking courses in preparation for careers dealing with the aged, while personnel specialists of corporations such as General Foods, Xerox and Hughes Aircraft receive guidance on how to prepare their companies' employees for retirement.

And on the ground floor, there is an ebb and flow of gray-haired men and women seeking guidance in how to deal with the problems that can come with old age: loneliness, loss of memory and financial, emotional, sexual and family difficulties.

These activities are part of one of North America's first, and most comprehensive, college programs in gerontology, a word whose origins are in the linguistic root for "old" in Greek.

Traditionally, gerontology referred to the scientific study of aging. Gerontology now is becoming a linguistic umbrella embracing not only research but the training of specialists to work with older people and specialized services for the elderly.

Over the last five years, gerontology has been one of the fastest-growing fields of study on American campuses, although the quality of such programs, according to some observers, varies widely. One survey indicates that 1,275 schools now offer at least one course in gerontology, probably triple the number five years ago.

"By the year 2000, there won't be a college or university in the country that doesn't have a program in gerontology; they'll have to," says one of the pioneers in the field, Dr. James Birren, the 59-year-old director of the Ethel Percy Andrus Gerontology Centre at the University of Southern California. The centre is named for the founder of the American Association of Retired Persons and the National Retired Teachers Association.

Because it combines research, professional training and programs to help elderly people, the University of Southern California centre is regarded by some specialists as a prototype for gerontology schools of the future.

The growing interest in gerontology is rooted in demographic trends; increased lobbying and influence by older voters; sharply increased federal aid for older people and more local aid programs; and the beginning of career opportunities in a new field.

As census studies have repeatedly shown, Americans are living longer. "There are more older people alive today than the total of all the older people that ever lived in the world before," says Edwin Kaskowitz, executive director of the Washington-based Gerontological Society, whose membership, now 3,000, has tripled in the last decade.

Academic interests often march in step with the availability of government grants. The budget of the Administration on Aging, part of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, has jumped to $420 million this year from $30 million five years ago, with most of the money going for nutritional assistance to the aged, but some of it for research, training and local assistance programs.

About $30 million is being spent annually by the National Institute on Aging. Special programs for the elderly are now a part of virtually every major federal executive department, and many cities and counties have established agencies to deal with older residents.

The outlook is for continued acceleration of government aid and of demand for professionals. One recent study concluded that over the next 10 years there would be a need for 1,000 additional psychiatrists, 2,000 clinical psychologists, 4,000 psychiatric social workers, 4,000 nurses, 8,000 nurses aides and 10,000 other specialists.

The granting of college degrees with gerontology majors is still rare. The University of Southern California program, established last year as an arm of an 11-year-old gerontology research centre, offers bachelor's and master's degrees and special training for professionals already at work in the field.

School officials distinguish geriatrics, a medical specialty, from their program in "social gerontology." Their purpose, they say, is to train students for careers in research and in public agencies and private enterprises. There are courses, for example, on legal and financial difficulties peculiar to the elderly, on nutrition and sexuality, and on how to help people deal with the depression felt by many older people.

Although many of the students are middle-aged women, a few college-age students have begun to enroll. Faculty members say that while most stay in the programs, some find that working with the elderly depresses them and drop out.

The stigma of old age is a problem for fund-raisers. "Some people tell you they just don't want to be associated with anything to do with old people," said Dorothea Adamson, a fund raiser for the centre.

School administrators say the job outlook for college gerontology graduates is not yet a booming field. "It's a pioneering thing," Birren said. "I tell students: you have to create your own jobs; it's a new field, it's a little like homesteading: the land is out there to be cleared, and you have to do it."

Retirement Increases Geriatric Illness: MD

Britain's leading geriatric specialist says compulsory retirement increases the incidence of geriatric illnesses.

Sir William Ferguson-Anderson, president of the British Medical Assocaion, said Wednesday that when people are forced to retire at 60 or 65 they often are suddenly struck by illness.

After several decades of sueful and active work, "society has served them notice to quit," he said. Many retired people are happy with their pensions — but many become lonely and depressed, and then ill.

He said medical problems in older people have three facets: physical, mental and social. Medical policies now emphasize treating the body but they should be oriented towards keeping people healthy and active.

"There's no reason on earth for compulsory retirement," Ferguson-Anderson declared. clared.

"The elderly of this generation have been uncomplaining but the next generation will not be so silent," he said.

He said people should be given a choice as to whether they want to take their pension or to continue working part time.

Ferguson-Anderson, now 63, said "I haven't a clue what I'll do when I retire — probably just keep on doing what I'm doing now." He advocated programs of "pre-retirement training" like some available in his native Scotland. In the voluntary courses people are given retraining which would allow them to continue part time work. Scottish seniors are also given free medical advice and counselling on ways to handle the numerous problems of aging.

Many Canadians don't know what services are available to them, he said.

"It is all a question of education," he said. Seniors have to be taught how to handle new problems, society has to be taught about these problems, and governments have to change their policies.

Ferguson-Anderson chastised Canadian doctors and medical educators for thinking the treatment of the elderly is unimportant and unfashionable.

He said doctors are coming out of medical schools almost completely unprepared to deal with the problems of aging patients.

Illness in older people is much more difficult to treat because not only does it usually take longer to cure but often patients have difficulty in being articulate about their problems, he said. And the current problems of dealing with the aged in our society are further intensified by the fact the realative number of people over 85 years old will increase by 152 per cent in Canada by the year 2,000.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN AND JOEL: You say house plants need fresh air. Does this mean they should be put outdoors or in an open window? — M.K.

DEAR M.K.: Fresh air is essential for healthy plants, as important as light. We humans need fresh air, too. Unfortunately, there seems to be less and less of it.

House plants dislike drafts, dryness, cooking odors and gas. If your plants are drooping in the kitchen, this may indicate a gas leak so minute you may not be aware of it. Your plant will know at once and die in protest.

If you want to be sure gas is to blame, place a carnation blossom in the room. If a leak is present, in a few hours it will go to sleep, permanently. Artificial gas is not so injurious.

Most plants once accustomed to a particular atmosphere will suffer from sudden gales or breezes from outdoors, so don't put your house plants out for an airing. Open up the windows — but beware of drafts.

A plant's definition of fresh air is not synonymous with ours. Plants live on carbon dioxide which is what we exhale as a waste product. They can actually enjoy air we would term stale, provided it is sufficiently humid.

Like everything else, use your common sense and keep in mind that our plants' needs are much the same as ours — light, air, water, humidity and, above all, TLC.

The Creative Plum.

The Certo season is here. Time to create your own fresh-tasting jams, jellies and preserves with luscious, just-picked plums and Certo* fruit pectin.

ANOTHER WAY TO SAY "I LOVE YOU" TO YOUR FAMILY.

Just watch those faces light up when your family tastes the fresh-picked flavour of jams, jellies and preserves you've made yourself.
Nothing tastes so good. Or so special.

SUN-RIPENED PLUM JAM MADE WITH CERTO LIQUID.

Makes about 11 medium glasses.
4½ cups prepared fruit (about 3 lb fully ripe plums)
7½ cups sugar
½ bottle Certo liquid fruit pectin.

First prepare the fruit—Pit (do not peel) about 3 pounds plums. Cut in small pieces and chop. Add ½ cup water; bring to a boil and simmer, covered, 5 minutes. Measure 4½ cups into a large saucepan.

Then make the jam—Thoroughly mix sugar into fruit. Place over high heat, bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and at once stir in Certo. Skim off foam with metal spoon. Then stir and skim for 5 minutes to cool slightly to prevent floating fruit. Ladle quickly into sterilized glasses. Cover at once with ⅛-inch hot paraffin.

SUN-RIPENED PLUM JAM MADE WITH CERTO CRYSTALS.

Prepare fruit as above using a total of 4 pounds plums and ½ cup water to obtain 6 cups prepared fruit. Measure 8 cups sugar and set aside. Add 1 box Certo crystals to fruit in saucepan. Place over high heat and stir until mixture comes to a boil. Stir in sugar. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and continue as above. Makes about 14 medium glasses.

3 CREATIVE ADDITIONS.

Using one of the recipes previously mentioned, have fun creating your own specialty-of-the-house jams with these variations:

1. Spiced Plum Jam—Prepare Plum Jam as directed, adding ¼ teaspoon each cinnamon, cloves, and allspice to prepared fruit.
2. Plum Nutty Jam—Prepare Plum Jam as directed, adding ½ cup finely chopped walnuts to prepared fruit.
3. Plum Orangerie Jam—Prepare Plum Jam as directed, adding 1½ teaspoon grated orange rind to prepared fruit.

USE THE SHORT-BOIL OR FREEZER METHOD.

They both give you fresh-picked fruit flavour. So you choose.
Either way, you'll make luscious jams, jellies and preserves every time.

ENJOY THAT JUST-PICKED FRESH FRUIT FLAVOUR YEAR 'ROUND.

Why stop here? You've just begun!
For many, many more recipes that tell you how to turn the fruits (and vegetables) of every season into mouth-watering delicacies, take a peek underneath the label of a bottle or into a box of Certo or write to General Foods Kitchens, P.O. The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

When today's deal arose in a team-of-four match, both North-South teams arrived at a grand slam contract, but in different suits. One of them fulfilled his contract; the other went down owing to circumstances beyond his control.

NORTH
♡ A Q J 10 9 4
◇ 7
♣ K 10 8 6 5 2

WEST	EAST
♠ A Q J 9 7	♠ K 5 4 3
♡ 8 6 3	♡ 7 2
◇ K J 10 8 4	◇ 9 6 5 2
♣ –	♣ J 4 3

SOUTH
♠ 10 8 6 2
♡ K 5
◇ A Q 3
♣ A Q 9 7

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Dbl.
5 ♣	Pass	5 ◇	Dbl.
5 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
7 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

When North rebid five clubs with his freakish hand, he did not expect the bidding to terminate. He thought East-West would compete in either spades or diamonds. He was quite surprised when West passed and South then made a cue-bid in diamonds, showing first-round control of that suit.

North responded in kind, by cue-bidding spades. South then bid the small slam in clubs. From North's position, he was delighted to hear South's six-club bid, for quite often responder's original response in clubs is a temporizing bid on a broken-down suit. Upon hearing South's small slam call in clubs, North bid the grand slam.

Actually, from North's position, there was an element of danger in the seven-club bid. If South had two or three low hearts, the grand slam would depend on a successful heart finesse. However, as North viewed it, his shortness in spades and diamonds made it appear that South had length in these suits; and the likelihood that North had a singleton heart appeared good. As is evident, the play was routine, with six clubs, six hearts and the ace of diamonds there for the taking.

When the deal was replayed, our new South player also bid two clubs over North's opening one-heart bid. But the subsequent bidding was different, with North eventually reaching an excellent grand-slam contract in hearts.

Nevertheless, it was a bad day for this North declarer, for West doubled the seven-heart bid. As per convention, the double of a slam contract commands partner to lead the first suit bid by dummy. So East dutifully led a club — and West ruffed. Down one.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, August 27

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Money and friendship could be tested. Changes occur — member of opposite sex is in picture. You'll deal with gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius individuals. Something wonderful could happen to you. It is as if a dream floated through many dimensions and became real.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent on achievement, breaking loose from restrictions, settling differences with family member. One in position of authority could flash legal green light. You gain opportunity to promote abilities, beliefs, special cause.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can combine philosophy and action. Study Aries message. What seems far away may actually be within reach. Partner or mate is concerned about possessions, finances. Long-distance messages could aid in regaining sense of direction.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Involvement is keynoted. Nothing is tepid, lukewarm — it is all or nothing. Know it and don't start something you don't intend to finish. Specifically, you solve mystery. You learn where you stand with a "very special person." And if you dig beneath surface you strike pay dirt.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Hold off on new starts. Put finishing touches on current effort — know that time is on your side. Refuse to be rushed, pushed into premature action. What seems a restriction is merely a temporary delay. Yes, Aries and Taurus could be involved.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be independent, confident — employment picture brightens. Good news received concerning health. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. Relative who talks about get-rich-quick schemes is merely nervous.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What appeared a dull situation, something of a dead end will be transformed. You're given go-ahead, green light to leap over red tape, to implement policy which tests your theories, ideas, concepts, policies. Aquarian is in your corner, albeit not too obvious about it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Highlight flexibility — people at a distance seem to want something from you — all at once. Humor, balance, perspective are more important than usual. Be sure of basic requirements. Build towards security. Take cash and let credit go. In this case, means forego flattery — get wonderful promises in writing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): What is promised can also be altered — and this probably will be the case. Nothing is carved in granite at this time. Know it, be versatile, move with the tide — analyze various possibilities. Movement, notes, writing, exchange of ideas — these are on agenda and Gemini could figure in key role.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 2-Jan. 19): Obtain valid hint from Sagittarius message. Accent on loss and gain, locating what you need, reassessing current situation. You get what you want — wish is fulfilled — in very unorthodox way. Yes, a change proves beneficial. The money is available — you'll obtain it by "writing for it."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Measure actions — develop ability to put message across in assured, melodious tones. That is emphasized. Lunar cycle high — you advance, gain and make room for yourself at top. Taurus, Libra figure in scenario.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Heed inner voice — you'll know what to do and how to do it. One you feared becomes ally. You'll have chance to review special information, notes. You're receiving support from "back-stage sources." Means be aware of hidden values — and don't judge situations or people by outward appearances.

IF AUGUST 26th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are intense, critical, an organizer, an individual who fights for principles, who loves deeply and becomes passionately involved in causes. Major change is due in October. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life. Check details, tie loose ends, reinforce base in September. You are attracted to Leo, make money with Libra and get inextricably involved with Sagittarius persons.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Charlie and his wife are also on the odd number side of our road. In fact they're next door to us," said Tom. "But it's a very short street, as you know, so we know most of the people on it."

Brian had been doing some figuring on the back of an esting," he declared. "All the envelope. "That's very interodd numbers below your house and Charlie's total just half the total of the odd numbers above the two."

What were the numbers of Charlie's and Tom's houses?

Alternative to Just Plain Dawn . . .

Before committing the family to the care of a lawn by sowing grass next weekend, give a lot of thought to the benefits of shrub and tree-planting in place of the lawn.

First and most obvious will be the beauty and interest of several different kinds of permanent plants growing around the home. There will be some of especial interest during winter.

Second benefit of permanent plantings is that they do not require the almost daily care that is essential for a new lawn, and the thrice weekly mowing needed by an established lawn. The weeding of a lawn area is complicated compared to that of a shrub planting; and feeding is a three times a year project whereas shrubs with their deeper roots, rarely require fertilizer added to a well prepared, humusy soil.

The third benefit is most important of all, but one that only becomes obvious to home owners who have been living on well travelled streets in the city or suburbs for several years.

As traffic has increased, owners have found shrubs and trees growing up near the home windows not only lessened the impact of sight and sound of moving vehicles, but that exhaust fumes were no longer entering open windows and doors. This meant that the even more toxic fumes without odor were also being kept away from the home environment.

Today this ability of green foliage to counteract toxicity in the atmosphere is well known to advanced landscapers. Locally the idea was put into practice as much as 20 years ago when landscaping in the suburbs of Victoria and Saanich was at its height.

Today you will find homes on busy through streets with extensive shrub and tree areas on the street side with a small areea of grass to blend the components into a picture.

The plantings were skilfully planned so that windows are not darkened by dense plants a few inches away. Instead, shrubs were planted a few feet distant allowing light from overhead sky to enter windows. This also prevents that shut-in feeling resulting from plantings too close, and indeed smothering, windows. The foliage is however near enough to filter both sound and toxic fumes before reaching the dwelling.

Much research has been done during these past comparatively few years on the harmful effect of noise and automobile exhaust on human health. And information has been spread of beneficial effects of tree and shrub plantings to lessen the hazard. City councils with this knowledge brought to their attention are the ones who put the information to work for the citizens by using extensive tree plantings in downtown areas and creating wherever possible small green areas within the city.

Evergreen plants, either with needle foliage or broad leaves are never truly dormant therefore exert a beneficial influence all year by giving off moisture summer and winter.

Deciduous trees and shrubs with their thousands of broader leaves, transpire unbelievable gallons of water in warm weather. This not only cools the air around but acts as a filter to pollutants in the air so that with leafy shrubs and trees between traffic and home, the air indoors and in the home garden is judged as being less harmful than that at street level.

A thought to mull over on a late August day, and to begin work on during the coming fall season of planting.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to extend our sincere appreciation to our many relatives, friends and neighbors for their kind expressions of sympathy for the loss of a dear wife, mother and grandmother, Gertrude B. Lamb. Special thanks to the Oak Bay Police, Rev. Canon T. Bailey and McCall Bros for their sympathetic understanding. Clarence Lamb and Family.

The family of the late George Arthur Dyson extend their heartfelt thanks to all the many friends who were so kind during the recent illness and bereavement of a dear husband and father. Special thanks to Memorial Pavilion, Dr. G. F. Foster and Rev. Dr. H. W. Kerley. Ever remembered by wife Ethel and daughter Wilma.
—The Dyson Family

309 IN MEMORIAM

CLARK — In loving memory of Mr. Reginald A. Clarke, who passed away August 26, 1968.
Nothing can ever take away,
The love a heart holds dear.
Fond memories linger every day.
Remembrance keeps him dear.
—Lovingly remembered, Emmie, Jack, Jim, Reg, Ken, Herb, June and Families.

RAE — In loving memory of my beloved husband, David L. Rae, who passed away August 27, 1968.
—Always remembered by his loving wife — Eileen.

SMITH — Leonard W. In loving memory of a dear husband, father, and grandfather, who passed away August 26, 1976.
Our hearts still ache with sadness,
Our secret tears still flow,
What it meant to lose him,
No one will ever know.
We all loved and miss him so,
Each time we see his picture,
He seems to smile and say,
Don't cry, I'm only sleeping,
We will meet again some day.
—Sadly missed by his loving wife, Minnie, daughter Donna, son-in-law Larry, son Ron and daughter-in-law Louise, son Albert and daughter-in-law Sharon, son Bryan, son-in-law Bernie and their families.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEAR'S CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

Crime Fear 'Paranoic'

CALGARY (CP) — The public's fears of a burgeoning crime rate are grossly exaggerated — "almost paranoic" — the general council of the United Church of Canada was told Thursday by its division of mission in Canada.

Canada's Criminal code is "sorely in need of a major overhaul," says the division in a report on criminal justice.

"Currently, society is so preoccupied with stigmatizing law-breakers that the public continues to call for stiffer penalties, despite an already inflexible system where punishment, rather than rehabilitation, appears to be the primary objective.

"For every 10 persons appearing in the courts, only one is involved in violent crimes; the rest are largely indicted for minor property offences.

"For every 20 incarcerations, only one person winds up in a federal penitentiary. Of these, hardly a fifth are regarded as maximum security risks.

"Further, the people apprehended and convicted are, for the most part, the young, the unskilled, the poor and the powerless."

Abolishment of capital punishment in Canada in 1976 was "a victory of sorts" for the church.

"However, cruel long-term punishment for murder became the 'trade-off' . . .

"Essential prerequisites for a more humane system include:

—"A greater use of alternatives for punishment.

—"Removal from the Criminal Code of petty crimes which would alleviate the huge backlog of cases from the law courts.

—"Improving the morale of penitentiary staff who tend to view inmates as adversaries."

'DEHUMANIZING' RAPPED

CALGARY (CP) — Publishers of magazines and producers of television shows presenting or depicting "demeaning and dehumanizing influences" are criticized by the division of communication of the United Church of Canada in its report to the general council meeting here Thursday.

While those publishers and producers claim to be providing only what the consumer wants, says division secretary Rev. F. G. Brisbin, "the publishers and producers of this anti social material are merchandising their products for profit."

"Our Canadian society," his report says, "is being subjected increasingly to violence, sadism, explicit sex, sexploitation of children in such media as printed material, theatrical films or on TV.

"The United Church is concerned about the dehumanizing messages represented by these products, the way women are often treated as things rather than persons, the assault on children's sensitivities and the exploiting of adult consumers."

An accompanying statement of goals for the division says:

"There is some reason for concern that the news media may not always provide fair and objective coverage of matters of public interest to Canadian readers and viewers.

"Freedom of the press is of lessened value if the press is restricted in its handling of news by the biases of any influential interest group. The church should encourage the news media to provide the Canadian public with fair and honest reporting."

Lang Tried to Block CN Salary Disclosure

VANCOUVER (CP) — Transport Minister Otto Lang, in a letter written earlier this year to the United States Securities and Exchange Commission, attempted to prevent disclosure of salaries paid to senior executives of Canadian National Railways, a Crown corporation, according to The Sun.

The evening newspaper says that at the request of CN officials Lang asked the SEC not to disclose the salaries because it was "contrary to a long-standing Canadian government policy."

CN spokesman Bernard Legare said in a telephone interview from Montreal that the company resisted the salary disclosure because Canadian Pacific Ltd. was not required to reveal its executive salaries.

"We wanted to have the same treatment that CP got," said Legare.

The SEC sought the CN salary disclosure after the crown agency decided to go to the U.S. money markets to borrow $100 million. Under U.S. securities law any company seeking to raise money must file a document with the SEC which requires the disclosure of executive salaries.

The document and Lang's letter were filed earlier this year.

Sources told the Sun that CN officials weren't too concerned about their salaries being disclosed but were embarrassed that the salaries were low in comparison with those paid other Canadian and U.S. executives.

One unnamed source said "Some CN officials didn't want the Americans to think it was a bush league company because the president wasn't paid very much."

But Lang's intervention proved fruitless and in June CN was forced to disclose that in 1976 company president Robert Bandeen made $80,000, chairman Pierre Taschereau was paid $65,000 and vice-presidents R. R. Latimer, Douglas Piggot and John Spicer each received $73,000.

Lang in his letter to Carl Bodolus, SEC chief of international corporate finance, said CN is a corporation accountable to parliament.

"While I have no problem with such (salary) disclosure in respect to that whole (executive) group, as a group, or even respect of some smaller group that would nevertheless be wide enough to preserve individual anonymity, it is contrary to a long-standing Canadian government policy and practise to disclose information regarding Crown corporations to the degree of details now sought," Lang wrote.

The Lang letter is among several documents to be filed by the SEC in the U.S. court of appeals relating to a suite between the SEC and Canadian Pacific. Notice of the Lang letter came to light in a document filed by the SEC with the court.

Ferry Aid Rejected

NANAIMO — There will be no provincial subsidy for the Protection Island ferry.

The Municipal Affairs department has turned down a Nanaimo Regional Board request to apply the present regional transit system subsidy to the ferry service between the island and downtown Nanaimo.

The service has been a problem for nearly a year since the owner of a commercially-operated ferry to the island announced he was discontinuing the run.

COKE QUITS INDIA

NEW DELHI (AP) — The government, in the process of running Coca-Cola out of India, said it has chosen the name 77 for its state-produced substitute cola drink.

A member of Parliament, H.M. Kamath, has been awarded $1,150 for thinking of the name, the industry ministry said.

Although 77 won't be ready for sale until 1978, the name was chosen because 1977 was the year of big changes in India — such as the end of the Indira Gandhi government and the end of Coca-Cola, officials said.

The government asked Coca-Cola to surrender its secret syrup formula to an Indian-controlled firm or get out by April 1. Coca-Cola refused to hand over the formula.

Day of the Six-Cent Nickel Now Here

OTTAWA (CP, — The nickel will continue to be made of nickel for the time being, despite a loss of one cent on each coin produced, Yvon Gariepy, master of the Royal Canadian Mint, said Thursday.

Gariepy said in a telephone interview that an internal report is being prepared to look into ways of reducing costs of the metal used in the five-cent coin. Metal and production costs now come to about six cents.

The mint announced last week that starting in January, new one-cent coins will be three millimetres smaller in diameter and 44 per cent lighter than the familiar penny. The mint loses one cent on each of the 600 million one-cent coins it produces annually.

Gariepy said it is possible the mint may change the metal used in the five-cent coin to something cheaper than nickel or reduce the size of the coin. But he stressed that no decision has been taken, and the report is not expected for another few months.

Because the annual production of five-cent coins is only about 60 million, the problem is less urgent than for pennies, which were bringing a $6-million yearly loss, he said.

Five-cent silver coins, half the size of a dime, gave way to nickel coins in 1922. Because of wartime nickel shortages, five-cent coins in 1942 and 1943 were made of tombac, a copper-zinc alloy, and they were 12-sided to help people distinguish them from pennies.

The dodecagonal shape remained when nickel became available again in 1944 but was dropped in 1963 at the pleading of vending-machine owners. With their round shape, new nickels are sometimes confused with quarters, especially since the switch in 1969 from silver alloy to pure nickel for dimes and the larger denominations.

The reduction in the size of the penny is the second this century. Prior to 1920, the Canadian one-cent piece was considerably larger, the size of the old British penny.

Pipe Accord Hopes High

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada and the United States hope to reach agreement by the middle of next week on conditions for constructing a northern natural gas pipeline, a U.S. official said Thursday.

The official said in an interview that if talks between the two countries continue to go as well, "it looks like we're heading toward winding up next week."

Negotiations move to the ministerial level today with a private meeting between Allan MacEachen, Canada's government house leader and top pipeline negotiator, and James Schlesinger, head of the new U.S. energy department.

The official said if the one-day meeting goes well, Schlesinger might travel to Ottawa for another meeting next week to discuss plans to bring Alaskan natural gas by pipeline through Canada to the lower 48 states.

President Carter is not expected to announce whether he supports a Canadian pipeline route or an all-U.S. route until after Congress resumes Sept. 7. Congress has the final say on the route.

Earlier negotiating sessions, which involved top civil servants from both countries, centred on economic studies of proposals for the Canadian route by Foothills Pipe Lines Ltd., the U.S. official said.

Much of the talks involved the cost of services, one of the major U.S. concerns, he said.

Another U.S. official said that a major issue at the discussions is a recommendation by a Canadian inquiry that either the companies building the pipeline or the U.S. government pay $200 million to compensate Yukon residents for social and economic disruptions.

Canadian sources indicate the negotiators have been looking at some form of property or other tax or an annual payment to provide such compensation.

The Canadian inquiry also recommended the start of construction be delayed to 1981 from 1979 to allow time to settle native land claims and prepare for the project.

The U.S. wants Alaskan gas flowing south as soon as possible but might agree to a delay if the Americans receive additional Albertan natural gas.

Officials here would not comment on published reports that the negotiators have temporarily sidelined the issue of changing the route of the Foothills proposal to allow easier construction of a connecting link to move Canadian natural gas in the 1980s. Earlier, other U.S. officials indicated that changing the route would add to pipeline costs and the eventual price of the gas.

Poacher, Polluter Penalties Up Sept. 1

OTTAWA (CP) — Increased penalties for fish poachers and polluters of waterways will become law Sept. 1, Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc announced Thursday.

The law incorporates the concept of fish habitat which it describes as the breeding, growing and feeding grounds of fish. Under the changes, ministerial permission will be needed to alter any fish habitat through construction, industrial activity or waste discharge.

The penalty for harmfully disrupting fish habitat is a $5,000 fine on first offence and $10,000 or two years in jail on subsequent offences. The deposit of harmful substances into waterways for which there was a $5,400 maximum fine will have a $50,000 maximum on first offence and $100,000 on subsequent convictions.

The changes also provide for fines between $5,000 and $50,000 for not reporting spills and not complying with clean-up orders. Such penalties do not exist now.

The environment department will be able to require existing industries to fulfil compliance requirements to curb discharges of pollutants. Currently only planned industries can be required to draw up abatement programs.

The minister will be able to order the confiscation of equipment from anyone convicted of poaching. Fishermen convicted of poaching can have their licences revoked.

The penalties were part of a bill passed by the Commons in July and were described by fisheries and environment officials as badly-needed measures to help protect the country's fisheries.

DEFENCE DUTIES FOR VIP JETS

OTTAWA (CP) — Three defence department executive jets, used for hustling government VIPs around the country, will be given a new defence role, a defence department spokesman confirmed Thursday.

The spokesman said that the 10-seat Falcon jets are being modified by the armed forces at Trenton, Ont., to serve temporarily in an electronic counter-measures role.

During air defence exercises in North America, electronically-equipped aircraft simulate enemy planes attempting to distort radar reception. These war games are designed to train defence forces.

CANADA: LAND OF WAR AND VIOLENCE

KIRUNA, Sweden (CP) — A United Nations ambassador was told that despite what the world thinks, Canada is a country of war and violence.

Harry Daniels of Ottawa, the Native Council of Canada president, said war and violence is malnutrition among native people, poverty, poor education, substandard housing, a disproportionate number of native people in prisons and discriminatory laws that divide native people.

His remarks were directed at Jose Martinez Cobo, UN Ambassador to Mexico and Equador. Martinez Cobo had been invited to speak to the second conference of the World Council of Indigenous People in this Swedish arctic community and mentioned that it must be good to live in Canada where there is no war and violence.

Daneils objected strongly to the reamrk, saying that the native people in Canada represent three per cent of the general population and yet 50 per cent of the jail population.

"I do not call this a country without war and violence," Daniels added.

The verbal assault from Daniels was only one of many that Martinez Cobo, a resident of Ecquador, had to bear.

Latin American delegates especially tore into him and the UN for attitudes towards native people.

Thousands Cancel Flights

Times News Services

LONDON — Thousands of passengers cancelled reservations and airlines cut flights by 40 per cent today because of an air traffic control assistants strike. British airline official said they may even have "seats to spare."

The four-day strike, which had been expected to strand up to one million passengers, failed to create the chaos that had been expected over the long August bank holiday weekend.

"We expected a lot more people", a British Airways spokesman at Heathrow Airport said.

"All our flights are leaving one time.

"Provided things don't alter we shall be able to cope and there might even be seats to spare."

Civil aviation authorities said airlines had cut flights back 40 per cent until Tuesday, here using wider bodied planes, and were consolidating flights to get passengers out.

"Things seem to be pretty good," a Pan Am spokesman said. "We've done a bit toward helping the situation by consolidating two New York flights tonight. It hasn't been as bad as we feared it might be."

One airline executive had predicted the weekend strike would trigger the "most chaotic holiday weekend in the history of flight."

Officials at Heathrow and Gatwick, London's two major airports, said air traffic was more chaotic during the past 10 days while the assistants were staging a work slowdown which delayed almost every flight leaving Britain.

The 72 airlines using Heathrow airport announced cancellation of 160 departing flights out of the day's 480, including six long-haul services to the United States, Canada, the Middle and Far East.

British Airways, Heathrow's biggest carrier bore the brunt of cancellations, with 85 flights in an out of London axed.

A Heathrow spokesman said an airlines' hot line for flight information was working well. Few passengers showed up for flights that had been cancelled, and even more seemed to be avoiding the airports altogether.

"The indications are that a lot of people have stayed away and sought alternative means of travel," a British Airways spokesman said.

"People are taking it very well," an airport official said.

Another said Heathrow looked like a "ghost town."

In Toronto, spokesmen for Air Canada and CP Air said flights to Britain will operate during the strike but delays are expected.

John Cavill, public relations officer with Air Canada, said

CAR WORKERS REFUSE STRIKE

BIRMINGHAM, England (Reuter) — About 1,500 angry British car workers chanting "We want to work" today forced union chiefs to abandon a planned wage strike due to start tonight.

The men left the assembly line at British Leyland's giant Longbridge auto plant here and marched through the factory in an angry impromptu demonstration — scenes almost unheard of in Britain.

They marched to the office of Derek Robinson, the senior shop-floor union official, telling union stewards who tried to pacify them: "Get stuffed."

Robinson decided to cancel orders to start the strike of 20,000 men at the plant, but insisted there was a two-to-one majority in favor of strike action.

The strike was aimed at forcing the state-owned British Leyland to talk about a 47-per-cent wage claim.

Since the firm was saved from collapse with a $4.7-billion government cash injection in April, 1975, there have been 700 disputes and 10 major strikes.

The unexpected workers' revolt was heady news for the embattled Labor government.

MORE SPENT OVERSEAS

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canadians spent $1.246 billion more abroad than visitors spent vacationing here in the first half of 1977, preliminary estimates from Statistics Canada showed Thursday.

Canada earned $705 million from international travel compared to $668 million in the first half of 1976. Canadians spent $1.951 billion abroad, up from $1.641 billion in the same period last year. Americans vacationing in Canada spent $517 million while visitors from other countries spent $188 million.

Gas, Fuel Oil Price Rises On Tuesday

The price of gasoline will rise at least 3.5 cents a gallon and heating oil 3.1 cents effective Tuesday, major B.C. oil companies said today.

The increases result from a $1 a barrel hike in the price of crude oil two months ago.

The companies said these increases are at the wholesale level and individual retailers may decide to raise prices by more than the specified amounts.

In addition, some companies may increase their wholesale prices by more than the minimum amount but it would only be by a fraction of a cent.

Exact amounts will not be announced until the weekend for competitive reasons.

"At the wholesale level it is mainly a matter of having the increase in crude oil reflected in the price for gasoline and heating oil," a company spokesman said.

"All price increases by the various companies will be similar because of the identical cost increases."

The increases are part of a pattern established by Ottawa to increase crude oil prices every six months by $1 per barrel until the Canadian price matches the world market level.

This means the crude price will rise again Jan. 1 and the wholesale and retail price of gasoline will rise by at least another 3.5 cents on March 1.

Ottawa has said it will continue these increases at least until 1979.

By October, 1978, the price of gasoline will have risen at least 10.5 cents per gallon because of this policy.

Increases of at least 3.5 cents will come Tuesday and on March 1 and again on Sept. 1, 1978.

"At some point the oil companies may decide to increase the wholesale price by more than 3.5 cents as this is a minimum amount," an oil company spokesman sid.

"And of course retailers can charge as much as they want."

Mortgage Rip-Off 'Legal'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver RCMP have uncovered two real estate schemes through which homeowners and businessmen have been duped out of more than $500,000 in the past year. And, although the number of people involved in the schemes is increasing, most aspects of the cases appear strictly legal.

Private homeowners have seen their retirement investments wiped out, while in one case a British Columbia company lost $240,000.

Segeant Ernie Brydon of the Vancouver RCMP's commercial fraud section said Thursday that his department is investigating 14 cases in which private homeowners have lost as much as $55,000 each through what police call priority mortgage schemes.

A sergeant in the commercial fraud section of the Victoria RCMP detachment said the priority mortgage scheme has not been worked in the Victoria area as far as he knows: "We've received no complaints in that line."

In six of the cases charges of conspiracy with intent to defraud have been laid, although none have resulted in convictions yet. The B.C. Law Society, however, has suspended one lawyer and is reviewing the practices of two others in connection with alleged mortgage irregularities.

The commercial fraud section is also investigating another six cases of what it calls fraudulent mortgage finders' fees in which some prominent Vancouver businessmen and professional athletes have lost heavily.

One such case involves a firm that was duped out of $240,000, but the company refuses to press charges in the hope of recovering some of its money through civil action. It also fears loss of investor confidence on the stock market if the case became public.

Brydon said his department decided to expose the schemes publicly because the volume of the files has increased dramatically in the past few months and police "feel there is criminality there, but we haven't been able to prove intent (to defraud) yet."

LANDFILL FOR HOLE

landfill should remedy this village's mystery hole problem, acting mayor Mike George said Wednesday.

George was reporting on the preliminary findings of two provincial environment department experts, dispatched to this upper Arrow Lake community after a large hole suddenly appeared just one block from the main business district.

The hole started forming last Friday, a seemingly bottomless pit of water that grew to about 80 feet long by 60 feet wide.

But acting clerk Brian Bielefeld estimated that up to $40,000 worth of fill will be needed and the village has only "two or three thousand bucks" in the bank.

"And we can't borrow anything because we've already stretched our borrowing power to the limit on other projects," he added.

Oil Exploration Sales Hit All-Time High

Sales of oil and gas exploration rights in B.C. to date this year have hit an all-time high of $92 million, Mines Minister Jim Chabot said today.

The amount is more than the total sales of the previous three years.

"This is fantastic news and is a clear indication of the return of confidence in our province on the part of the petroleum industry," said Chabot.

The province sells oil and gas exploration rights by annual lease sales. The fourth sale on 199 parcels of oil and gas rights has just been completed bringing in a total of $54.5 million.

The fifth and final sale for 1977 will be held in November.

In 1974, sales realized a total of $23 million: a 1975 total of $12.7 million and 1976 sales reached the $43.2 million mark, for a total of $78.9 million.

Chabot said proceeds from the latest sale exceed the expectations of his department.

"We thought that we would be doing very well if we broke a previous record set earlier this year."

He said proceeds of the sales go directly into the provincial treasury, along with $298,669.60 received as statutory fees and rents from the petroleum industry.

Chabot stressed the sales were only for exploration rights and that further benefits will accrue to the province from any major discoveries.

CITY TO CONTROL STREET TIN RATTLERS

Tin rattlers and others soliciting for donations for various groups on Victoria's streets will be subject to controls under a "street collections" bylaw introduced by Victoria city council on Thursday.

The preamble to the bylaw says the measures are necessary because "several persons have been abusing the privilege of collecting on the city's streets, thereby creating a nuisance."

When the bylaw is given final approval in two weeks, no person will be allowed to conduct street soliciting unless he or she is a member of an organization which has been granted a permit by city hall.

Collectors will also have to display "prominently" a tag bearing the name of their organization in legible letters at least one centimetre high.

Those providing misleading information on the application form for a permit, or contravening the bylaw in some other way, are liable to a $500 fine or 30 days in jail.

JAKARTA (AP) — A major earthquake struck eastern Indonesia today not far from the scene of a powerful quake that killed more than 100 persons a week ago, the Indonesian metorological department reported. There were no immediate reports of damage or casualties.

Sincere Job Effort—Bennett

Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday that if cabinet approves Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm's proposal to use welfare recipeints in anti-vandal patrols, "it will be a sincere effort to provide job opportunities."

Bennett made the statement in reply to questions by Rosemary Brown (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard), who asked for assurance the program wouldn't just be a way for the government to get cheap labor.

"I want your assurance that it will be legitimate employment . . . that this isn't going to force old age pensioners to work for their pensions," said Brown.

Bennett replied that he hadn't yet heard the details of the proposed program but that he would not approve any plans to get cheap labor for the government.

Vander Zalm announced Wednesday his plans to propose a program — Operation Vandal Stop — that would have male welfare recipients working as janitors and security guards in B.C. schools.

Vander Zalm said the program needs the support of Education Minister Pat McGeer and cabinet before it can go ahead.

Earth Thrown At Aussie PM

SYDNEY, Australia (CP) — Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser was hit in the face with clumps of earth today during a demonstration protesting against his government's decision to resume uranium exports.

Fraser was attacked when he arrived at the University of New South Wales to address a businessmen's dinner.

Several thousand demonstrators had gathered at the entrance to the building where the dinner was to be held.

The attack took place as Fraser walked through a crowd of demonstrators held back by police barricades. Several clods of earth were thrown at him, striking him in the face.

Fraser was not hurt, police said.

Opponents of the government's decision to open Australia's vast uranium reserves for export called for a campaign of protest marches, strikes and legal action.

More than 1,000 protesters demonstrated outside Parliament House in Canberra Thursday night, and demonstrations were being organized today in the major cities.

Police reinforcements were ordered to the University of New South Wales in Sydney tonight to protect Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser at a faculty dinner there. An anti-uranium rally was to be followed by a march on the campus.

The Movement Against Uranium Mining announced it will start legal action against mining companies and will challenge provisions in the Australian Atomic Energy Act.

DRAYTON VALLEY, Alta. (CP) — A gas pipeline explosion near this community 60 miles southwest of Edmonton lit up the sky with 150-foot flames for almost an hour late Thursday night. It was caused by lightning during an electrical storm.

Wall St. Off

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices showed some widespread declines again today under the influence of interest-rate worries and talk of a business slowdown. The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 4.67 at 849.45, after an 7.75-point drop Thursday to its lowest level since the end of 1975.

Life Span of Cancer Victims Not Extended

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Doctors aren't able to extend the lives of cancer patients much more, on average, than they were 25 years ago, a new federal study discloses.

This is true in spite of billions of dollars that have been spent in the interim on research and new methods of cancer treatment.

In the years 1967-73 — the latest years surveyed — just 41 per cent of all white cancer patients survived five years from the time it was discovered they had the disease, the study shows. This over-all white rate compares with 40 per cent in 1960-66 and 39 per cent in 1950-59.

These figures and a host of others, some even grimmer, some brighter, are disclosed in the National Cancer Institute's latest report on "Cancer Patient Survival," based on detailed study of cancer patients in four states.

"The over-all survival rate means almost nothing for the individual patient," Ardyce J. Asire, one of the editors of the massive study made every five years, cautioned. The latest five-year survivals range from only one per cent of all patients among whites and three per cent among blacks with cancer of the pancreas to 77 per cent among whites, though only 47 per cent among blacks, with womb cancer.

The survival rate for "all cancers" is also lower than it would be because of a huge recent increase — an epidemic, say authorities — of just one kind of cancer with a poor general outlook. This is lung cancer, the cigarette smokers' disease, for which over-all five-year survival is six per cent among blacks, nine per cent among whites.

Also, authorities said, some persons with any kind of cancer, especially those caught in an early or localized stage of the disease, may survive far longer than any "average."

The latest survival rate was called "provisional" — in effect, an estimate — by cancer institute statisticians, since a complete five-year follow-up is not yet possible for all persons whose cancers were diagnosed in 1967-73.

The statisticians pointed out, too, that their figures are based on survival in two states, California and Connecticut, with state tumor registries that keep good track of cancer treatment.

Dr. Arthur Upton, new director of the cancer institute, called the over-all trend "heartening" despite "room for improvements." He pointed to the improved results in bladder and prostate cancer among major cancers and in the leukemias (or blood cancers) and Hodgkins disease among less common cancers.

TOWN TALK

"Is there still a ban on burning?" the caller asked the Saanich fire department.

Yes, the fire official said, but it would probably be lifted next morning following this week's rain.

The lady caller thanked him and hung up.

A few minutes later, the phone at the firehall rang again.

"Could you please help me?" the same woman pleaded. "My living room is full of smoke and cinders."

What happened? Well, it seems when the caller was told the burning ban was still in effect, she poured water on the fire she had lit in her living room fireplace.

The Queen may soon be dining on such delicacies as Old Fashioned Figged Duff, Efo Iro (Nigerian spinach) or Cream of Fiddlehead Soup.

They're among the recipes contained in a Jubilee cookbook entitled Special Commonwealth Recipes, compiled by the Vancouver Island branch of the Royal Commonwealth Society. A copy was sent to the Queen.

The silver-covered cookbook contains recipes from each province and 35 branches of the Commonwealth Society as well as excerpts from remarks made by Commonwealth leaders.

A letter from Buckingham Palace to Lilian Chambers, president of the Vancouver Island branch, states that Her Majesty "is delighted with her copy."

A crime prevention presentation produced for the Saanich police department may soon be used throughout Canada.

The eight-minute presentation, prepared for the department's Neighborhood Watch program, features slide pictures of actual burglaries, a narration and a musical theme.

Saanich police Chief Bob Peterson said a number of chiefs attending the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police convention at the Empress say it's the best crime-prevention presentation they've seen and indications are it will be used in cities across the country.

The program, entitled The Accomplice, was funded by the Saanich Rotary Club and prepared by some of the bright lights who work for C-FAX radio station in Victoria.

When Mary Ann Anderson went on a fishing-cum-sailing trip to Campbell River recently with her uncle, David Anderson, it wasn't too surprising that she wore a T-shirt bearing the slogan "True Grit".

Anderson, after all, is a former leader of the Liberal party in B.C.

The T-shirt, however, led to an encounter and a conversation that Mary Ann, 15, won't soon forget.

Turns out John (Duke) Wayne, star of True Grit and a hundred other movies, was up in Campbell River on one of his frequent fishing trips.

Wayne saw the slogan and after a long and fairly complicated explanation by Anderson that True Grit related to the Liberal party and not the movie, Wayne autographed the shirt.

Mary Ann's father, Malcolm, says he understands that his brother's attempts to explain the Liberal party to Wayne (who tends to be rather rightish in political outlook) had to be heard to be believed.

Youthful Gusto Brings Improvement To Parks

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Provincial marine parks off the Saanich peninsula were upgraded this summer, thanks to 12 members of a youth crew who tackled their jobs with such gusto that park officials hope to have them back next year.

The boys, age 15 and 16, all from the interior and employed by the parks branch, returned to their homes Thursday.

They were responsible for park maintenance, building trails and carrying out a number of improvements to Sidney Spit Park, Princess Margaret Park on Portland Island, Ruckle Park on Salt Spring Island and Bamberton Park.

"It has been an active season for marine parks," said Don Carruthers, superintendent of the Malahat District office at Goldstream Park. "We accomplished things. Next summer we hope to continue expanding our marine park facilities."

He said the youth crew was largely responsible for this year's successes.

The 724-acre Sidney Island park received the most attention because of the heavy use it gets from boaters and campers. It was not uncommon to see more than 200 boats archored off the spit at one time.

Twenty-five mooring rings were installed, but these were taxed to the limit by rafting — boats tying up to one another and relying on a single ring for anchorage.

"I have never seen the park and the achorage so heavily used," said Carruthers. "The campsites were continually occupied. The park at times was overrun with boaters."

Two extra toilets were installed and the park generally cleaned up.

Next year, the park branch plans to install an extra 100 feet of wharfage, complete with two dingy floats, at its Sidney Island Park.

Trails were also brushed out at Ruckle and Princess Margaret Park and next summer new ones will be established, Carruthers said.

The boys who looked after the marine parks were only part of a 357-youth work force employed this summer in provincial parks. They were camped on Princess Margaret Park.

It was the first time a youth crew had been employed for the marine parks off the south end of the Island. In previous years, a youth camp was maintained on Newcastle Island off Nanaimo.

The main objects of youth crews is to give young people meaningful work and to provide them with outdoor experiences. For the majority, it is the first time they have been away from home, working and living among their peers.

Garry Schwabe, senior foreman, said it was a unique experience for the 12 youths from the interior.

"For many it was the first time they had seen the sea," he said.

Dave Grieve of Fruitvale agreed.

"The first thing I did when I got here was to taste the sea — to find out if it was really salty, he said.

Scott Austin of Summerland said it was his first time he had been on the islands.

"I found living on an Island, isolated from towns and cities, quite an experience," he said.

The youths were all fascinated with the sea life.

JOB SCHEME SET FOR 40 DROPOUTS

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

A new job program for school dropouts will be launched in September, it was announced today.

A budget of $25,000 will find work for 40 Victoria students and more funds will be made available as the need grows.

The announcement was made jointly this morning by Canada Manpower and Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

"This program will assist young people who need help the most," chamber manager Brian Small said.

"These (dropouts) are the last to be hired and the first to get into trouble. Many of them quit and just hang around the school creating trouble. Often they persuade other kids to quit. This program will help to solve many different social problems."

The program evolved out of a summer work project for dropouts.

"We soon saw the need for something on a year-round basis because students drop out of school during the school year," Small said.

Canada Manpower arranged a pilot project in Victoria with five dropouts in February under the direction of job education director Susan Ballor.

The project was successful; three students have decided to return to school in September and the other two have found permanent employment.

The new program will be called JET, for Job Education and Training, and will be coordinated through the Canada Manpower office.

Students who want assistance through JET apply to their school consellor, who will refer them to the program.

The federal government pays 50 per cent of the salary to a maximum of $600 for nine weeks of employment. When they complete their term of work they may decide to return to school, take permanent work or enter another Canada Manpower job assistance program.

"This will get them through the very difficult period when they first leave school," Small said.

"Many of these students have heavy problems. There may be a broken home or personality conflicts. If they drop out of school with no place to go, they are likely to get into trouble."

Small said his recommending to the schools that students who decide to return after working for nine weeks get classroom credit for their job experience rather than being penalized for missing school.

The ideal situation, he said, is for the employer to give the student a part-time job at the conclusion of the program so he or she can return to school and still have an income.

"Often a lack of money is a major factor in students dropping out of school."

Small and Ballor co-ordinated the summer work program for dropouts, which will be repeated next summer in addition to the new work project. There were 85 employed this summer.

Small said he will recommend to Ottawa and to the provincial government that all job-finding programs for young people be co-ordinated through Canada Manpower to avoid confusion.

"There should be a central clearing office for these programs and Manpower is the local place."

Second Escaper Caught

The second of three inmates who vanished from William Head federal prison overnight July 14 has been nabbed by police.

Ronald Joseph Tupholme, 28, was picked up in Ontario earlier this week.

He appeared in provincial court Thursday charged with escape and was remanded to next Wednesday for plea.

Tupholme's arrest leaves only Alain Joseph Lalumiere, 22, still at large.

The body of the third inmate, Michael Lloyd Armstrong, was found in the sea off the prison Aug. 13.

An inquest into Armstrong's death begins next Tuesday.

Meanwhile, a warrant has been issued for the arrest of William Head inmate Jamie William Ramsey, 22, who failed to return to the prison Thursday night after being issued a day pass.

Ramsey was on day parole.

He was serving three years for a Vancouver robbery and was due for release on July 15, 1978.

He is described as 5 feet, 11 inches tall, 160 pounds with hazel eyes, black hair and has a tatoo of a star on his right shoulder.

$87,790.26 Going Down The Drain?

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The Capital Regional Board will pay its engineering consultants $87,790.26 for designing a sewage pumping station at McMicking Point which will probably never be built.

That's part of an agreement hammered out by regional directors behind closed doors in recent weeks to cover their working arrangement with Ker, Priestman and Associates Ltd. on a $10 million sewage project centred on Clover Point.

The contract comes 3½ years after Ker, Priestman began work on the job, the board having earlier rejected a number of draft agreements.

Under terms of the contract, made available Thursday, the consultants will be paid $670,564.86 for work they and subconsultants have done to the end of April this year.

The regional board will pay another $174,941 for the consulting work needed to finish the job about the end of next year, for a total of $845,505.86.

The regional board is acting for Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich and it is taxpayers in these municipalities who will foot the bill. Victoria's share is about half, Oak Bay's 38.5 per cent and Saanich's almost 11 per cent.

At present almost 9 million gallons of raw sewage are discharged daily near shore from outfalls at Clover and McMicking Points.

As first planned, the project would have seen it all pumped out a 6,400-foot outfall off Clover Point. But the big McMicking Point pump station that would have required was vigorously opposed by neighbors and later by Oak Bay council.

An alternate plan will see the McMicking outfall extended to about 600 feet, if the Pollution Control Branch approves, and tested for a year. Meanwhile, the giant pumping station at Clover Point is near completion and the outfall under construction.

The change came after Ker, Priestman had produced a detailed design for the McMicking pump station.

Earlier this year, some regional board members had questioned whether the consultants had ever been given authority to proceed with the McMicking design.

The board had its lawyer review the situation and directors were told Ker, Priestman had been given such authority. The lawyer and consultants also worked out the agreement finally ratified by the board.

McKenzie Draws Mayor's Rebuke

Victoria Mayor Mike Young rebuked Ald. Ron McKenzie at Thursday's city council meeting for making public statements about the central library relocation proposal at variance with council's own stand on the issue — which McKenzie himself earlier supported.

"If members of council have supported a motion, I don't expect them to turn around later and make public statements which are not in support of that action," said Young.

"We can't conduct business that way."

Young said it is not "courteous" for the alderman to have made comments in the press about the matter without first raising it before council.

He was referring to McKenzie's recent suggestion that the four core municipalities consider purchasing the Monteal Trust Building at 1061 Fort Street as a new home for the central library. The alderman had earlier supported a council motion that the municipalities lease space from the provincial government in the new provincial building at Blanshard and Broughton.

When McKenzie acted on the mayor's suggestion that he call for city council reconsideration of the matter, he was unable to get a seconder for the motion.

Young commented: "Now I know where you stand and I know where council stands on this matter."

BREAK-IN BREAKOUT

Victoria police are investigating a rash of break-ins in the Vic West area Thursday.

A spokesman said seven homes on Alderman, Northcott, Selkirk and Connaught were broken into between 4 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Only small amounts of cash were reported missing.

Guilty Plea to Bank Holdup

A Saanich teen-ager pleaded guilty in county court today to armed robbery of $21,062 from the Royal Bank of Canada, 2973 Tillicum, on Jan. 11.

Harold Einar Hemstad, 19, of 649 Baxter, also pleaded guilty to unlawful confinement of George Carroll, 26, on the same day.

The prosecution entered a stay of proceedings on four other counts of the indictment, including kidnapping Carroll, auto theft, theft of a revolver and possession of stolen property.

Hemstad will be sentenced Sept. 22 after receipt of a presentence report.

Circumstances were not given in court.

A second person who had been jointly accused with Hemstad had his case put over to Oct. 21 to fix a trial date.

24-Hour Contact Lenses Safe: Specialist

An improved water-content contact lens which can be worn 24 hours a day is safe if prescribed and properly fitted by a physician, Dr. A. N. North, Victoria eye specialist, said Thursday.

He was commenting on a statement by Dr. Irving Baker, chief registrar of the Toronto College of Optometrists, that there hasn't been enough research on the effects of wearing lenses 24-hours a day.

"As far as the industry is concerned, we have addressed our members not to prescribe or fit these kinds of soft lenses," Irving said.

The lenses are made of 80 to 85 per cent water.

Irving's views followed similar warning by the United States Food and Drug Administration that not enough research has been done.

The federal health protection branch has reservations about the contacts, but has allowed them on the market as there has been no complaints.

North said there is nothing wrong with the lenses. They have been tested and used in Britain and Europe. He said he has been supplying them to patients.

"The United States lags far behind Europe in the use of these lenses," he said. "That's minly because FDA regulations require elaborate and rigid testing of new products."

He said the problems arising from wearing water-contact lenses, which originated in Czechoslovakia, stem from promotion and marketing.

"When they are sold to anyone without prescription or proper fittings, there is bound to be trouble," he said. "They are expensive, between $300 and $400."

He said some people can wear them for long periods without taking them out and having them cleaned. Others can't, however, because of lack of moisture in their eyes or for other reasons. They have to be removed and cleaned periodically.

North said water-content lenses are useful for the aged, who may lack the manual dexterity to remove conventional lenses.

"They are an improvement, but should only be worn if they have been prescribed and properly fitted," he said.

TSE Oil, Gas Plunge 15 Points

At Toronto the market continued its sharp plunge in moderate mid-afternoon trading Friday despite a partial recovery at New York.

The TSE 300 Index was down 7.88 to 1,007.21 with losses in all four of its most heavily-weighted groups, while the Dow Jones index recorded a three-point decline.

Among the four TSE composite groups, oil and gas issues plunged 15.23 to 1,165.64, metals and minerals 8.02 to 941.20, financial services 7.58 to 946.99 and industrial products 6.40 to 890.59.

Pipeline stocks dropped almost 18 points to lead the eight losers among the other 10 groups within the 14-unit TSE index. Gold and real estate and construction issues were the only gainers.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 1.51 million shares compared with 1.35 million at the same time Thursday.

Declines tripled advances 239 to 84 with 206 issues unchanged.

Trading will resume at Monday's opening in shares of Campeau Corp., halted Wednesday pending dissemination of news that the company is offering $5.50 a share for all of its own shares. Class A shares last traded at $4.35 a share and Class B at $4.40 a share.

Among other industrials, Crows Nest Industries dropped 2½ to $45, Texaco Canada 1¼ to $29, Westcoast Petroleum A ⅞ to $20½, Husky Oil ⅝ to $23⅞ and Gulf Oil Canada ⅝ to $27½.

Pop Shoppes International was up ⅛ to $8⅛, United Tire and Rubber A five cents to $1.05, Warnaco of Canada ¼ to $7, Banister Continental ¼ to $11⅞ and Burns Foods ⅛ to $9½.

Denison Mines fell ½ to $53½, Rio Algom ½ to $25⅝ and Roman Corp. ¼ to $20. Canada Tungsten Mining gained ¼ to $10¼ and Camflo Mines ⅛ to $13.

Ranger Oil Canad was down 1 to $24, Canadian Superior Oil ⅝ to $54¼ and Pan-Canadian Petroleum ⅝ to $30. Paloma Petroleum rose ¼ to $6 and Prairie Oil Royalties ¼ to $9⅝.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than a 2-to-1 spread among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The decline also pushed the NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks into new low territory for the year. The index, which had held all summer above its May 31 low of 52.56, was down .26 at 52.41 at mid-afternoon.

TOWN TALK

"Is there still a ban on burning?" the caller asked the Saanich fire department.

Yes, the fire official said, but it would probably be lifted next morning following this week's rain.

The lady caller thanked him and hung up.

A few minutes later, the phone at the firehall rang again.

"Could you please help me?" the same woman pleaded. "My living room is full of smoke and cinders."

What happened? Well, it seems when the caller was told the burning ban was still in effect, she poured water on the fire she had lit in her living room fireplace.

The Queen may soon be dining on such delicacies as Old Fashioned Figged Duff, Efo Iro (Nigerian spinach) or Cream of Fiddlehead Soup.

They're among the recipes contained in a Jubilee cookbook entitled Special Commonwealth Recipes, compiled by the Vancouver Island branch of the Royal Commonwealth Society. A copy was sent to the Queen.

The silver-covered cookbook contains recipes from each province and 35 branches of the Commonwealth Society as well as excerpts from remarks made by Commonwealth leaders.

A letter from Buckingham Palace to Lilian Chambers, president of the Vancouver Island branch, states that Her Majesty "is delighted with her copy."

A crime prevention presentation produced for the Saanich police department may soon be used throughout Canada.

The eight-minute presentation, prepared for the department's Neighborhood Watch program, features slide pictures of actual burglaries, a narration and a musical theme.

Saanich police Chief Bob Peterson said a number of chiefs attending the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police convention at the Empress say it's the best crime-prevention presentation they've seen and indications are it will be used in cities across the country.

The program, entitled The Accomplice, was funded by the Saanich Rotary Club and prepared by some of the bright lights who work for C-FAX radio station in Victoria.

When Mary Ann Anderson went on a fishing-cum-sailing trip to Campbell River recently with her uncle, David Anderson, it wasn't too surprising that she wore a T-shirt bearing the slogan "True Grit".

Anderson, after all, is a former leader of the Liberal party in B.C.

The T-shirt, however, led to an encounter and a conversation that Mary Ann, 15, won't soon forget.

Turns out John (Duke) Wayne, star of True Grit and a hundred other movies, was up in Campbell River on one of his frequent fishing trips.

Wayne saw the slogan and after a long and fairly complicated explanation by Anderson that True Grit related to the Liberal party and not the movie, Wayne autographed the shirt.

Mary Ann's father, Malcolm, says he understands that his brother's attempts to explain the Liberal party to Wayne (who tends to be rather rightish in political outlook) had to be heard to be believed.

Youthful Gusto Brings Improvement To Parks

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Provincial marine parks off the Saanich peninsula were upgraded this summer, thanks to 12 members of a youth crew who tackled their jobs with such gusto that park officials hope to have them back next year.

The boys, age 15 and 16, all from the interior and employed by the parks branch, returned to their homes Thursday.

They were responsible for park maintenance, building trails and carrying out a number of improvements to Sidney Spit Park, Princess Margaret Park on Portland Island, Ruckle Park on Salt Spring Island and Bamberton Park.

"It has been an active season for marine parks," said Don Carruthers, superintendent of the Malahat District office at Goldstream Park. "We accomplished things. Next summer we hope to continue expanding our marine park facilities."

He said the youth crew was largely responsible for this year's successes.

The 724-acre Sidney Island park received the most attention because of the heavy use it gets from boaters and campers. It was not uncommon to see more than 200 boats anchored off the spit at one time.

Twenty-five mooring rings were installed, but these were taxed to the limit by rafting — boats tying up to one another and relying on a single ring for anchorage.

"I have never seen the park and the achorage so heavily used," said Carruthers. "The campsites were continually occupied. The park at times was overrun with boaters."

Two extra toilets were installed and the park generally cleaned up.

Next year, the park branch plans to install an extra 100 feet of wharfage, complete with two dingy floats, at its Sidney Island Park.

Trails were also brushed out at Ruckle and Princess Margaret Park and next summer new ones will be established, Carruthers said.

The boys who looked after the marine parks were only part of a 357-youth work force employed this summer in provincial parks. They were camped on Princess Margaret Park.

It was the first time a youth crew had been employed for the marine parks off the south end of the Island. In previous years, a youth camp was maintained on Newcastle Island off Nanaimo.

The main objects of youth crews is to give young people meaningful work and to provide them with outdoor experiences. For the majority, it is the first time they have been away from home, working and living among their peers.

Garry Schwabe, senior foreman, said it was a unique experience for the 12 youths from the interior.

"For many it was the first time they had seen the sea," he said.

Dave Grieve of Fruitvale agreed.

"The first thing I did when I got here was to taste the sea — to find out if it was really salty, he said.

Scott Austin of Summerland said it was his first time he had been on the islands.

"I found living on an Island, isolated from towns and cities, quite an experience," he said.

The youths were all fascinated with the sea life.

JOB SCHEME SET FOR 40 DROPOUTS

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

A new job program for school dropouts will be launched in September, it was announced today.

A budget of $25,000 will find work for 40 Victoria students and more funds will be made available as the need grows.

The announcement was made jointly this morning by Canada Manpower and Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

"This program will assist young people who need help the most," chamber manager Brian Small said.

"These (dropouts) are the last to be hired and the first to get into trouble. Many of them quit and just hang around the school creating trouble. Often they persuade other kids to quit. This program will help to solve many different social problems."

The program evolved out of a summer work project for dropouts.

"We soon saw the need for something on a year-round basis because students drop out of school during the school year," Small said.

Canada Manpower arranged a pilot project in Victoria with five dropouts in February under the direction of job education director Susan Ballor.

The project was successful; three students have decided to return to school in September and the other two have found permanent employment.

The new program will be called JET, for Job Education and Training, and will be coordinated through the Canada Manpower office.

Students who want assistance through JET apply to their school counsellor, who will refer them to the program.

The federal government pays 50 per cent of the salary to a maximum of $600 for nine weeks of employment. When they complete their term of work they may decide to return to school, take permanent work or enter another Canada Manpower job assistance program.

"This will get them through the very difficult period when they first leave school," Small said.

"Many of these students have heavy problems. There may be a broken home or personality conflicts. If they drop out of school with no place to go, they are likely to get into trouble."

Small said he is recommending to the schools that students who decide to return after working for nine weeks get classroom credit for their job experience rather than being penalized for missing school.

The ideal situation, he said, is for the employer to give the student a part-time job at the conclusion of the program so he or she can return to school and still have an income.

"Often a lack of money is a major factor in students dropping out of school."

Small and Ballor co-ordinated the summer work program for dropouts, which will be repeated next summer in addition to the new work project. There were 85 employed this summer.

Small said he will recommend to Ottawa and to the provincial government that all job-finding programs for young people be co-ordinated through Canada Manpower to avoid confusion.

"There should be a central clearing office for these programs and Manpower is the local place."

Second Escaper Caught

The second of three inmates who vanished from Willliam Head federal prison overnight July 14 has been nabbed by police.

Ronald Joseph Tupholme, 28, was picked up in Ontario earlier this week.

He appeared in provincial court Thursday charged with escape and was remanded to next Wednesday for plea.

Tupholme's arrest leaves only Alain Joseph Lalumiere, 22, still at large.

The body of the third inmate, Michael Lloyd Armstrong, was found in the sea off the prison Aug. 13.

An inquest into Armstrong's death begins next Tuesday.

Meanwhile, a warrant has been issued for the arrest of William Head inmate Jamie William Ramsey, 22, who failed to return to the prison Thursday night after being issued a day pass.

Ramsey was on day parole.

He was serving three years for a Vancouver robbery and was due for release on July 15, 1978.

He is described as 5 feet, 11 inches tall, 160 pounds with hazel eyes, black hair and has a tatoo of a star on his right shoulder.

$87,790.26 Going Down The Drain?

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The Capital Regional Board will pay its engineering consultants $87,790.26 for designing a sewage pumping station at McMicking Point which will probably never be built.

That's part of an agreement hammered out by regional directors behind closed doors in recent weeks to cover their working arrangement with Ker, Priestman and Associates Ltd. on a $10 million sewage project centred on Clover Point.

The contract comes 3½ years after Ker, Priestman began work on the job, the board having earlier rejected a number of draft agreements.

Under terms of the contract, made available Thursday, the consultants will be paid $670,564.86 for work they and subconsultants have done to the end of April this year.

The regional board will pay another $174,941 for the consulting work needed to finish the job about the end of next year, for a total of $845,505.86.

The regional board is acting for Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich and it is taxpayers in these municipalities who will foot the bill. Victoria's share is about half, Oak Bay's 38.5 per cent and Saanich's almost 11 per cent.

At present almost 9 million gallons of raw sewage are discharged daily near shore from outfalls at Clover and McMicking Points.

As first planned, the project would have seen it all pumped out a 6,400-foot outfall off Clover Point. But the big McMicking Point pump station that would have required was vigorously opposed by neighbors and later by Oak Bay council.

An alternate plan will see the McMicking outfall extended to about 600 feet, if the Pollution Control Branch approves, and tested for a year. Meanwhile, the giant pumping station at Clover Point is near completion and the outfall under construction.

The change came after Ker, Priestman had produced a detailed design for the McMicking pump station.

Earlier this year, some regional board members had questioned whether the consultants had ever been given authority to proceed with the McMicking design.

The board had its lawyer review the situation and directors were told Ker, Priestman had been given such authority. The lawyer and consultants also worked out the agreement finally ratified by the board.

McKenzie Draws Mayor's Rebuke

Victoria Mayor Mike Young rebuked Ald. Ron McKenzie at Thursday's city council meeting for making public statements about the central library relocation proposal at variance with council's own stand on the issue — which McKenzie himself earlier supported.

"If members of council have supported a motion, I don't expect them to turn around later and make public statements which are not in support of that action," said Young.

"We can't conduct business that way."

Young said it is not "courteous" for the alderman to have made comments in the press about the matter without first raising it before council.

He was referring to McKenzie's recent suggestion that the four core municipalities consider purchasing the Montreal Trust Building at 1061 Fort Street as a new home for the central library. The alderman had earlier supported a council motion that the municipalities lease space from the provincial government in the new provincial building at Blanshard and Broughton.

When McKenzie acted on the mayor's suggestion that he call for city council reconsideration of the matter, he was unable to get a seconder for the motion.

Young commented: "Now I know where you stand and I know where council stands on this matter."

BREAK-IN BREAKOUT

Victoria police are investigating a rash of break-ins in the Vic West area Thursday.

A spokesman said seven homes on Alderman, Northcott, Selkirk and Connaught were broken into between 4 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Only small amounts of cash were reported missing.

Guilty Plea to Bank Holdup

A Saanich teen-ager pleaded guilty in county court today to armed robbery of $21,062 from the Royal Bank of Canada, 2973 Tillicum, on Jan. 11.

Harold Einar Hemstad, 19, of 649 Baxter, also pleaded guilty to unlawful confinement of George Carroll, 26, on the same day.

Circumstances were not given in court.

The prosecution entered a stay of proceedings on four other counts of the indictment, including kidnapping Carroll, auto theft, theft of a revolver and possession of stolen property.

Hemstad will be sentenced Sept. 22 after receipt of a presentence report.

A second person who had been jointly accused with Hemstad had his case put over to Oct. 21 to fix a trial date.

24-Hour Contact Lenses Safe: Specialist

An improved water-content contact lens which can be worn 24 hours a day is safe if prescribed and properly fitted by a physician, Dr. A. N. North, Victoria eye specialist, said Thursday.

He was commenting on a statement by Dr. Irving Baker, chief registrar of the Toronto College of Optometrists, that there hasn't been enough research on the effects of wearing lenses 24-hours a day.

"As far as the industry is concerned, we have addressed our members not to prescribe or fit these kinds of soft lenses," Irving said.

The lenses are made of 80 to 85 per cent water.

Irving's views followed similar warning by the United States Food and Drug Administration that not enough research has been done.

The federal health protection branch has reservations about the contacts, but has allowed them on the market as there has been no complaints.

North said there is nothing wrong with the lenses. They have been tested and used in Britain and Europe. He said he has been supplying them to patients.

"The United States lags far behind Europe in the use of these lenses," he said. "That's mainly because FDA regulations require elaborate and rigid testing of new products."

He said the problems arising from wearing water-contact lenses, which originated in Czechoslovakia, stem from promotion and marketing.

"When they are sold to anyone without prescription or proper fittings, there is bound to be trouble," he said. "They are expensive, between $300 and $400."

He said some people can wear them for long periods without taking them out and having them cleaned. Others can't, however, because of lack of moisture in their eyes or for other reasons. They have to be removed and cleaned periodically.

North said water-content lenses are useful for the aged, who may lack the manual dexterity to remove conventional lenses.

"They are an improvement, but should only be worn if they have been prescribed and properly fitted," he said.

UNIVERSITIES FOCUS THEIR ATTENTION ON AGING

By ROBERT LINDSEY
New York Times

LOS ANGELES — On the top floor of a building at the University of Southern California here, researchers are trying to discover what chemical processes occur in the brain as people age. They hope to find the chemical mechanism, if there is one, that orchestrates the way people grow old and perhaps alter its effects.

Beneath these researchers, on the second floor, about 100 college students are taking courses in preparation for careers dealing with the aged, while personnel specialists of corporations such as General Foods, Xerox and Hughes Aircraft receive guidance on how to prepare their companies' employees for retirement.

And on the ground floor, there is an ebb and flow of gray-haired men and women seeking guidance in how to deal with the problems that can come with old age: loneliness, loss of memory and financial, emotional, sexual and family difficulties.

These activities are part of one of North America's first, and most comprehensive, college programs in gerontology, a word whose origins are in the linguistic root for "old" in Greek.

Traditionally, gerontology referred to the scientific study of aging. Gerontology now is becoming a linguistic umbrella embracing not only research but the training of specialists to work with older people and specialized services for the elderly.

Over the last five years, gerontology has been one of the fastest-growing fields of study on American campuses, although the quality of such programs, according to some observers, varies widely. One survey indicates that 1,275 schools now offer at least one course in gerontology, probably triple the number five years ago.

"By the year 2000, there won't be a college or university in the country that doesn't have a program in gerontology; they'll have to," says one of the pioneers in the field, Dr. James Birren, the 59-year-old director of the Ethel Percy Andrus Gerontology Centre at the University of Southern California. The centre is named for the founder of the American Association of Retired Persons and the National Retired Teachers Association.

Because it combines research, professional training and programs to help elderly people, the University of Southern California centre is regarded by some specialists as a prototype for gerontology schools of the future.

The growing interest in gerontology is rooted in demographic trends; increased lobbying and influence by older voters; sharply increased federal aid for older people and more local aid programs; and the beginning of career opportunities in a new field.

As census studies have repeatedly shown, Americans are living longer. "There are more older people alive today than the total of all the older people that ever lived in the world before," says Edwin Kaskowitz, executive director of the Washington-based Gerontological Society, whose membership, now 5,000, has tripled in the last decade.

Academic interests often march in step with the availability of government grants. The budget of the Administration on Aging, part of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, has jumped to $420 million this year from $30 million five years ago, with most of the money going for nutritional assistance to the aged, but some of it for research, training and local assistance programs.

About $30 million is being spent annually by the National Institute on Aging. Special programs for the elderly are now a part of virtually every major federal executive department, and many cities and counties have established agencies to deal with older residents.

The outlook is for continued acceleration of government aid and of demand for professionals. One recent study concluded that over the next 10 years there would be a need for 1,000 additional psychiatrists, 2,000 clinical psychologists, 4,000 psychiatric social workers, 4,000 nurses, 8,000 nurses aides and 10,000 other specialists.

The granting of college degrees with gerontology majors is still rare. The University of Southern California program, established last year as an arm of an 11-year-old gerontology research centre, offers bachelor's and master's degrees and special training for professionals already at work in the field.

School officials distinguish geriatrics, a medical speciality, from their program in "social gerontology." Their purpose, they say, is to train students for careers in research and in public agencies and private enterprises. There are courses, for example, on legal and financial difficulties peculiar to the elderly, on nutrition and sexuality, and on how to help people deal with the depression felt by many older people.

Although many of the students are middle-aged women, a few college-age students have begun to enroll. Faculty members say that while most stay in the programs, some find that working with the elderly depresses them and drop out.

The stigma of old age is a problem for fund-raisers. "Some people tell you they just don't want to be associated with anything to do with old people," said Dorothea Adamson, a fund raiser for the centre.

School administrators say the job outlook for college gerontology graduates is not yet a booming field. "It's a pioneering thing," Birren said. "I tell students: you have to create your own jobs; it's a new field, it's a little like homesteading; the land is out there to be cleared, and you have to do it."

Retirement Increases Geriatric Illness: MD

Britain's leading geriatric specialist says compulsory retirement increases the incidence of geriatric illnesses.

Sir William Ferguson-Anderson, president of the British Medical Assocaion, said Wednesday that when people are forced to retire at 60 or 65 they often are suddenly struck by illness.

After several decades of sueful and active work, "society has served them notice to quit," he said. Many retired people are happy with their pensions — but many become lonely and depressed, and then ill.

He said medical problems in older people have three facets: physical, mental and social. Medical policies now emphasize treating the body but they should be oriented towards keeping people healthy and active.

"There's no reason on earth for compulsory retirement," Ferguson-Anderson declared. clared.

"The elderly of this generation have been uncomplaining but the next generation will not be so silent," he said.

He said people should be given a choice as to whether they want to take their pension or to continue working part time.

Ferguson-Anderson, now 63, said "I haven't a clue what I'll do when I retire — probably just keep on doing what I'm doing now." He advocated programs of "pre-retirement training" like some available in his native Scotland. In the voluntary courses people are given retraining which would allow them to continue part time work. Scottish seniors are also given free medical advice and counselling on ways to handle the numerous problems of aging.

Many Canadians don't know what services are available to them, he said.

"It is all a question of education," he said. Seniors have to be taught how to handle new problems, society has to be taught about these problems, and governments have to change their policies.

Ferguson-Anderson chastised Canadian doctors and medical educators for thinking the treatment of the elderly is unimportant and unfashionable.

He said doctors are coming out of medical schools almost completely unprepared to deal with the problems of aging patients.

Illness in older people is much more difficult to treat because not only does it usually take longer to cure but often patients have difficulty in being articulate about their problems, he said. And the current problems of dealing with the aged in our society are further intensified by the fact the realative number of people over 85 years old will increase by 152 per cent in Canada by the year 2,000.

DEAR LYNN AND JOEL: You say house plants need fresh air. Does this mean they should be put outdoors or in an open window? — M.K.

DEAR M.K.: Fresh air is essential for healthy plants, as important as light. We humans need fresh air, too. Unfortunately, there seems to be less and less of it.

House plants dislike drafts, dryness, cooking odors and gas. If your plants are drooping in the kitchen, this may indicate a gas leak so minute you may not be aware of it. Your plant will know at once and die in protest.

If you want to be sure gas is to blame, place a carnation blossom in the room. If a leak is present, in a few hours it will go to sleep, permanently. Artificial gas is not so injurious.

Most plants once accustomed to a particular atmosphere will suffer from sudden gales or breezes from outdoors, so don't put your house plants out for an airing. Open up the windows — but beware of drafts.

A plant's definition of fresh air is not synonymous with ours. Plants live on carbon dioxide which is what we exhale as a waste product. They can actually enjoy air we would term stale, provided it is sufficiently humid.

Like everything else, use your common sense and keep in mind that our plants' needs are much the same as ours — light, air, water, humidity and, above all, TLC.

The Creative Plum.

The Certo season is here. Time to create your own fresh-tasting jams, jellies and preserves with luscious, just-picked plums and Certo* fruit pectin.

ANOTHER WAY TO SAY "I LOVE YOU" TO YOUR FAMILY.

Just watch those faces light up when your family tastes the fresh-picked flavour of jams, jellies and preserves you've made yourself.
Nothing tastes so good. Or so special.

SUN-RIPENED PLUM JAM MADE WITH CERTO LIQUID.

Makes about 11 medium glasses.
4½ cups prepared fruit
(about 3 lb fully ripe plums)
7½ cups sugar
½ bottle Certo liquid fruit pectin.

First prepare the fruit—Pit (do not peel) about 3 pounds plums. Cut in small pieces and chop. Add ½ cup water; bring to a boil and simmer, covered, 5 minutes. Measure 4½ cups into a large saucepan.

Then make the jam—Thoroughly mix sugar into fruit. Place over high heat, bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and at once stir in Certo. Skim off foam with metal spoon. Then stir and skim for 5 minutes to cool slightly to prevent floating fruit. Ladle quickly into sterilized glasses. Cover at once with ⅛-inch hot paraffin.

SUN-RIPENED PLUM JAM MADE WITH CERTO CRYSTALS.

Prepare fruit as above using a total of 4 pounds plums and ½ cup water to obtain 6 cups prepared fruit. Measure 8 cups sugar and set aside. Add 1 box Certo crystals to fruit in saucepan. Place over high heat and stir until mixture comes to a boil. Stir in sugar. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and continue as above. Makes about 14 medium glasses.

3 CREATIVE ADDITIONS.

Using one of the recipes previously mentioned, have fun creating your own specialty-of-the-house jams with these variations:

1. Spiced Plum Jam—Prepare Plum Jam as directed, adding ¼ teaspoon each cinnamon, cloves, and allspice to prepared fruit.
2. Plum Nutty Jam—Prepare Plum Jam as directed, adding ½ cup finely chopped walnuts to prepared fruit.
3. Plum Orangerie Jam—Prepare Plum Jam as directed, adding 1½ teaspoon grated orange rind to prepared fruit.

USE THE SHORT-BOIL OR FREEZER METHOD.

They both give you fresh-picked fruit flavour. So you choose.
Either way, you'll make luscious jams, jellies and preserves every time.

ENJOY THAT JUST-PICKED FRESH FRUIT FLAVOUR YEAR 'ROUND.

Why stop here? You've just begun!
For many, many more recipes that tell you how to turn the fruits (and vegetables) of every season into mouth-watering delicacies, take a peek underneath the label of a bottle or into a box of Certo or write to General Foods Kitchens, P.O. Box 4019, Terminal "A", Toronto, Ontario and we'll send you our booklet "Jam & Jelly Making: A Pleasurable Art".

Ad Sales Bullish In Soaps Period

By MIKE GOODKIND

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a scene from Baretta, the camera closes in on a nightclub belly dancer. Then there is a fade into a commercial, a shot of a navel orange.

The commercial was yanked at the request of the advertising agency.

"I pleaded with the network to take it off and they did," said Madeline Nagel, who buys commercial time for such Foote, Cone and Belding-Honig clients as Suzuki motorcycles, Mazda automobiles and Sunkist oranges.

"It's kind of humorous but you don't want anyone to react unfavorably."

The agencies screen all episodes sponsored by their clients a few days before they are televised. For most sponsors, who negotiate package deals with the networks for prime-time exposure, that's about as close as they come to having a say about when their products will be spotted.

That's why some agencies are edgy about the new season's most ballyhooed series, the sexy soap-opera spoof Soap, scheduled for ABC prime time. It's their biggest headache since the advent of violence on television.

The agencies, which spend about $1 billion annually for clients to sponsor everything from the Super Bowl to hometown late movies, have a fairly clear picture of which products appeal to which audience.

For example, Ms. Nagel said, if you're selling motorcycles it's nice to be able to advertise them on a program geared to young men who like action. That's why she tried to get Suzuki on Starsky and Hutch and Baretta.

"On the other hand, we have gone to great lengths to keep Sunkist out of that kind of programming."

Now they are faced with Soap, the sex saga described by R. E. Johnson, senior vice-president in charge of media at J. Walter Thompson, as a "quantum leap, certainly more explicit than anything we've seen in prime time."

Jack McQueen, corporate director of broadcast programming at Foote, Cone and Belding, concurred. Given the choice, he said, "I wouldn't put any of our clients in there."

"If there's a choice," said Ms. Nagel, "we'd just as soon avoid associating our clients with anything that a segment of the population might consider objectionable."

With ad agencies so wary, who are Soap's sponsors. ABC isn't saying, although executives said sales are bullish.

Part of it is because of a peculiar sellers' market, a 3½ — or four-network economy in a three-network country where networks have no trouble filling the time they have for sale. Also, most network time is bought as a package, where if a client wants a special rate he may have to give up full choice of spots for his commercials.

Ms. Nagel said Soap would probably attract sophisticated clients appealing to the luxury market.

"But then one would question why they would even use television, since it's an expensive mass medium and advertisers might reach their specific market more economically in a specialty magazine or some other medium."

"Soap will go on the air sold out," said Bob Levenson, director of national programming for Barton, Durstine and Osborne. "We have not bought into the show but it is possible we will have clients in there."

Canadian Derby Set

Canadian-bred three-year-olds will compete in the 48th Canadian Derby Saturday, Aug. 27 at 4:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

The distance in the race at Northlands Park in Edmonton, is a mile and three-eighths. The purse is $35,000 added.

Among the favored entries are Honey Speed, R. J.'s Diamond Rage 'n' Fleet, Blastabit and Calgary Royal.

Dickens of London Debuts

Charles Dickens' dramatic life story will be told on Masterpiece Theatre when "Dickens of London" debuts on Public TV 9 Sunday, August 28 at 9:30 p.m. (rebroadcast Friday, Sept. 2 at 9 p.m.). England's greatest author was one of the first of a new breed of storyteller, a pioneer of what is today simply accepted as a best selling author.

He gave the public what it wanted — book after book peopled with characters to laugh or weep with, stories which grabbed the collective social conscience by the scruff of the neck and shook it hard.

But Charles John Huffman Dickens, one of a family of eight children, was more than just a mere storyteller, as this series starring Roy Dotrice demonstrates. Dotrice plays both Dickens and his father as well as several other roles as the ten episodes trace the author's event-packed life from penniless childhood through unprecedented success as pioneering novelist and solo performer of hundreds of public readings in the U.S. and England.

★ ★ ★

He left to the world a sympathy and deeper knowledge of fate of the poor and the social outcast, the sad ragbag of humanity ignored and reviled by the community. He is credited with bringing about major reforms in the notorious Poor Laws systems through his slashing attack in "Oliver Twist." And what "Twist" did for London's poor, "Nicholas Nicleby" did to expose the horrific conditions which existed in the Yorkshire boarding schools of the day.

Dickens of London, created and produced by Marc Miller for Yorkshire Television, is made possible by a grant from Mobil Oil Corporation and presented on PBS by WGBH/-Boston.

PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle

CLUES ACROSS:

2. PUSS not pugs or pups. The singular answer PUSS is favored, since one readily imagines a pet lover thinking how nice it would be to own the cat in question, whereas there is no particular reason why an indefinite number of pugs or pups should exert a collective influence. Also "pugs" (a particular breed of dogs) is pointlessly specific, while pups hardly require the proviso "If nice" (young animals always appeal).
4. SCOUT not scour. When they SCOUT they will be watchful or observant, as suggested. When they scour they are actively seeking something definite.
7. CARRIAGE not marriage. The clue invites the idea that if the CARRIAGE/marriage were not irreparably broken, somebody could mend it. However, a marriage can really be mended only by the particular couple involved.
8. LADS not lids. The clue applies more purely and simply to LADS, of whom the bright ones are positively bright and the dull ones irremediably dull. Lids is a less cut and dried case, since, at different times, the same lids can be both bright and dull!
12. GUN not gin. At a quick glimpse, all you can see is a bottle, which may or may not contain gin. A GUN is a definite object.
13. HILL not hall. The clue favors that which has a significant altitude (while being unlikely to endanger aircraft); but the height of a hall — the building itself — is hardly relevant in such terms.
19. FOREMAN not fireman. The thoroughness, etc., of a fireman is directly due to his training and his orders; it's not so much a question of what standard he is prepared to accept, or "be satisfied with." As the man in charge, FOREMAN is more apt in this respect.
21. TONALLY not totally. A choir stands to lose a contest if it has shortcomings TONALLY. If totally unsatisfactory, it won't even get to compete, much less win.
22. SHATTER not scatter. One aims to break the target, not disperse it.

CLUES DOWN:

1. FALL not fill. One might "happen" to FALL in a ditch. To fill in a ditch would be a positive commitment, not just perchance.
2. PADDING not pudding. PADDING (stuffing, filling out) is filling, of course; but some sweet puddings are very light — not what you'd call "filling."
3. SCAR not star. A convincing-looking SCAR would be within the province of the make-up man. An actor (why star?) needs costume, etc., to look right for the part; it's not just a question of make-up.
5. UNGRACEFULLY not ungratefully. Behaving UNGRACEFULLY is more the sort of thing that looks bad. Ingratitude is not a question of appearance; behaving ungratefully simply is bad.
9. SHOD not shot. Not wanting to see a horse shot is a matter of positive repugnance: it's not merely a question of lack of "interest" (to which one is entitled, of course, in the case of SHOD).
14. FORMAL not normal. FORMAL is the more contributive answer. "Normal" merely repeats the sens of "As a rule," in the clue.
15. MUFFS not cuffs. MUFFS are certainly large enough to extend up to cover the wrists. Cuffs frequently are higher than the wrists, leaving them exposed.
16. AREA not aria. "In" an AREA; but, preferably of an aria.

Young Stays Active

By BOB THOMAS

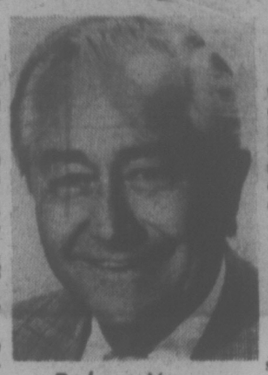
LOS ANGELES (AP) — When talk arises about retirement, Robert Young cites the case of Leopold Stokowski the venerable symphony conductor.

"I saw him on television when he was celebrating his 94th birthday," said the actor. "We had just signed a five-year contract as a conductor. If Stokowski can do that at 94, why should I think of retiring when I'm only 70?"

And so the star of Father Knows Best, Marcus Welby, M.D., and movies that date back to 1931 is working on projects that will stretch four to five years into the future.

This despite the fact that he and Betty Young, his wife for 44 years, have a new house 30 minutes northwest of Hollywood, a home near San Diego and could spend their years in a quiet enjoyment of their six grandchildren.

Instead, Bob Young intends to remain active. "After all," he remarked with a wry grin, "I didn't really grow up until I was 59."



Robert Young

Until that time, he considers that he was "childishly scared by everything." The result was a bout with alcoholism that is now behind him. Until recently, we endured another handicap? Gradual loss of sight because of cataracts. After two separate operations, the last one in December, his sight has been restored by artificial lenses.

Young first realized his sight problem 19 years ago.

He sought many opinions on the worth of the lens implant operation. Finally a doctor friend advised him to take a risk. Now Young has 20-20 vision at 30 feet, needs glasses only to give a little boost for distance and reading.

Was he surprised when Marcus Welby was cancelled?

"I thought we might squeeze out another half-year. But it wasn't a terrible shock, the way it was to Lee Grant in being dropped after three or four shows of Fay. We did 180 shows, which is the equivalent of 85 feature movies."

Young may return in Marcus Welby's Greatest Case, a two-hour TV movie that could lead to two or three others each year. His company is also preparing another TV movie, Cromarty, about a retired magnate whose sons mismanage his empire. And he'll venture another reunion of Father Knows Best if a good story can be found.

John Hearn's Collectibles

E. Hope of Woodstock writes — I have an old book which appears to be privately bound and consists of a collection of old magazines called Godey's Lady's Book. It is full of delightful old fashion plates. Can you tell me anything about it.

It would certainly be a valuable book if it is in good condition. Any old books of fashion plates are collector's items and Godey's is among the best. Louis Antoine Godey was born in New York in 1804 and published the first edition of The Lady's Book 26 years later. About ten years after that the name Godey's was added to the title and it continued to exercise a powerful influence on American women's fashions throughout the greater part of the 19th century.

Sarah Hale, an early Women's Libber, became co-editor in 1837, and for the next 40 years presided over Godey's making it the treasure it is today. She packed it with hand-colored fashion engravings, poems, stories and reviews of all that was most up to date in women's apparel, especially styles which could be made at home. Right from the beginning the quality of the plates was so good that readers would cut them out and frame them.

Apart from the fashion news, the magazine offered a high literary quality. Contributors included Longfellow, Edgar Allen Poe, Melville, Hawthorn and Harriet Beecher Stowe. Editor Hale was strong in her encouragement of women writers, and demonstrated her Lib leadership qualities with articles about day nurseries and the desirability of public playgrounds for children. Her own personal claim to fame, however, probably rests with her authorship of Mary Had a Little Lamb.

Godey's claims to have printed the first crossword puzzle in 1870. It created little interest and no more were published anywhere until 1913. They were also famous for their patterns for doll's clothing which little girls could make — a matter of great interest to modern antique doll collectors.

Women's fashions, however, was what Godey's was mostly about and it is believed that as many as 150 women were employed by the magazine to color illustrations. Different editions will clearly show differences in the hand-applied washes.

Godey himself died in 1878 but the magazine continued to flourish for another 20 years — thus neatly spanning the century and remaining as the most perfect mirror of the fashions of its age.

Today, good reproductions of the color plates will fetch $5 each or more while originals, faded and yellow though they may be, will sell for as much as $20 with the double-page foldouts going even higher. Count up all those colored prints in your bound volume, Ms Hope and maybe after that you had better keep it in your safety deposit box.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag: Q: Would you kindly explain the relationship between Mike Douglas of the Mike Douglas Show and the Michael Douglas of the "Streets of San Francisco" and actor Kirk Douglas? — I.G., Victoria, Canada.

A. The Mike Douglas of the Mike Douglas Show is not related to the other two Douglases. The only thing they have in common is their last names. However, the Michael Douglas, who left the "Streets of San Francisco" series to become a movie producer and director, is the son of actor Kirk Douglas. I hope that clears up the matter.

Q. I want to know where I can write Cloris Leachman about a white hat she wore on the trolley car in San Francisco. — E.H., Los Angeles, Calif.

A. I suggest you write to MTM Enterprises, 4024 Radford Ave., Studio City, Calif. 91604.

Q. Can you tell me what happened to Tony Orlando and Dawn. They are one of my very favorites and no one seems to know why they just all of a sudden were gone. — B.R.L., ypsilanti, Mich.

A. The "Tony Orlando and Dawn Show" was cancelled by CBS.

Q. I am concerned that the program "Emergency" is being taken off the air. It is one of the really worthwhile shows — one of the few suitable for the whole family. — G.A., Victoria, Canada.

A. "Emergency" is returning this fall but not as a weekly series. The show will be aired on NBC as an occasional two-hour special.

Q. I would like to know all there is to know about Anson Williams of "Happy Days." — D.M., Phoenix, Ariz.

A. Born in Los Angeles, Williams attended Burbank High School. He became interested in acting while attending Pierce Junior College. He subsequently enrolled as a drama major at California State College.

Williams began acting professionally in such summer stock productions as "The Music Man," "The Sound of Music" and "South Pacific." His television credits include "Marcus Welby, M.D.," "Owen Marshall, Counselor at Law" and "Bridget Loves Bernie."

Some of his vital statistics: 5 foot, 10 inches tall, brown hair, blue eyes and weighs 144 pounds. His avocational interests are poetry writing, baseball, football, surfing, playing the clarinet and ecology.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, TV Mailbag, in care of Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4.

Special Programs In Ratings Race

NEW YORK (AP) — Special will be a key to winning the ratings race this year, a major advertising agency says in its report on prime time network television.

"Each network is depending on special programming to flatten the competition," Batten Barton, Durstine and Osborn said in the report released Tuesday.

Its analysis of the new season said viewers can also expect more general and family dramas, more situation comedies and more sports shows.

The agency also said there was a trend toward more science fiction and fantasy programs. Viewers should also expect a broader scope of subjects in made-for-TV films, including wife-beating, breast cancer and the loss of sexual prowess in a youth.

But there has been a 43-percent decline since last year in the amount of programs classified as music, comedy or variety and an 11-per-cent decline in action, adventure and mystery shows.

The agency said networks have found it easier to make new programming less violent than to modify long-running shows such as "Kojak" and "Police Woman" for fear of losing audiences.

While the number of police and detective action shows is decreasing, the agency said, there is an increase in science-fiction programs, such as "Six Million Dollar Man," "Bionic Woman," "Wonder Woman" and the new entries, "Man from Atlantis" and "Logan's Run."

The report said the networks are answering their need for dramatic programs lacking violence with general and family drama shows, which have increased 50 per cent this year to occupy 18 per cent of the schedule.

TV Violence PTA Target

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Television violence will be the target of the national Parent-Teachers Association if programmers and sponsers have not cut back on it by the first of the year.

PTA president Grace Baisinger said Sunday her organization will have nationwide monitors reporting on the degree of violence being shown, and will take action against programs and sponsors persisting in it through the remainder of this year.

In a television interview on CBS's "Face the Nation," Mrs. Bainsinger said her group is trying to educate parents to be more discriminating in the programs they allow their children to watch.

Local groups will report back to the national PTA, she said.

ABC News Closeup, on 4 at 10 p.m. As outgrowths of the civil-rights movement, "affirmative action" programs have resulted in job and education opportunities for minorities and women. But affirmative action has also triggered negative reaction among some white males, who feel that preferential treatment of minorities constitutes "reverse discrimination." That complaint — and court cases stemming from it — are explored in "The Equality Conflict," a conflict that has risen within Atlanta's police and fire departments, and California's Department of Corrections. Another segment reviews a "reverse discrimination" suit brought against the University of California.

San Francisco: The City That Waits to Die — Documentary, on 5 at 10 p.m. "San Francisco: The City That Waits to Die," a BBC documentary examining the theory that San Francisco could soon be stricken by a major earthquake. Seismologists, geophysicists and a structural engineer discuss the hazards involved and the possibility of predicting quakes in Japan, Alaska and Denver. (60 min.) Pre-empts regular programming.)

Today's Highlights

Man Alive, on 2 at 12:30 p.m. Religion is flourishing in "communist Poland" where most of the 33 million people are Catholics. Masses are well-attended. Catholic newspapers are published, there are more than 17,000 priests and no shortage of recruits. Footage shows a parish of 100,000 near Krakow, whose members are building a large church in their spare time. Roman Catholic deputies describe their roles in the Sejm (the Polish Parliament) and their efforts to prevent religious discrimination.

Country Canada, on 2 at 4:30 p.m. A film about two veterinarians in British Columbia's Okanagan Valley who care for any type of animal from "Canaries to Clydesdales."

CBC Access — Discussion, on 2 at 5 p.m. The plight of the farmer. Roy Atkinson, president of the National Farmer's Union, discusses the problems that threaten rural life: insufficient government support, poor distribution of produce, and corporate controls.

To the Wild Country, on 2 at 5:30 p.m. Algonquin Park (Ont.) provides the backdrop for a look at the work of those who paint and photograph nature.

Images of Canada — Documentary, on 2 and 6 at 8 p.m. Splendor Undiminished, the conclusion of the Whitecomers, looks at the history and geography of British Columbia. Great ocean and forest scenery and the primitive beauty of Indian sculpture contrast with the products of the white settlers — the intricate Victorian clocks and cupids of British immigrants; and the fish canneries, lumber camps and Caribou gold mines.

Life Goes to the Movies — Special, on 8 at 8 p.m. The way we were — in Hollywood's eyes. Taking its cue from the Life magazine features, this three-hour documentary looks at how films reflected American life from the late 1938s to the early '70s. The show will also be aired on Monday at 8 p.m. on Channel 5.

Today's Highlights

Audubon Wildlife Theatre, on 13 at 3 p.m. Today's show features a dogsled journey over sea ice in remote Arctic-region.

Striker — Drama, on 2 at 5 p.m. The first in a three-part story about a boy who wants to be a professional soccer player in spite of his father's objections. Kevin Moreton and Geoffrey Hinscliff.

CBS News Special, on 7 at 8 p.m. "Energy: The Facts . . . the Fears . . . the Future," a three-hour report that asks three basic questions about the energy problem: How is it perceived by the experts? By the public? And is there a problem at all? The program is scheduled to include nationwide reports on the supply, demand and production of energy sources; a look at how Japan and Western Europe are coping; and a review of how the President's National Energy Plan has fared in Congress. In one segment, President Carter (who recently chided Americans for "not paying attention" to energy conservation) views — and responds to — filmed interviews with citizens, many of whom were sceptical that an energy problem actually exists. (3 hours.)

Pilot — Comedy, on 4 at 10 p.m. "The New Love Boat," a condensed repeat of the sequel to the TV-movies about floundering romances aboard a luxury line. Vignettes involve the ship's gruff captain (Gavin MacLeod) and a stowaway (Georgia Engel); two nervous honeymooners (Melanie Mayron, Gary Frank); a couple (Stella Stevens, Pat Harrtington Jr.) trying to cure their marital woes at sea; and a brassy older woman (Audra Lindley) and a morose widower (Phil Silvers). "The Love 'Boat" series is scheduled to premiere Sept. 24 on ABC. Julie: Lauren Tewes.

TWO CHAMPIONS — Winners of the entertainment scene, Frank Sinatra and Joe Beck discuss Joe's production of the new Sinatra version of "Night and Day." Photo was taken at New York's Media Sound Studios.

Spotlight on Movies

The Bravados (xx), on 8 at 12:30 p.m. Western starring Gregory Peck, Joan Collins and Stephen Boyd. A rambling movie about a man bent on revenge for his wife's murder. More than half of the film is dedicated to the tracking down of the four despicable killers — it gets pretty tedious (1958).

The Buster Keaton Story (xx), on 11 at 1 p.m. Screen biography of the brilliant movie comedian — not too accurate — and thus presents almost totally false impression of Hollywood and its subject. Donald O'Connor, Ann Blyth, Rhonda Fleming and Peter Lorre (1957).

All the Way Home (xxx), on 5 at 3 p.m. Drama starring Jean Simmons, Robert Preston and Michael Kearney. The plot was adapted from the prize-winning play by Tad Mosel which, in turn, was adapted from the Pulitzer prize-winning novel by James Agee. The story is about the death of the head of a family in rural America during the early 1900s, and its effects on his young son (1963).

The Man in the Iron Mask, on 5 at 9 p.m. A well done television version of the classic tale of intrigue in France, based on the famous novel by Alexander Dumas, set in 1847. The movie was filmed in England and in France by Oscar-winning director Freddie Young. Patrick McGoohan, Louis Jourdan, Jenny Agutter, Ralph Richardson, Ian Holm and Vivien Merchant.

Kanal (xxxx), on 9 at 9 p.m. A powerful drama made in Poland about the Warsaw Uprising during the Second World War (1944). This is an intense and stark study of the Poles' heroic fight against the brutal German forces in occupied Poland. The direction and performance are excellent in this English-dubbed movie. The director is Andrzej Wajda. In the cast are Teresa Izewska, Tadeusz Janczar, Wienczyslaw Glinski and Wladyslaw Sheybal (1956).

Son of Fury (xxx), on 2 at 11:45 p.m. Adventure movie with no message but lots of action and romance. The story, set in 18th century, is about a young man wronged by his uncle in England, who goes to a Pacific island where he finds his girl and a bucket of pearls. Then he returns to England for his revenge. Tyrone Power, George Sanders and Gene Tierney (1942).

Shoot Loud, Louder, I don't Understand (xx), on 13 at midnight. Italian-made comedy about the wild goings-on in a strange household occupied by Marcello Mastroianni and his eccentric uncle. There are also Rachel Welsh, a murder, a disappearance and underworld hoods (1966).

Trooper Hook (x), on 6 at 12:10 a.m. Western drama starring Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea (1957).

Gun Belt (xx), on 8 at 12:10 a.m. Western about a notorious outlaw trying to go straight. George Montgomery and Tab Hunter (1953).

The Deadly Dream (xx), on 7 and 12 at 12:55 a.m. Thriller about a man who has a recurring and episodic dream that strange men, belonging to a "tribunal," chase after him. Lloyd Bridges and Janet Leigh. Made for television in 1971.

Birds Do It (xx), on 7 at 2:30 a.m. Comedy about a janitor who, after entering an off-limits room, finds he can fly and is irresistible to women. Soupy Sales, Tab Hunter and Arthur O'Connell (1966).

RICHARD ROBERTS and the World Action Singers tour San Francisco's famous Fisherman's Wharf on Oral Roberts one-hour special Thursday, Sept. 1, at 7 p.m. on Channel 6; (also to be seen Tuesday, Aug. 30, at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 8).

Today's Highlights

Audubon Wildlife Theatre, on 13 at 3 p.m. A search for the great grey owl in Alberta.

One Northern Summer, on 2 and 6 at 4:30 p.m. A look at the walruses that live on an island off Togiak, Alaska.

Klahanie, on 2 at 5 p.m. Hiking on Vancouver Island.

Canadian Angler, on 12 at 6:40 p.m. A visit to Jasper National Park, with fishing for mountain lake trout; and fishing for salmon in Newfoundland.

Towards Tomorrow, on 8 at 9:30 p.m. The effects of noise pollution is the topic for tonight's show.

Michel Legrand — Music, on 8 at 10 p.m. Performance by two-time Oscar-winner, composer-pianist Michel Legrand. With him in the show will be Jack Jones and the Mike Curb Congregation.

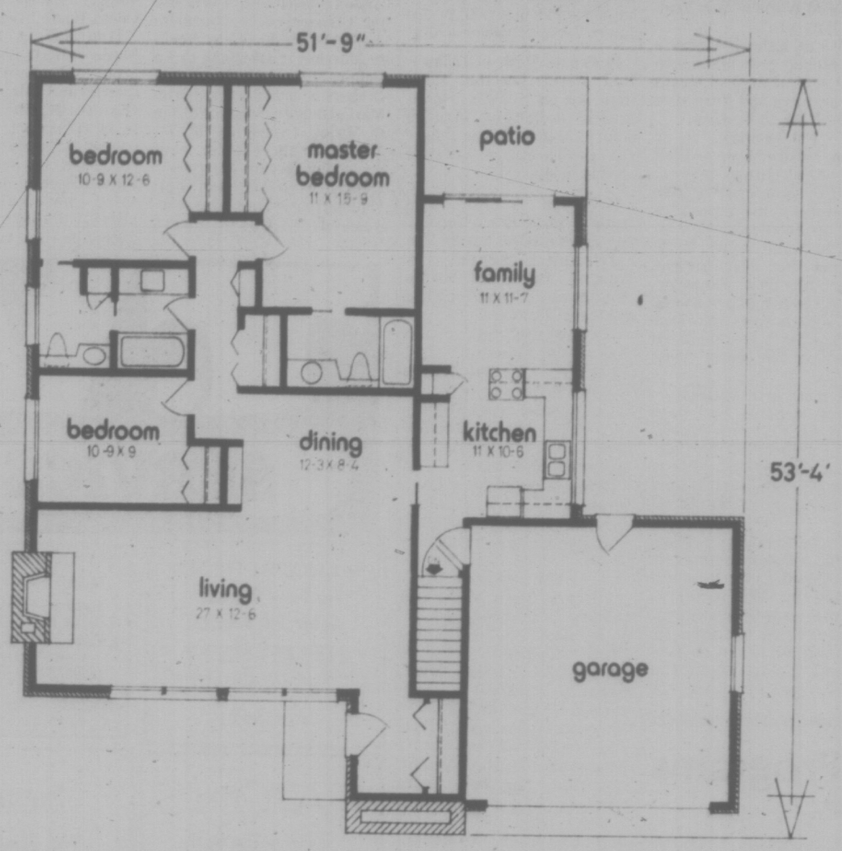
AREA : 1596 sq. ft.
WIDTH : 51 ft. 9 in.



Good Design with Modern Styling

An attractive one-level home, with a full basement, for a luxurious life-style in a modern setting.

The exterior shown here combines brick veneer and fieldstone with the contemporary elegance of floor-to-ceiling windows to accent the vaulted ceiling. The styling of this home is such however that many other combinations of materials could be used.

The vaulted ceiling emphasizes the spaciousness of the large living-dining area. A fireplace with raised hearth on the outside of wall of the living room will prove popular on those cosy winter evenings.

In the family room there is a large picture window on one wall, and sliding glass doors opening to the rear patio for warm weather entertaining. This complete area is easily viewed from the U-shaped kitchen, a perfect arrangement for the busy housewife to keep an eye on the little ones.

The "country" kitchen is designed for ease in food preparation with plenty of cupboard space for storage. Within a few convenient steps of the kitchen are doors to the double garage; the stairs leading to the full unfinished basement; and the living-dining area.

The master bedroom has a three-piece ensuite. The other two bedrooms are serviced by a unique full bath arrangement. A bath and vanity is in one section, with the toilet and another vanity separated by a pocket door, to allow for privacy and simultaneous use of both sections.

There is a linen closet and an extra large storage closet in the inner hall, as well as extensive closets in all three bedrooms.

Plan for design number 64-1596 may be obtained at a cost of $60 for the first set and $9 for each additional set, plus $3.50 for postage and handling. B.C. residents please include 7% sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs, Series No. 33 featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas plus more than 300 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.25 ($1.75 plus 50 cents postage and handling). To order these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. SOAP OPERA SCENE

ABC Revamping General Hospital

By STEVEN SCHEUER

NEW YORK (KFS) — What's going on at General Hospital (ABC)? New writers slip in the door while performers get the gate. There hasn't been a house-cleaning like this since '75 when 16 actors drew pink slips.

Evidently, ABC wants to hypo the old soap and the hospital a fresh scrubbing as the September fall season begins. Craig Huebing's Dr. Peter Taylor, a familiar face with nine seasons behind him, a survivor, appears to have withstood the August cut.

Dr. Taylor is about to lose his wife of eight years standing, however, as well as his patient, Mary Ellen Dante, who is slowly going mad. Mrs. Taylor is also fast becoming soft in the cranium, losing a child some time ago and then having a daughter. Lately, the Taylors had hopes of adopting a little boy, but that doesn't appear to be in the cards now.

"Everything's up in the air," Huebing says. "My character, Peter Taylor, is riding it out on the back burner. I've just learned that my new wife will be played by Brooke Bundy, who is moving over from her role of Rebecca North on Days of Our lives (NBC)."

Huebing remains above the winds of change at "GH", and that's as it should be. After all, Huebing is the resident poet. His first book of poetry, Daylight Moon is in its second printing, and may even come close to returning costs. That is quite a feat in the literary world. A former commercial artist, Huebing also designed and illustrated the slim volume, and is currently at work on a children's book with actress Victoria Shaw.

He was a fishing guide in Wisconsin and Maine for a spell before leaving the wilds to become a commercial artist; but he gave it up. "There wasn't any creativity," he recalled. "You followed instructions to the letter."

So Huebing jumped into acting, learning his skills at Chicago's Goodman Theatre, along with Harvey Korman, Tim O'Connor and Playboy magazine editor Ray Russell.

Huebing learned to play poker for needed funds, scrounged around facing the world with one suit and a pair of jeans. "Safety pins held my suit together," he said.

New World Faces. As the World Turns (CBS) has added two new actresses to the roster recently. They are Georgann Johnson and Ariane Munker. Ms. Johnson, who is playing the role of Jane Spencer, Beau's mother from England, was last seen as Ellen Grant on the now departed soap, Somerset. Young Ariane, who was Marianne Randolph in Another World (NBC), is cast as Melinda Gray, a mysterious new visitor to Oakdale. Her arrival in town forecasts complex plot developments. Incidentally, Ariane's new role on As the World Turns marks a return to the popular soap for her. Some years back, she played the part of Carol Ann Stewart as a child. The character is now known as Annie and is played by Martina Deignan.

PLOT PORTENTS

The teenaged pregnancy case of Jodi Conway continues to be a disheartening affair — family support is nil, her boy friend is little help — so it's up to friends like Brock and Chris on The Young and the Restless (CBS) to support poor Jodi. At least Leslie isn't withering on the wine without Brad. Her music is beginning to absorb her life; maybe a new man will soon appear on the horizon.

With numerous characters leaving General Hospital in the coming weeks, the plotting thickens. Larry Joe gives Jeff the lowdown on Heather revealing all the terrible things she's pulled on people. Mary Ellen writes Mark, saying she will escape from the mental hospital; and Adam is mighty sore at Gary for trying to ruin his romance with Gina.

The Stars of Yesterday

Where Are They Today?

By NANCY ANDERSON

HOLLYWOOD — "I never discuss my private life. Because the only way to have a private life is not to talk about it," Celeste Holm said with asperity.

She'd just dashed through her door, returning home to Manhattan from a performance in Buffalo, N.Y., to answer the phone and be asked how she could work and travel so much while keeping some semblance of family life intact.

Ironically, the play she'd been doing in Buffalo is called "A Very Private Life," an apt description of Celeste when she's not on stage or camera.

"Actually," she said, mellowing a bit, "I stay at home about six months of the year, and often work with my husband."

Her husband is actor Wesley Addy, and together they present ingenious theatre-in-concert, exploring the relationship between men and women from the different points of view of many writers.

Their performances have been so well received that, with Gorden Connell, they've presented "Interplay — An Evening of Theatre in Concert" in eight countries as part of our State Department's U.S. Cultural Presentation Program.

Daughter of a Norwegian-born insurance man who represented Lloyds of London and of a successful portrait artist, Holm was educated in France and Holland, as well as in this country. She began ballet at 3, and while she was still in high school in Chicago, began the study of drama at Northwestern University.

From Chicago, she went to New York for more study before making her professional acting debut in 1936 with a stock company in Deer Lake, Pa.

The next year, she understudied Ophelia during the national tour of Leslie Howard's "Hamlet."

Progressing from role to role, from show to show, Holm was appearing in New York in "The Damask Cheek" with Flora Robson and Zachary Scott when she heard that the Theatre Guild was preparing a musical treatment of "Green Grow the Lilacs."

She promptly auditioned for Rodgers and Hammerstein and won the showy role of Ado Annie in what became the legendary "Oklahoma."

From the moment audiences heard her sing "I'm Just a Girl Who Can't Say No," her theatrical future was assured.

Holm has performed in a wide range of films and, in 1954, starred in her own television series, "Honestly Celeste."

One of her most recent television appearances was in "Bluegrass Special," a segment of "The Wonderful World of Disney."

"I did that project so long ago I can't even remember it," she said, "except that I know that I worked with a very good actor, William Windom.

"If I were like you, having to write about Hollywood now, I wouldn't know how to do it, because so little is left. Disney and Universal are the only two functioning studios.

"Most people who are making pictures now, are writing them to please the bankers, and the bankers don't know a thing about what makes a good picture.

"At the Disney studio, though, they've maintained a warmth and a joy which makes working there a pleasure."

Having won an Oscar for "Gentlemen's Agreement" and nominations for "Come to the Stable" and "All About Eve," she knows what she's talking about when she talks about acting and what makes a good show.

The ensemble, not the bravura performance of a single, big name star, is the critical ingredient of the latter, she holds.

Celeste Holm

The most important thing in life is life itself, Holm continued. "If entertainment doesn't relate to life, what's it about?

"Through television, we are making our children passive which is the worst I can say about that.

"Somewhere I read about a group of 9-year-olds who normally watched a lot of television and were deprived of it for a month.

"At the beginning and the end of the month they were tested, and their scores on the second test were twice as high as on the first."

Avid as she is for good theatre, Holm doesn't join in the occasional hue and cry for government-subsidized performing arts.

"I question the wisdom of government-subsidized theatre," she said. "The unions are lousing us up, but I don't think theatre should be saved by subsidies, because when you're underwritten by a source other than the ticket-buying public, a very naughty thing happens.

"You begin to say, 'We don't have to please the public. We only have to please ourselves.'

"Well, what the hell is art if it's not for the public?"

Cher's Navel Tuning Point

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When television executives discovered that Sonny and Cher drew good ratings in prime time, they were ecstatic. Here, they thought, was a potential format for a family-hour show.

Executives were not sure whether it was Cher's navel or the couple's musical talents that made the show a success but that didn't really matter — Tony Orlando and Dawn, Captain and Tennille and Donny and Maire Osmond were quickly drafted to come up with shows of their own.

The plan, like so many television ideas, sounded better than it worked. It turned out that people apparently were tuning in to see Cher's navel, and after a while the talents of the famed divorced couple didn't sustain them.

But perhaps the worst consequence of the soft-pop variety show was experienced by the musicians turned TV performers. Tony Orlando couldn't buy a hit record; Sonny and Cher might have bought Sonny and Cher records, but nobody else did. Donny and Marie didn't suffer as much in sales and neither did the Captain and Tennille, but the latter couple are not happy with their variety show experience.

"It was hell," says Tony Tennille. "Because of television we didn't have time to write. We'll never do another series."

"It can be fun," says Daryl Dragon, the captain. "But I'll tell you what's wrong — variety shows are all based on formulas. They say, 'Well, let's do it like Donny and Marie, that show's successful.' They've never come up with a variety show that's different."

The Dragons think television may have been worse for them — in terms of their music careers — than for the others.

"Donny and Marie, Sonny and Cher were just kind of 'hit-and-miss' singles artists," says Toni.

"Every now and then they'd get a hit single, but they never really were big album artists. We have been. People have come to expect quality stuff from us, and we didn't have time to write."

They think the problem is not that pop singers can't transfer successfully to TV but that "the networds are brainwashed into a certain format," Daryl says.

The Captain and Tennille now realize they can't be serious about their music and have a weekly television series too. They dream about the ideal music series — featuring guests like Linda Ronstadt and The Eagles — but in the meantime, they've returned full-time to their real vocation, "recording artists, definitely, that's what we are."

Their series was dropped by ABC and the Dragons couldn't be happier.

Pictures to Remember

By JUDITH TERRY

Illustrations to certain books I loved as a child have always remained with me. The pictures became so exactly one with the story that seeing any others left a taste as nasty as changing the ending would have done. E. H. Shepard's depiction of Toad for Grahame's Wind in the Willows was one. In white tie and tails Toad posed extravagantly with cigar and carnation, mouth significantly large—the perfect boastful stance. Even Arthur Rackham's beautiful versions of Grahame's animals could not compete with that, and I shudder at the covers of recent paperback editions.

A less well-known illustration by Helen Stratton for Grimm's fairy tales, dating from 1905, stays with me too. Sleeping Beauty lay upon the floor of the tower room where the spell had overcome her, cheek pillowed on two hands. There was an exactness about the medieval dress and a solidarity about the feet and body not often thought of in connection with fairy tales. Yet it was exactly appropriate. And the hard sense of reality fused with the fantasy in one most striking detail: heavy coils of yellow hair twined over the floor, ells long. Her hair had grown as she slept.

These kinds of memories make children's book illustration a subject of general interest, and it is surprising that so little has been written about it. It is, of course, unwieldy. Touched upon in books about art or children's literature, it always seems to come in as an afterthought. On its own it is discouragingly large.

In these circumstances it is a pleasant surprise that William Feaver has managed, in a paperback of reasonable price and proportion, to survey the subject so interestingly.

His introductory essay begins with some airily large assertions about the function of pictures in children's books, but once into chronological discussion of artists and influences, he provides memorable insights in an engaging, aphoristic style.

Edward Lear's illustrations to his nonsense limericks are, for example, only his own "highly correct manner turned turtle." From drawing parrots at the London zoo and animals in Lord Derby's private menagerie, Lear turned to making limericks to amuse Lord Derby's children, and there, in The Young Lady of Dorking, the Old Person of Sparta, in each of Lear's marvellous oddities, you have "a peep at an extraordinary specimen; each one perches, nests or struts about in courtship display, just like the toucans and parrots and other exotic birds."

It is interesting to discover that Arthur Rackham was asked to help with his special wild wood and old witch effects on Walt Disney's Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs in 1937. Rackham's pictures turn up nowadays, of course, on hundreds of posters and postcards, and if you look at those gnarled, enlarged hands and feet, those grotesque faces, if you take away the muted shades and substitute Disney's harsh color, then imagine those figures on the move ... no wonder Disney's witch was so terrifying.

Tenniel's illustrations for Alice, Feaver calls "stalwart", suggesting that he treated Alice as a lifelike wax-doll and the other characters as though they were ingenious clockwork models, probably German in origin. By setting up a number of intriguing ideas like this in the necessarily brief treatment of each subject, Feaver contrives to be entertaining without being superficial.

At the end of the essay, I was sorry it had to stop. In fact, although the title implies coverage up to the present day, the book clearly finishes at 1950, with the single, rather odd exception of a picture from Maurice Sendak's In the Night Kitchen (1971), which is not discussed in the text. What we now need is a companion volume to cover the last 25 years.

WHEN WE WERE YOUNG: Two Centuries of Children's Book Illustration, by William Feaver. Oxford. $4.95.

'Shock-headed Peter' by Heinrich Hoffmann

The Same Old Plot

By JULIAN REID

It begins with a peaceful, prosperous community where the good folk live in tranquil harmony — a modern version of the Earthly Paradise. Suddenly the peace is shattered by some monstrous evil. The people cower, helpless. Against this insidious threat to the common well-being, not even the official forces of Law and Order can prevail.

Enter the Hero. Spurning all temptations to stray from the path of righteousness, he embarks on a one-man crusade against evil. Finally, with some literally providential aid, he wipes it out in a climactic explosion of superhuman violence. Redeemed by his selfless courage, the whole community is miraculously restored to its former Edenic harmony.

Exit the Hero, fading back into the obscurity whence he came ...

Sound familiar? It should, because it's the archetypal story of what Robert Jewett and John Shelton Lawrence call The American Monomyth — the single basic plot which, in a multitude of variants, is the staple formula of U.S. TV-drama, movies, comic-strips, pulp-fiction, and popular entertainment in general. It is the mainstay of contemporary American dream-life. And with it, in her "Role as an international purveyor of mythic fantasies," she has infected Canada and the rest of the Americanized world.

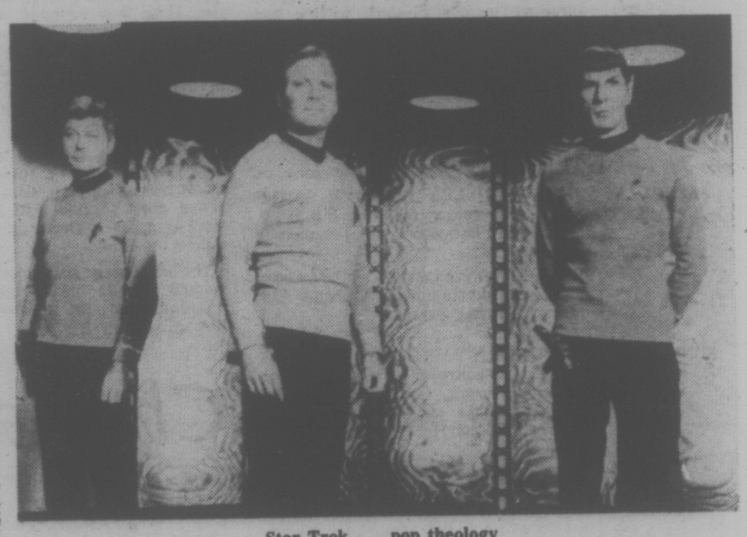
Increasingly, this adolescent power-fantasy is displacing the "classical monomyth" which, as Joseph Campbell demonstrated in The Hero With a Thousand Faces, once served as framework for myths and heroic sagas the world around. In it the hero undertook a perilous quest; his final triumphant return to hearth and home rounded off a profoundly stirring allegory of the universal human imperative "to move from childhood to maturity through 'the crooked lanes of his own spiritual labyrinth'."

In contrast, the new American monomyth supplants the ideal of individual maturation with the fantasy of collective redemption by a superhumanly selfless outsider. For all its secular trappings, Jewett and Lawrence point out, the conception is fundamentally religious. "The supersaviors in pop culture function as replacements for the Christ figure, whose credibility was eroded by scientific rationalism."

"Religion," suggest Jewett and Lawrence perspicuously, "may have merely changed its theatre and neglected to place its name on the marquee. The move from cathedral to the tube, screen, or stereo offers the faithful many of the values sought in traditional religion." And in the absence of formal churches, devotees band together in fan-clubs to share the communal sacraments and perform mass obeisance at the feet of their idols, the apotheosized performer-saints.

Take Star Trek, a program which inspires a literally religious devotion among hundreds of thousands of worshipful "Trekkies." "Many fans actually report personal redemptive experiences resulting from their encounters with the programs." And in a proliferating host of fan-publications, "a pop theology has emerged which elaborates and explains the assumptions and experience of Star Trek faith."

Star Trek, according to Jewett and Lawrence, is a quintessential embodiment of the American monomyth. The star-ship Enterprise consistently "acts as a galactic redeemer" — "a cosmic 'Mary Worth,'" as scriptwriter David Gerrold puts it, "meddling her way across the galaxy, solving problems as she goes, to spread truth, justice and the American way to the far corners of the universe." Captain Kirk represents a secular "Christ without passion," while his half-human Science Officer, Mr. Spock, "has definitely supplanted God" in the emerging "pop religion."



Star Trek ... pop theology

In less overt but perhaps more insidious ways, the authors see the American monomyth exerting its subtly pervasive influence on our psyches through such varied materials as TV-series like The Little House on the Prairie and The Six Million Dollar Man, vigilante-movies such as Death Wish and Walking Tall, Walt Disney cartoons, "catastrophe films" like Earthquake and Jaws, Lone Ranger and Superman comics, Playboy pictorials, and even the "underground comix" of cartoonist Robert Crumb.

Just how seriously should we take all this? Jewett and Lawrence belabor their thesis unmercifully, and their presentation is sententiously one-sided — though in places, perhaps unintentionally, it is also very funny. Yet, cumulatively, their case is discomfortingly strong; and its social and political implications are decidedly unsettling.

Above all, the authors insist, "the American monomyth is an escapist fantasy. It encourages passivity on the part of the general public and unwise concentrations of power in ostensible redeemers." And in those unwittingly caught up in its thrall, it gradually "erodes the ability to live in the present and awakens the yearning for total solutions offered by modern propagandists of redemption."

Building of Panana Canal
A Saga of Sordidness and Splendor

Apart from the two world wars, the building of the Panama Canal was the largest and costliest single effort ever mounted anywhere on earth, one that affected the lives of tens of thousands of people throughout the world. The recounting of this epic adventure calls for a large canvas and grandoise, dramatic and sweeping treatment, and that's precisely how David McCullough has handled it in The Path Between the Seas.

The building of a canal across the isthmus of Central America had been talked about since the 1820s, following the opening of the Caledonian and Erie canals. Two routes had been favored, one across Panama and the other across Nicaragua, but for more than 20 years neither got beyond the talking state.

Then, in 1848 gold was discovered in California and the routes to the new El Dorado, the stream-beds of the Sierra Nevada, were either across the Plains or round the Horn. The shortest route, however, lay through the untrodden jungles of the Panama isthmus. Hundreds of men survived the nightmare trek; hundreds more died in the attempt — from hunger, malaria, dysentery or yellow fever.

★ ★ ★

Railroad men, sensing quick and large profits, took advantage of a clause buried in a minor treaty the United States had signed with New Granada to ram a line across the Panama isthmus and, despite the majority opinion which favored the longer but easier Nicaragua route, it was this railroad which would finally determine the site of the isthmian Canal.

This essential scene-setting makes fairly dull reading, but McCullough wraps it up in 44 pages. And then, with the entrance of the first major personality involved, the book suddenly takes wings and from that point nothing short of an earthquake will divert the reader's attention until the whole lengthy narrative has been devoured.

The story now jumps to 1870, the recognized date of the birth of the Panama Canal, and to France, which had been humiliated by the surrender of its vaunted army to the Prussians at Sedan. Only one famous man remained untainted by the defeat: Ferdinand de Lesseps, builder of the Suez Canal and, because of that one feat, a hero of almost god-like proportion to all Frenchmen.

De Lesseps decided that the only way to resuscitate the glory of France would be to build another spectacular canal. After negotiating a treaty with Colombia, the overlord of New Granada (Panama), this charming braggart, who had never set eyes on Central America, announced that his canal would follow the route of the Panama railroad and would be at sea-level.

Financing was no problem. De Lesseps toured France and charmed millions of francs from thousands of small investors and in no time at all a large army of imported black laborers from the West Indies was digging its way through the disease-ridden jungle swamps of the forbidding isthmus.

The job was bungled from the start. Disease took a terrible toll; between 20 and 30 thousand men are said to have died, but we'll never know the correct figure because the bulk of them were blacks and the French only recorded the death of whites. Success demanded use of mechanical equipment that hadn't then been invented. Finally, the terrain precluded the building of a sea-level canal — and de Lesseps refused to entertain any other suggestion.

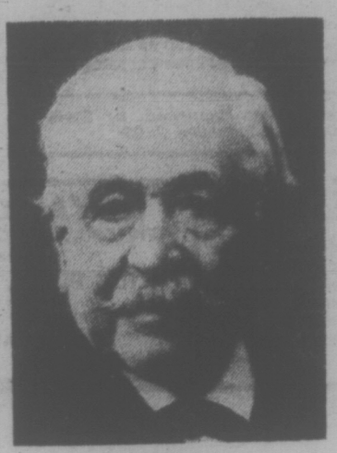
The work dragged on, more capital was raised by public subscription — more than one billion francs in all — and newspapers began hinting at financial scandals. Finally, in 1885, when he was 80, de Lesseps paid his first visit to the canal excavation sites. Even he, the perennial optimist, was convinced he had started something he couldn't finish.

De Lesseps kept up a front for another four years, and then the balloon went up. The canal wasn't even one-third completed; more money was needed and couldn't be raised; thousands of families had lost their life's savings; politicians, it transpired, had been liberally bribed to conceal the truth, and criminal go-betweens had managed to flee the country with enormous riches.

The story of the French effort, in all its splendor and sordidness, occupies 200 pages, and is packed with drama and vivid description, of the goings-on in France, the hellish conditions on the isthmus, and an intensely interesting cast of leading characters, notably the brilliant, egocentric French engineer Phillipe Bunau-Varilla.

The remainder of the book is devoted to the U.S. venture which, after tortuous beginnings, ended in success. At the outset, the Americans took note of the French disaster and decided that a canal was beyond the scope of private enterprise and must be a national undertaking, and that the French failure was a lesson in geography and the canal would have to be built in Nicaragua. Committees were formed, expeditions were sent out, but there were conflicting views, nothing was done and time rolled by.

In 1901 William McKinley was assassinated and Theodore Roosevelt became president. In his first message to Congress he urged the immediate building of an isthmian canal as an urgent priority. The eager Roosevelt meant business. Unlike de Lesseps, he ridiculed the idea of a canal as a dream of Columbus, a commercial venture, or a universal utility; he saw it as the indispensable path to a global destiny for the United States.



DE LESSEPS
. . . stubborn to end

With his vision of his country as the commanding power on two oceans, and these linked by a canal built, owned, operated, policed and fortified by his country, Roosevelt saw the canal as the key to American supremacy at sea. The energetic, enthusiastic and far-seeing president refused to be deterred by geographical problems or political obstructionists, with the result that the canal built in Panama at his behest must be seen as his greatest contribution to the U.S. and his enduring monument.

The tireless Roosevelt visited the site, the first American president to travel abroad. He ordered an army medical researcher to conquer yellow fever in four months — and it was done. He personally hired the brilliant John Stevens, as supreme engineering boss, and when Stevens quit several years later he was not forgiven and is not even mentioned in Roosevelt's memoirs. Finally, fed up with temperamental and expensive civilians, he ordered army engineers on army pay to complete the job, and they did, with such skill that their work, including the intricate locks, has stood the test of time and could not be improved upon today.

In all, the canal took 44 years to build. Ironically, its opening coincided with the outbreak of the First World War and the news was confined to the back pages!

David McCullough has done a superlative job with this dramatic story. The canal itself becomes a living thing, dominating even the larger-than-life characters who gave it being. Because of it France was rocked to its foundations, Colombia lost its most prized possession, the Isthmus of Panama; Nicaragua remained in limbo; the Republic of Panama was born following a U.S.-abetted revolution; the U.S. was embarked on a role of global involvement; signal advances were made in the history of finance capitalism and medicine, as well as engineering, government planning, and labor relations.

These are incidents, but then history is the sum total of incidents, and The Path Between the Seas is the way history should be presented — in this case as a supreme human achievement, with gold as the catalyst and naked power as the goal.

The Collected Sayings of Premier Ed

SCHREYER
. . . larger ambitions

By WALTER YOUNG

The appearance in print of a selection of speeches and interviews given by a provincial premier must surely be a sign of something more than a desire to make available to the unconcerned public a large gobbet of regional political wisdom. At the very least it is probably an indication that one publisher is prepared to believe that Canadians are able to face an important truth about Confederation: that provincial premiers are now as important as national prime ministers.

The views of Ed Schreyer on energy policy, inflation, and the place of Western Canada in the scheme of things are much more important to Canadians today than were the views of Manitoba's premiers in previous decades. (Come to that, who, apart from expatriate Manitobans, can even remember their names: Roblin, Campbell, Garson, Bracken . . .)

Another interpretation would be that the appearance of this book marks another step in the career of Mr. Schreyer out of provincial politics into something larger in scope. He has recently indicated a certain ennui where provincial politics are concerned and with that prescience for which political scientists are justly noted, he may sense that a new confederation around the corner might hold a larger role for Ed Schreyer. A refurbished Senate with power to speak for the regions might be an apposite forum for a man who has, perhaps more than his fellow western premiers, demonstrated a sensitivity for national issues as well as the more obvious regional ones.

The reader who works his way through this collection will discover Schreyer's awareness of broader issues as well as his ponderous oratorical style. A speech always loses something in print but it is doubtful that even Bruno Gerussi could breathe fire into these passages. It may be that no one can be fervent about freight rates but even on the gutsy issues like the South Indian Lake project, Premier Schreyer has as much zip as a log barge.

The dominant note is one of caution in all his statements. In the reprinted interviews he exhibits a mastery of the art of pinching off the buds of potential misinterpretation and emerges from these encounters as a very moderate social democrat, a position he describes as one that endorses the notion "that government is an instrument to be used by society to achieve certain ends to bring about certain objectives, initiate certain programs in order to protect people against exploitation in the market place, against exploitation by the zealous minority who over the decades have been able to indulge in a bit of successful exploitation of their fellow human beings." Few of us to the left of John Turner would disagree.

As well as the interviews the collection includes major Schreyer statements on matters of provincial and national interest. None of these are new and all reflect the moderate Schreyer position. It is a position that has upset the left wing of his own party from time to time and, on occasion, isolated him from his fellow western premiers. In many ways his politics express the unique character of Manitoba politics; not quite prairie and not quite Ontario. After all, a Manitoban is someone who is glad to be out of Ontario but sorry he had to go so far west to do it.

There is, of course, a third explanation for the appearance of this book. The Manitoba government must face the electorate by next spring and spreading the collected sayings of Premier Ed on the fields may help produce a good crop of votes come harvest time. One must say that the Schreyer brand is more chemical than organic and certainly not fast acting.

His Own Heartbreak Hotel

. . . Down at the end of Lonely Street that's Heartbreak Hotel

By BRYAN HAY

Those words, bounced through the then-new device of an echo chamber, provided the first worldwide exposure of a Memphis-based hillbilly singer in his early 20s named Elvis Aron Presley. The year was 1956 and the world in many ways was in a stagnant holding pattern.

There was peace of a sort — except in the Middle East — there was prosperity, after a fashion; there was, above all, a tight control by the Old Men everywhere. In Ottawa, Uncle Louis was ensconced at 24 Sussex Drive; in Washington, Grandpa Dwight was in control of the White House.

Even in the entertainment industry, the Old Men held sway.

The Big Bands were still limping along after 30 years; even the names of the popular singers had changed little since the end of the Second World War more than a decade earlier. But the winds of change were beginning to blow.

And their gentle breezes became a full-fledged Force Eight hurricane with the advent of Elvis Presley and some things have not been righted since.

The surly singer with the long, lank hair and peacock-hued clothes put his stamp on the mannerisms of a whole male generation; his on-stage gyrations set the ground rules for a generation of male performers. Mick Jagger's superqueen strut and flowing scarf are merely a refinement of Elvis' quivering left leg, shaking hips and billowing shirt.

Eventually, however, the phenomenon was translated into a legend.

The living part of that legend left this earth sometime on the morning of August 16, 1977, at the age of 42, as the result of a heart attack.

And, along with the eulogies and epitaphs came the epithets.

For more than 20 years, the public image and the private life of Elvis Presley had been as scrupulously segregated as the public schools in his native Tupelo, Mississippi.

The true story of the man behind the facade, known only to the closest members of his personal retinue, had been wondered at by fans and critics alike.

Little more than a year ago, tabloid gossip columnist Steve Dunleavy linked up with three former — and note the word former — members of Presley's private security force, at least two of whom had known the performer since high school days in Memphis, Tenn.

The book at hand is the result of Dunleavy's tape-recorded interviews with the trio.

Released just two weeks before the singer's death, the book has been rushed into further printings with advance orders flooding in for as many as three million copies.

It's a rattling good yarn this trio spins, and it's penned very professionally by a man whose life's work consists of making every word in a story carry a zing with an added punch packed into every paragraph.

ELVIS: What Happened, by Steve Dunleavy. Ballentine. $1.95.

As far as its veracity goes, however . . .

At the present moment, it is safest to say that the Presley mystique is still surrounded in mystery.

This particular package of drugs and degradation, pistols and passion, egomania and eccentricity has a place in its genre. That genre, however, is the one of pot-boiler star-gazing; not that of reputable biography.

The tale spun here is one guaranteed to shock as well as titillate . . . of drug overdoses, perversion, promiscuity and violence.

And, according to both sources and writer, superstar Presley lived his latter days in a Heartbreak Hotel of his own making — part Crystal Palace from his own drug use, part phobia of the public. A man who lived in almost as much seclusion as the late Howard Hughes. A man "who did not know the price of a slice of pizza in downtown L.A. or how much the average man paid for a shirt." A man who played parlor games with loaded pistols. A man who "was like a walking drugstore . . . from all that junk he took."

However, in summation, the devil is given his due:

Under the circumstances (they write) it would have been near impossible for a man like Presley, given his background, to come through life without his stability being threatened. Dirt-poor kids don't grow up in a tiny shack town and become millionaires before they are twenty-one every day of the week. Presley was a classic case of too much too soon.

Thus is the idol shattered. Sic transit gloria . . .

ELVIS PRESLEY . . . mystery remains

Occult View of Man

Man: A Machine. So the French philosopher Julien Offroy de la Mettrie boldly entitled a famous manifesto in 1747. And ever since, a dogmatically reductive materialism has dominated the Western approach to the human body and its nature.

The non-materialistic views espoused by the older, "esoteric" traditions tended to be dismissed as "superstition" and forgotten. Yet today it is becoming increasingly apparent that they were often quite valid. Many, indeed, have been unexpectedly verified by scientific investigators.

Thus Benjamin Walker's Man and the Beasts Within is a very welcome book. In encyclopedic format, it offers an ambitiously comprehensive survey of "the occult view of man in his totality," drawing on sources from all parts of the world and all the major esoteric traditions, and wherever possible relating them to recent scientific findings.

The 159 entries, each with its own bibliography, range from Acclivity (the diversion of sexual energy to attain mystical enlightenment) to Xenophrenia (a general term embracing any and all "altered states of consciousness"). In between are entries dealing with Astral Projection, Bisexuality, Cosmic Consciousness, Ectoplasm, Human Types, Menstruation, the Pineal Gland, Sensory Deprivation, Sex Magic, Telepathy, and many other topics.

Concisely informative, Man and the Beasts Within is a uniquely valuable reference-volume for anyone seriously concerned with the non-material dimensions of human nature.—J.R.
